The motto: Decoptus Florio, found on some ancient Coats of Arms, has in modern times been written Decaptus Floreo, and, with some, the old form gives way to Decarptus Floreo—all having as a central idea—"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again."

The reader's attention is invited to elementary points and fundamental steps, which need special examination, serious reflection and unwavering decision at the very threshold of genealogical pursuits.

Previously to naming a subject of divergence, let us say a few words in general, in which all will probably agree.

As man from his incipient existence, in passing through successive stages, is furnished with organs and apparatus adapted to the changing conditions of life, so the human race, in its progressive stages from generation to generation, finds or invents new agencies requisite for its forward strides on higher platforms of humanity.

Man, in his modes of development, in his growth and decay, and in many of his acts, is in strong analogy with animals ; while from them he is undeniably and unmistakably separated by his knowledge of ancestors, and by his ability to transmit in forms legible to posterity a record of his own experience.

The grand characteristic of man is his ability to transmit, to read and to utilize this experience. Discoveries in sciences, physical and metaphysical, of one generation, thus become the inheritance of all succeeding generations. In doing the best acts possible in our several callings and walks of life and in making the best possible record for posterity, we do but pay a debt surely due to our ancestors.

The obligation here named presents TWO DEPARTMENTS : that of doing and that of recording.

Fulton, Morse, and a host of other illustrious benefactors, and a still greater number of faithful laborers in every useful science or art belong to the first class—the doers.

Irving, Prescott, and many other eminent writers, and a still greater number of diligent chroniclers of discoveries, inventions and noble deeds belong to the second class ; both classes honorably laboring for the welfare of the living, as a reward to ancestors, who regard the present from the heights of venerable antiquity.

Both classes, the doers and the recorders, work in honor of ancestors and for the good of posterity.

We read in the account of the recent sporting excursion on our western prairies, that the Grand Duke Alexis selected a single buffalo as an object of pursuit, instead of chasing the herd as a whole. Thus, would we attain to a clear view of the life and experience of the early settlers of any country, we should select individuals, and, in imagination, enter with them into their families, going with them in forest, field and town, and placing ourselves in intimate sympathy with them in their various walks of life.

In like manner let us view the development of families from the early settlement of New York, Albany, Plymouth, Springfield, Boston and other towns, through successive generations to the present time. These serial biographies, or rather, these genealogical and biographical memorials put in parallels; i. e., pursued and represented simultaneously, by charts, diagrams or records, will become generous mines, yielding abundant materials for the historian.

These component and organic elements may be easily brought into co-ordinate harmony by the historic brain and hand.

Biography is more than the handmaid of history. It is the substratum, the bone and sinew; or rather, biography is to history what the heart, lungs and other organs are to the human frame.

In this connexion, I beg to speak a little, in parenthesis, on two words having in their signification, if not in their etymology, instructive analogies, viz., histology and history. In histology (the science of tissues), we recognize the vital action of each cell, each fibre, and every modification of their net-work and finished tissues forming the frame work, all working singly and in combination to make the human body complete.

In history, we deal with a net-work of ideas, revolving not merely as cells, threads and tissues of a mortal, physical body; but in their stead we have elemental circles, links and chains of knowledge—ideas present to the mind singly and in combination, standing as living verities; forming under the imagination and the reason a warp and woof more perfect than Gobelín tapestries—a texture which grows not by the decay of some elements, and their replacement by others,—a system of living textures forming a perpetually flowing body, flowing away from material finite bounds, to the spirits of the present and successive generations. It was in accordance with this philosophic view, that the ancients formed the word history from roots signifying, not merely ideas standing as a histologic web, but as ideas flowing, flowing, flowing to the reward of ancestors, to the welfare of the living in present time, as well as to the benefit of posterity.

During a recent visit to Boston, for the purpose of collecting records of descendants of Pilgrim and Puritan ancestors, including those of the descendants of Edward^A Winslow of Droitwich, England, whose sons were among the early settlers of Plymouth and Boston, Mass., I called upon a highly respected citizen, a descendant of Mary¹ Winslow, granddaughter of the said Edward^A. Of course the children of Mary¹ Winslow bore the surname of her husband, and her grand-daughter's descendants bore the several names of their respective fathers. The honorable descendant of Mary² Winslow was a scholar and a gentleman. His manuscript notes and charts of the genealogies of his ancestors of the Winslow and other lines prove his personal interest in the subject. His minute and general knowledge, and his ordinary good judgment certainly predispose us to give great weight to his views on the subject of publishing genealogies of successive generations, as descendants through females intermarried with those of other surnames. He did not approve of a system which, under the title of Winslow Genealogy, should include himself and his children; though he, in fact, bears the same degree of kinship to Edward^A Winslow aforesaid, that he bears to his patronymic ancestor, of a correspondingly past generation.

Here begins one point of divergence. The one party, which for greater facility we designate pater-lineal, would write genealogies limited to lines bearing the patronymic of a male ancestor.

The other party, which for convenience we designate ambi-lineal, i. e., pater-mater-lineal, would present the records of descendants of a common ancestor, including those bearing the patronymic, and also those of equal kinship to said ancestor, though of female lines and changed names.

The theory of the first named part is, that a family history should be built on the plan of confining the notation to the bearers of the family name; to the male lines. They say: let family feelings have full power; let the possessors of a common name draw closer the ties of kindred.

Surely this statement of the point of divergence is unmistakably put in language clear and concise; but in our view, the creed which supports this pater-lineal platform, contains a patho-logical shibboleth for membership of a genealogical family—a “close communion” test—unsuited to the present age.

The new-born son or daughter is, physiologically speaking, the representative of father and mother; and is in its being the fulfillment of the Scripture declaration: “And they twain shall be one flesh.”

This may have a social interpretation applicable to the married pair; but the strict physiological import of this text is, that the child is the one flesh which erst wastwain.

In Holy Writ we read: “So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female created He them. And God blessed them and God said unto them: ‘Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it.’”

Physiological facts, harmonizing with the precepts of our holy religion, teach us unmistakably and authoritatively that a father and mother of equal personal merits, leaving old England;—say, in the Mayflower of Plymouth, or the Half-moon of Manhattan, are equally entitled to honor from their children and posterity. In

There were many cheap, private schools in Massachusetts and Connecticut, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, kept by "dames" in their own rooms, where girls were instructed to read and sew, and, in some, small boys were taught to read. Writing was considered much less important, and it was not judged necessary that females in common life should learn to write.

Some of the newer towns settled in the last century were more liberal than the old ones in schooling the girls. Many of the old towns were long remiss. Boston did not permit females to attend the public schools till 1790, and Northampton did not admit them into the town schools till 1802 ! It was an unheard of thing for girls to be instructed by a master, in Ipswich, Mass., till about 1769. Even in these latter times the mother and her daughters and their descendants in the line of daughters are kept in the background; while the husband, sons, and their descendants in the line of sons are placed in honor by Christian genealogists.

Thanks to God for giving vision to the blind, and understanding to those dull of comprehension; so that now the correct interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, and the right application of the doctrines of Christianity harmonize with the revelations of physiology in defining the position of woman. The shackles of her thralldom are so far dissolved, that the present generation looks with incredulity upon the past neglect and wrong inflicted upon her.

It is with great pleasure we state, that the late Chancellor Walworth, in his great work, the "Hyde Genealogy," nobly honored the memory of his mother, APPHIA HYDE, and that of his great-great-grand-mother, Mary Winslow, by tracing their ancestry and all their descendants down to the latest-born at the date of the publication of his large volumes, which now stand and will stand as witnesses that the world yet moves—in favor of the mater-lineals!

In the same category with this work of Chancellor Walworth, do we place the recent work of our fellow-laborer, Rev. Benjamin-Woodbridge Dwight, the "Strong Genealogy," written in honor of his mother, Sophia-W. Strong, her ancestors and their descendants, in both male and female lines.

It is probable the reverend gentleman may, on some occasion, have selected as a text for his people, Deut. xxvii.—16, "Cursed be he that setteth light by his father or his mother; and all the people shall say, Amen." In a former text quoted, honoring the mother is declared a virtue with reward; here, setting light by the mother is pronounced a crime, subject to punishment.

The works of Chancellor Walworth, Rev. Mr. Dwight, and other mater-lineal genealogists harmonize with the doctrine of these and many other analogous texts of Scripture.

But it is said: if every one is to be recorded in each genealogy to which he can be traced by any line of descent, he must be recorded in over one hundred families, even in the eight generations covered by New York or New England History.

Yes, forsooth, pater-linealists, keeping full records of sons, sons' sons, and their sons' sons down the long stream of successive generations, and omitting to keep any records of the descendants in female lines—or at most, of only one female to a hundred males—and then, having data on one side only, and closing their eyes to the other class, triumphantly speak of a comparison.

In contrast with the doctrine of the pater-linealists, hear ye what saith the Scriptures: “Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.”

Also, in the Biblical account of Creation, we observe that the Lord first formed inorganic materials not endowed with life. Secondly: He formed the vegetable kingdom, endowed with the power of appropriating these inorganic bodies to their own growth and life functions, and to the progressive transformations of inorganic matters into products suited to the needs of a higher order of creation. Thirdly: He formed animals requiring for their sustenance the compounds and products of vegetable life. Fourthly: He made man, requiring for his highest development both vegetable and animal products.

We thus learn the order of Creation; and that the primary forms are bases for a secondary and higher class; and from that order we infer the relative degree of perfection in the objects and beings created.

Without doubting the power of God to have chosen a different order of Creation, it is sufficient for us to see what His chosen order was, as revealed in the Bible, an order which perfectly harmonizes with what the physiologist sees in progressive stages of life-forms, now to prevail.

Finally: The Lord created woman; and, profiting by the rule thus far observed, we might infer her superiority to man. The highest civilization of the ancients placed woman mistress only of housework and domestic arts, and though admitted to the friendship of her husband, she was not an equal participant in receiving guests. Her husband would have been dishonored, in their eyes, by her equal participation at the festive board. Clouds of ignorance, prejudice and injustice for thousands of years darkened the minds of men. Slowly have those clouds been diminishing in density and extent. Slowly has social equality of woman to man been progressively and approximately admitted.

It is within the memory of those now living, that girls for the first time were admitted to public schools in Boston.

Mr. Sylvester Judd, whose historical researches are generally found to be correct, says: The laws of Massachusetts Colony and the votes of towns, relating to schools, used the word “children,” and did not exclude females; yet it is abundantly evident that girls did not ordinarily continue to attend the town schools many years, in the old towns. There was no controversy on the subject; it seems to have been considered unnecessary that girls should be instructed in public schools.

There were many cheap, private schools in Massachusetts and Connecticut, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, kept by "dames" in their own rooms, where girls were instructed to read and sew, and, in some, small boys were taught to read. Writing was considered much less important, and it was not judged necessary that females in common life should learn to write.

The works of Chancellor Walworth, Rev. Mr. Dwight, and other mater-lineal genealogists harmonize with the doctrine of these and many other analogous texts of Scripture.

But it is said: if every one is to be recorded in each genealogy to which he can be traced by any line of descent, he must be recorded in over one hundred families, even in the eight generations covered by New York or New England History.

This is the very point for which we contend. Our immigrant ancestors, fathers and mothers, together braved the dangers of ocean and forest, wild beasts and savage Indians. They mutually shared in the hardships of pioneer life, and in the common struggles of the early colonies, and in the rearing of families. Trials and sufferings they endured in the hope of securing not merely a home for themselves,—but a home and institutions of freedom, and religion for their offspring. This hope applied to their daughters as well as to their sons, and extended to generations that should be born to them.

If the father of Mary Winslow above-named has, as his descendants, several hundred families, of whom one hundred, being the descendants of the said Mary, bear one hundred different surnames, and some pious descendant of hers should now undertake to write her biography and the genealogy of her descendants, then these one hundred families would ALL be equally included. They would of course severally bear to Mr. Winslow, the father of Mary, the same degree of consanguinity that a son having the patronymic, Winslow, of any generation correspondingly equidistant, would bear to the said father.

Thus much for a genealogy in the descending scale—genealogical records or tracings by chart or otherwise from ancestors down to the youngest twigs in both male and female lines.

We confess it is not the duty of all persons to systematically or zealously attend to genealogical matters; and of those who do write genealogies, it is not necessarily the duty of every author to survey minutely all the branches of ascending and descending lines of ancestry and posterity. Circumstances may enable a person, with great facility, to collect facts in one line which would be entirely inaccessible to another writer. The motto of Genealogists should be:

Cultivate well the field undertaken, and leave to others what they will do better.

Thus, a resident of Windsor or Lyme, Connecticut, undertaking to write the genealogy of the Griswold family of that State, would naturally begin with Edward Griswold, of Kenilworth, England, and give the full record of his children who came to America, and that of their children and grand-children. In his records of the fourth generation in America, he would come to Phebe^a Griswold, the sister of Gov. Matthew^a Griswold, of Lyme. He would find this Phebe^a, married, 14 Dec. 1731, the Rev. Jonathan^b Parsons, born at West Springfield, Mass., the celebrated Divine of Newburyport, and the friend of George Whitefield. At this point of our author's records of the Griswold family, should he learn that the family of Phebe^a and her husband, Rev. Dr. Jonathan^b Parsons, is being very thoroughly written by one who from residence or relationship has a predilection to study the genealogy of the Parsons family, and who, from his location, or from inherited or acquired records, has special facilities for making a Parsons Memorial, including complete records of the descendants of the said Phebe⁴ Griswold, the two genealogists might become co-laborers. While the author from Lyme may feel an interest in *Phebe*⁴ and her descendants, equal to that which he feels for her brother, Gov. Matthew,⁴ he may nevertheless avail himself of the results of his co-laborer, giving him due credit, and embody the records of Phebe⁴ and her descendants in his Griswold genealogy; or, at his election, he may deliberately refer his readers to her records as found in the Parsons Genealogy, published or about to be published. By such reference, he in no manner ignores Phebe's rights and the rights of her descendants of whatever name to an equal representation in the said Griswold Memorial.

In like manner, if some other author has specially studied the family records of *Thomas*⁴ Griswold or of any other brother of Phebe⁴, and Mathew⁴, and has published or is about to publish them, a similar reference by the author from Lyme may be made with equal propriety,—(but not with greater,) than in the case of the sister Phebe⁴. Edward Griswold and his wife, of Kenilworth, England, common ancestors of these families, had they been endowed with a foreknowledge of their descendants in America, would have been unwilling to have had stricken from view the career of their daughters and their offspring represented in those distinguished Connecticut families—Hillhouse, Bushnell, Elliott, McCurdy—and others in whom the said Edward and his wife are now represented by ties of consanguinity equal, if not superior, to those in the so-called direct male line of Griswolds.

Our subject may receive illustration from another stand-point, showing the truth of the theory of mater-linealists and ambi-linealists, and the justice of their practice.

This stand-point presents to view an ASSOCIATION OF ANCESTORS in diverging lines, commencing at some given point comparatively recent, and increasing in a two-fold ratio (excepting the cases of consanguineous intermarriages), as the ascent is made from generation to generation towards the maximum of divergence¹; at which point, by reason of consanguineous intermarriages, the outer lines of the series approximate (inversely analogous to the aforesaid divergence)—the number of ancestors regularly diminishing, till ALL terminate in our first parents, the happy pair in the Garden of Eden². The first section of this Association of Ancestors, presented to view from this stand-point, containing five generations, is denominated the "SEIZE QUARTIERS."

Dr. Stiles, speaking of the "Classification of Genealogies" says: "The 'Seize Quartiers' (or literally, the sixteen heads, from which one derives his descent) is that which involves the equal consideration of all progenitors of equal degrees and generations. It is the system which has generally obtained throughout the conti-ment of Europe, and which I believe is growing rapidly in favor among American genealogists.”

For additional remarks of Dr. Stiles on the “Seize Quartiers,” reference is respectfully made to Vol. 2, page 75, of the N. Y. Genealogical and Biographical Record. In Vol. 1, No. 4, of the Record, may be found, on page 26th, an article, by our fellow-laborer, Rev. Beverley-R. Betts, illustrating the use of the word Quarter, and Quartering in marshalling arms. He says: “A very important part of Heraldry in this country is included under the head of Marshalling. This, in its strict meaning, is the arranging of several coats in one shield, according to certain laws, for the purpose of showing the descent of the person who bears them; but involves also the explaining and elucidating such shields or achievements, when they are formed.¹ This is one way in which the intimate connection of Armoury and Genealogy is shown. An achievement may be a guide to a forgotten pedigree. A pedigree may explain the mysteries of an achievement, or may give the means of constructing one.”

Again we quote from Dr. Stiles: “The end and scope of genealogists in this country is for the most part very different from those published on the European continent. There the endeavor of such studies is to connect one’s self with noble and distinguished families, or to ascertain rights to titles and estates. But here we find our American genealogists true to the American theory, that every man is to be measured by his own worth and works.”

We are of St. Paul’s way of thinking, who, far from ignoring ancestral virtues, recited to Timothy the graces he inherited from his mother Eunice and grandmother Lois; and, at the same time, like a sensible man, cautioned him against relying on such or any inheritance as a substitute for honorable personal acts. St. Paul seems to have been reciting the graces found in the maternal line of ancestry, and saying not a word about paternal lines. Our pater-linealist brethren cannot claim St. Paul.

Holy Writ, both in the Old and New Testament, abounds in genealogical record: but, it will be observed, none go beyond our first earthly parents, as created by the Lord.

Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? Job xi, 7.

In view of the majesty and infinity of God, the Creator, St. Paul gives a caution against extending genealogical researches beyond the finite; i. e. beyond Adam and Eve. He cautioned against going to the infinite, to the endless—for surely “endless” as applied to a serial progression, from generation back to generation, can rest only in God.

We plead therefore, from all considerations, for the untrammelled PRIVILEGE of genealogists, mater-linealists, pater-linealists, and ambi-linealists, without professional censure, to exercise their powers, according to their several opportunities, in the discharge of a pious duty, in paternal and maternal aspects. But whoever publishes a book of genealogies containing only the descendants in male lines of the patronymic, should add to the title some qualifying word, implying the partial scope embraced; otherwise, if the record commences with the great, great grandfather (there being no consanguineous intermarriages), the title might lack fifteen-sixteenths of being true; for certainly only one-sixteenth part of the blood of great, great grand children, is referable to the patronymic ancestor of the fifth ascending generation.

It has been said, that in an ambi-lineal book, the reference numbers, or serial numbers, should be limited to members bearing the patronymic—that, if the female lines are regularly given, these should be outside of the serial numeration.

We have already, in anticipation, replied to this back-ground position; and, without misgivings, claim for them an equal and concurrent enumeration.

Thanks to the Arabs for their easy flowing numeration and figures!

In these days of steamboats, electric telegraphs and Yankee notions—elevated, arcade and underground railroads, shame to us genealogists, if we fail to devise and execute some mode, plan or system by which references shall be easy and sure; and, by which, in a summary, or otherwise, the total of the patronymic, as well as the total of recorded descendants bearing other names, may be clearly seen in tabular or other form.

Under the conviction that the claims for genealogical development, pater-lineal and mater-lineal are equal, we do, nevertheless, somewhat modify our METHOD in publishing in one volume the two classes of records.

While, in male lines bearing the patronymic, we place in one and the same subdivision those of a generation equidistant from the immigrant ancestor, we do, in the case of a daughter, for convenience, give in immediate succession, in a pendulous way, her descendants through successive generations. After which we return to give, by a system of classified generations, the records of her brother or of another member in the order of birth in that or the succeeding generations.

This we do in some cases to gratify the descendants of said daughter, on their subscribing for the book; and, also, for a separate edition of the consecutive pages of the said pendulous development. This is illustrated in the treatment of the records of the youngest daughter of Job^s Winslow, (Elizabeth^s) and her descendants, from serial number 341 to 670; also, in the records of the daughter of Kenelm¹ Winslow, Eleanor², who married Samuel Baker, whose descendants may desire not only to procure copies of the MEMORIAL VOLUME, but to have their branch of the same, printed and bound, detached from the series.

To meet such a purpose the serial numbers of this offshoot begin with unity, necessitating that our general index shall, for this portion, refer to the Appendix page as well as to the serial number. [See Appendix p. 34].

In Hartford, Conn., at the sixty-seventh annual meeting of the Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the opening sermon was by Rev. Dr. Wm. M. Taylor of the New York Broadway Tabernacle, from which is made the following extract:

“The family is the centre of human society. We cannot look upon mankind as merely a multitude of units. None of us stands completely by himself, for each of us is born into a little circle already existing. As Maurice has said, ‘Our relation to father and mother is the primary fact of our existence, so that we can contemplate no facts apart from that.’ The family is the earliest school at which we are placed; and the lessons which we receive in the household, the examples which are there set before us, above all, perhaps, the influences to which we are there subjected and by which we are unconsciously affected, have more to do with our after history as individuals, and with the future character of the community to which we belong, than we can possibly estimate. ‘Home is the head of the river,’ and an influence, whether blessed or pernicious, exerted there, will affect all its after course.

“Now, it is capable of the clearest proof that Christianity is the only thing that has given purity and loveliness to the household. Indeed, in its true ideal, the family may be said to have been virtually the creation of Christianity, for, in Rome which was the heir of civilization of the ages, and in which it is commonly conceded that men had attained the highest degree of refinement which has been reached without revelation, there was little home-life worthy of the name. The words of a living English theologian on this point are not more dreadful than true; ‘Familia, to the ear of a Roman, meant, a multitude of idle, corrupt, and corrupting slaves, kept in subjection by the cross and the ergastulum, ready for every treachery, and reeking with every vice. It meant a despot who could kill his slaves when they were aged, and expose his children when they were born; it meant matrons among whom virtue was rare, divorces frequent, re-marriage easy, and who, from no motive stronger than that of vanity, would sacrifice the lives of their infants yet unborn; it meant children, spectators from their infancy of insolence, cruelty, servility, and sin.' This being the case, even in Rome, we need not wonder at the state of things that existed, and does yet largely exist, in heathen lands. Wherever the Gospel has not gone, woman has been degraded into a slave and ground down beneath the galling tyranny of her husband. The barbarian of the east and the savage of the west have been alike in that, they have driven the weakest to the wall, and she who was designed to be the help-meet of her companion, sharing his cares, doubling his joys, and throwing a halo for him round his home, has been trampled under the hoof of cruelty and branded with the scars of violence. Then as to the little children, who shall tell us how many holocausts of victims infanticide has burned upon its altars. While as regards the aged, it would be impossible to reckon the number of them who have been left to starve in the desert, or to perish by the river side.

I may be told, indeed, that such things as these are not quite unknown among ourselves. I may be reminded of the brutality of drunken husbands and the cold-heartedness of children to their parents, of which we have the records occasionally in our public prints. But the cases are unparralleled. That which is the rule in Pagan lands is the exception here. That which among the heathen is nothing accounted of, is here viewed with abhorrence and regarded as a crime."

This Memorial Work is peculiarly called for this Centennial Year.*

* In the order of Providence, initial forms of great simplicity prevail in the growth of plants and animals, in obedience to primal law.

This law dominates material elements under all circumstances of progressive vitality.

From primal cells in vegetable and animal growth, the plant and being pass by cycles from the inferior to the superior forms of existence. Each cycle in the individual is composed of many combinations of concurrent or consecutive acts harmoniously grouped for unity of result, and limited in conformity to the hereditary law of its species.

National existence is a combination of cycles.

The primary acts and forms of the first half century gave character to the four succeeding. The seed of the Mayflower, under modifications by external influences the past two hundred and fifty years, has developed in progressive cycles, in which the law of adherence to types is manifest.

* * * * *

We speak of the compound value of the Arabic numerals. Let the Mayflower unit in a ten or hundred fold ratio extend its expanding stocks, branches, leaves, flowers and fruits. Let subsequent centennials be high multiples of primal virtues.

Twenty-five years may be assumed as the period of one generation. May future genealogists, in their groupings of the next ten generations, find virtues developed in a higher ratio than that which has prevailed in the past. May the grasp of mind on mind and matter be increased a hundred fold ere the coming of the next Centennial Year.

The present Centennial of the Independence of the United States, has been the occasion of putting forth increased energy in various departments of literature, science, and arts; and especially in those of genealogy, biography and history.

While the nation is reviewing and seeking to commemorate and perpetuate its early history, is it not fitting that individuals included in this memorial should honor the memory of their ancestors, who were among the founders of the nation, by setting apart the sum requisite to secure the book as a centennial offering?

Allow us to make a few explanatory remarks in this preface in regard to the Classification of Records. In natural objects are found structures based on various types. This diversity of types and their wonderful modifications illustrate the power of the Creator, and do at the same time gratify and develop intelligences able to appreciate them. Let not the diversity of classifications adopted by genealogists be a subject of regret. From this variety, annually increasing, we may hope some future writer will be able to select the excellencies of all, and present a SYSTEM, which may thereafter be uniformly adopted. Of the various genealogical arrangements used in England and America, the two which claim our present consideration, are: First, the classification by numerical generations. This arrangement of a book in divisions, each one of which shall be limited to the records of the descendants embraced in some one generation, may include in the same division many found not to be cotemporaries. Second, the clustered grouping in direct lines of consanguinity. In this volume we adopt the first arrangement, when writing of descendants bearing as surnames that of the ancestor, who is the leading subject of the work; and the second, when treating of descendants in the female line not bearing the patronymic—both methods being modified as hereinafter stated, and for reasons which will be apparent in the occasions calling for the combination of the two. We commence with a given ancestor (¹), presenting biography more or less limited, and a short statement of his children (²), as seen in one group. [For our system of American and trans-oceanic notation see Appendix]. In giving this short account of the children (²) in the second generation, the dates of birth and death of the daughters are mentioned; and, if married, the names of their husbands. They are then referred for further development in the same manner as their brothers. The oldest child, if a son, would be developed as his father had been before him. Supposing the next child to have been a daughter, a full account of her and her husband would be given; then a short statement of their children. Now instead of returning to her brothers and sisters and taking up the next in order, we limit ourselves to her own family, beginning with her oldest child, and giving, as far as known, a full account of all the descendants, making a first development, if required, that is, referring them, as in her own case in the early generations. We then return to her second child to be developed, going through a similar process, and so on, until this female line is finished.

We now go back to the second generation and take up the son or daughter whose development is next in order, recording the sons of the patronymic, as their fathers have been, and the daughters as in the case instanced above. This cluster system is peculiarly adapted to parties out of the patronymic; as thus an intermixture of names is to some extent avoided. It can also be used in the records of descendants bearing the patronymic, when treating of later generations; as it is sometimes preferable that the grandchildren of the present date should appear in connection with their grandparents.

We acknowledge the use of the clustral or pendulous system may sometimes be objectionable in the records of the earlier generations of those bearing the patronymic, as it tends so widely to separate the history of the descendants of brothers.

We are sure neither one of the two systems can singly compass all the objects desired in a work including an equal development of both male and female lines. Having therefore selected from the many systems employed by genealogists, the two before mentioned we have endeavored by their combination to arrange our records in a more desirable form than either, taken separately, would allow.

Should errors and omissions be found in this Pilgrim Record Series, the reader is desired to consider that in some cases discrepancies exist between the items furnished by families and those found in town, probate, county, and state records; also between those furnished by different members of the same family. Errors may likewise arise from the incorrect interpretations of illegible writing.

Although much valuable information has been collected by personal visitation, it could not be expected that we should ourselves inspect all original sources; while friends to the work having access to such fountains, and having the ability to draw therefrom, have in some instances, postponed their needed co-operation, till from proof sheets or the bound volume they perceive awful chasms, which they could in some cases have prevented.

Parties discovering such omissions in Vol. I may have the additions placed in an Appendix to a subsequent volume.

We desire to express our thanks for the researches generously proffered by several correspondents; also to those who have united in an advance payment to secure the publication of one volume; and we hopefully look for a continuance of that aid, and for an enlargement of the circle of co-operators, till the remaining eleven volumes of the series are issued from the press.

We would particularly thank John^r Winslow, Esq., of 54 William Street, New York, who kindly officiated as the invited trustee of the advance publication fund. (He is again invited to perform a similar act of kindness in regard to Vol. II and subsequent volumes). To him, also, special thanks are due for his valuable contributions to the introductory chapter.

To Rev. William-Copley^r Winslow, 429 Beacon Street, Boston, we tender our grateful acknowledgment for the loan of genealogical manuscripts left by his father, Rev. Dr. Hubbard^e Winslow, and by his brother, Rev. Kenelm^r Winslow, and for biographies of several members of the family; also to Miss Margaret-Catherine^r Winslow, of Perkins Street, Boston Highlands, for the records of her father, Isaac^e Winslow, Esq., merchant, of Boston.

By special indulgence of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, 18 Somerset street, Boston, its valuable library has been open to us, and its hall for a reception room free to all disposed to honor our work by personally bringing family records and by comparing our manuscripts with their own.

Impressed with the need of an institution in New York City similar to the one in Boston, we issued seventy-six letters, inviting those whom we regarded as being interested in genealogical studies to meet, 27 Feb. 1869, in our parlor, at 124 West 54th st., for the formation of the NEW YORK GENEALOGICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY. Through this organization and the personal kindness and aid of its members, we found our purposes enlarged and our zeal increased.

Subsequently, in our late study at Great Jones street, was organized the "PILGRIM RECORD SOCIETY."

These two metropolitan societies are prosperously enlisted, each in their specific sphere—the one not losing an iota of our affection, gratitude, and support, because of the existence of the other—both harmoniously promoting the interests of genealogy, the former holding its regular sessions at 64 Madison Avenue, the second and fourth Wednesday evenings, and the latter at 61 East 59th street, the second Tuesday evenings of each month.

The compiler of a work of this nature is of necessity largely dependent on outside sources of information, and it would be impossible to enumerate all the books from which items have been obtained, or to give the names of all to whom we are indebted for assistance. We have, however, endeavored to give due credit when extracts have been made from works of various authors; and now desire to render our acknowledgments to all those embraced in our Memorials who have devoted time and money to the completion of the records of the branch of the family to which they belong; also to those who from their general interest in the subject have rendered us valuable services.

In the Appendix will be found additional records of several branches of the Winslow family, which were received too late for publication in their proper place. Among these may be mentioned:

Descendants of Rev. Isaiah^a and Abigail^a (Winslow) Lewis [1746]; of Jedediah^a Winslow [1198]; of John and Elizabeth^b (Winslow) Marshall [341]; of James and Abigail^c (Winslow) Critchett [5554]; of Enoch and Charity^b (Winslow) Judson [7173]; of Shadrach^b Winslow, M.D. [5011]; of Benjamin and Miriam^a (Winslow) Parsons [3803]. The Ruggles family and the descendants of Samuel and Eleanor^b (Winslow) Baker [18] will also appear in the Appendix, together with chronological and genealogical tables and other matter.

On page 656 will be found a statement of errata, to which the reader is invited to add others when discovered, and forward to us copies of the same.

On page 635 may be seen a table of abbreviations used in this work. In the Appendix will be offered a METHOD IN GENEALOGY.

On page 653 is given a catalogue of Charts, to which have been added the Job^s Winslow Radial Chart, facing page 100, and the Joel^s Holton Radial Chart, facing page 322. These last two are samples of the 500 which we are now prepared to execute, whenever they may be severally or collectively ordered by parties therein embraced, or by some one person appreciating the magnitude of the proposed large folio volume, in honor of ancestry and for the benefit of posterity, gracefully presenting the pedigree of many of the Pilgrim Fathers and Mothers and that of their descendants.

On page 653 commences a list of authors, correspondents, public records, and other authorities. It imperfectly shows the extent of our obligation to others for the facts in this book.

For the co-operation of town clerks and other public officers, and for the faithful and efficient assistance of the clerks of our genealogical studio, we tender our thanks. We duly appreciate the care and painstaking of our compositors and printers.

For our errors and shortcomings we ask the charitable consideration of the public, and for the sake of our greater works in progress, we bespeak a liberal co-operation.

On the preceding page and a half, are found the concluding paragraphs of the Preface to the "WINSLOW MEMORIAL"; below is given an announcement of our removal, 1877.

DR. HOLTON'S GENEALOGICAL STUDIO,

Removed 1 May, 1877 to 61 East 59th st., near the Fifth av. entrance to Central Park, New York, midway between Park and Madison Avenues.

By this removal the studio becomes very accessible, as citizens and visitors in the Metropolis make the Central Park a place of frequent resort; and those interested in our genealogical researches, charts, and other publications, can doubtless give us a passing call at 61 East 59th street more conveniently than at any other point in New York City.

We are but a few doors from the line of the MADISON AVENUE cars running through the central portion of the city.

On 59th street, in front of our door, pass the cars of the "BELT RAILROAD," from all the ferry and other steamboat landings on the Hudson and East rivers, south of 59th street.

The cars of the Second, Third, Fourth, and Eighth Avenues, cross 59th street; those of University Place, of the Sixth, Seventh, and Ninth Avenues, and of the Elevated Railroad, terminate at 59th street.

The cars of East and West 59th street, pass our door.

Those interested in our works, on reaching their respective landings and depots in this city, may find it convenient directly to call at the studio, 61 East 59th street, thus honoring the memory of their ancestors, leaving trifles of the present for subsequent consideration.

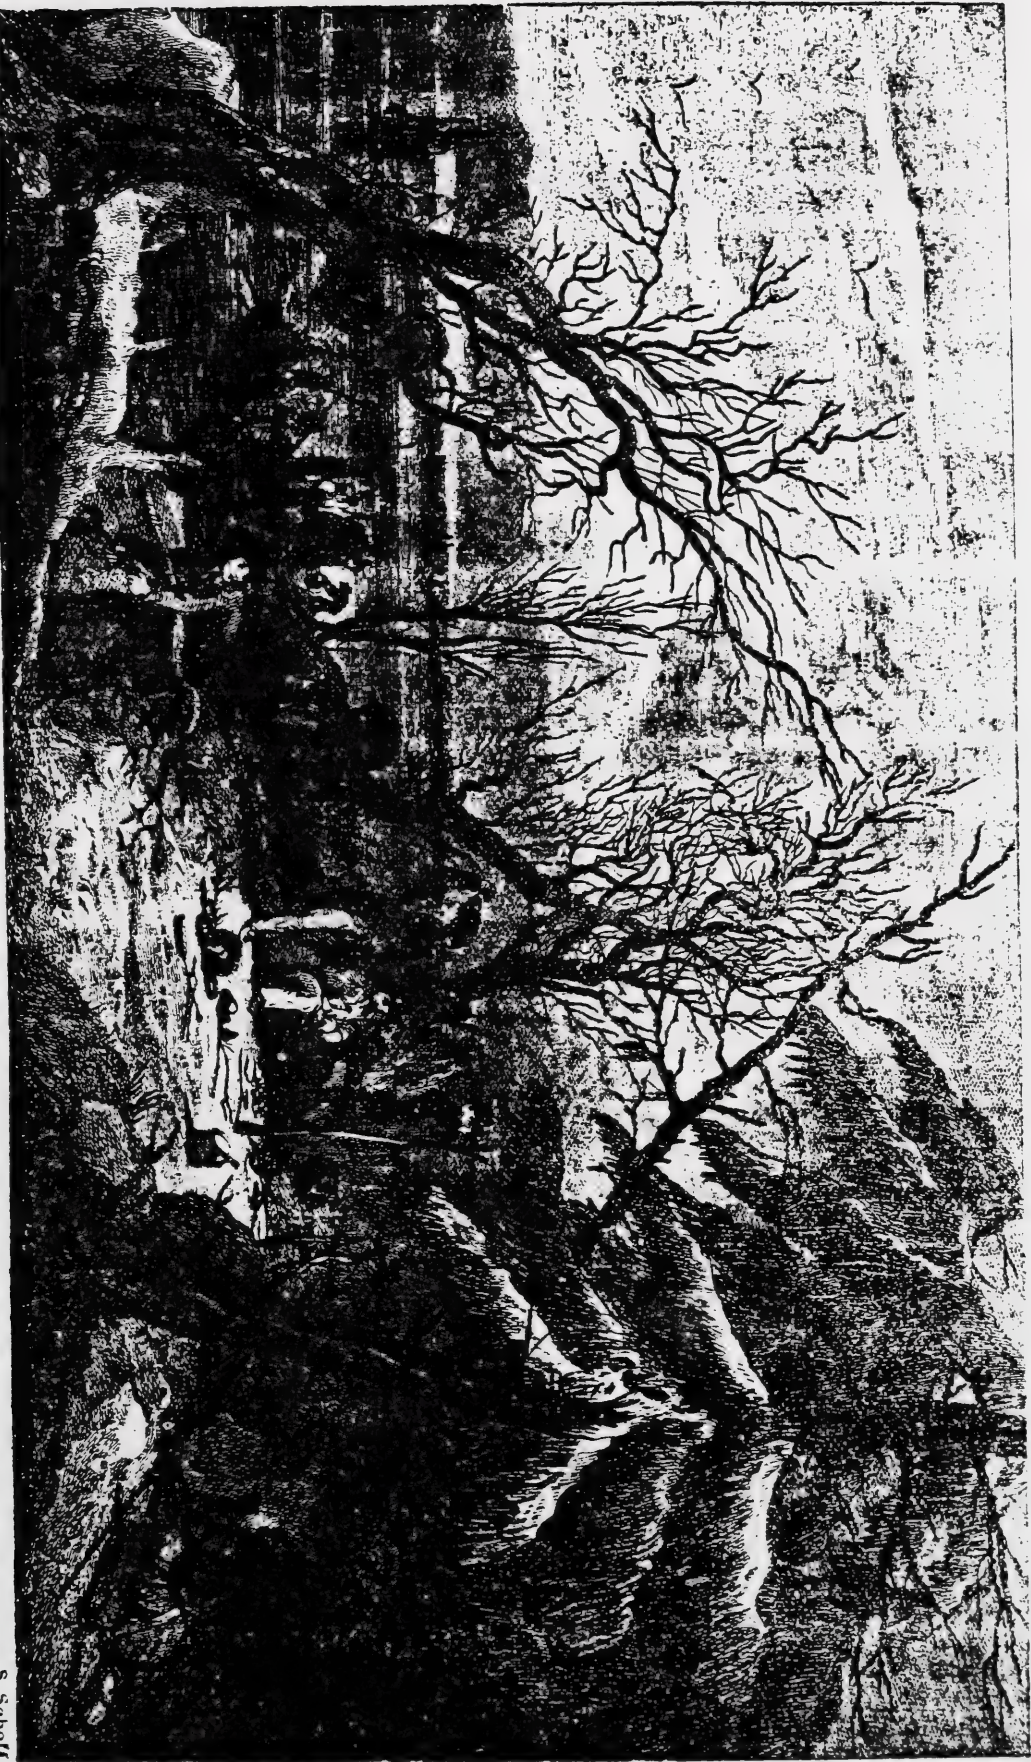

[It is possible, the subscriber's experience of forty-three years in New York, may be advantageously consulted by the stranger for hizer (his or her) present seekings in various honorable ways.]

Regular sessions of the Pilgrim Record Society, will be held at 61 East 59th street, afternoon and evening of the second Tuesday of each month, which all interested are invited to attend, bringing more or less family records.

N. B. The "Bulletin" and other publications of the Pilgrim Record Society, including Vol. I. of the "KENELM^s WINSLOW MEMORIAL," may be obtained at 61 East 59th street, where the second volume of the series will soon be issued.

The Memorial books will be a large octavo, bound in cloth, price five ($5.00) dollars for five hundred pages, additional pages at the same rate; and will be delivered to the address given with the order (unless notification of change of address be made), and at the charges of the purchaser. Vol. I. contains 656 pages, price six ($6.00) dollars, or five ($5.00) to those having already advanced that sum, delivered as above.

Remittance by postal orders, should be payable to the order of DAVID-P^r. HOLTON, at Station H, branch Post Office, New York City.

WINSLOW MEMORIAL.

INTRODUCTION.

"It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle or building not in decay, or to see a fine timber tree sound and perfect; how much more to behold an ancient noble family which hath stood against the waves and weathers of time!"—BACON.

It is fitting, in this centennial year of our Republic, to do works appreciative of the seed-time when the Pilgrims watered and planted in colonial life.

The more our free institutions are tested by use and time, the more apparent it becomes that the principles, which are most abiding and conservative of what is best, animated our Pilgrim Fathers, and made them hopeful of being humble instruments in the hands of Providence for the upbuilding of a mighty nation. But the gathering of forces that should make that nation powerful in a material sense would not alone have satisfied the high aspirations of the Pilgrim mind, though important and essential, perhaps, to enable it to maintain its place among nationalities. Yet, to crown the whole as a more perfect work approved of God, the true pilgrim never lost sight of that higher excellence which comes from purity of soul. We who live to exchange and enjoy centennial congratulations, with our population of forty-four millions to give us assurance of power and success, fail to estimate the sources of our strength, if we do not, in looking back upon the infant-colonies with their few hundreds, see that they were right when they insisted that free institutions must draw and measure their life from the virtue and intelligence of the people.

Of families bearing the Pilgrim name there is none more identified with this belief and with Pilgrim history than that of the honored name of WINSLOW. The descendant Winslows may read these pages grateful that it was permitted to their distinguished ancestors to bear so important a part in planting the colony of New Plymouth. Before proceeding to the finer details of pedigree, it is believed that some general statements of interest, relating to the several branches and some of their descendants, could more usefully be given in an introductory chapter than otherwise.

It is the purpose of this chapter, therefore, to give a general sketch of the Winslow family whose pedigree is the subject of this book. As is the case with most families of English origin, we find the materials for satisfactory research, earlier than the fifteenth century, are more scanty than the earnest student would wish.

The question has been raised whether the Winslows, before their residence in England, were inhabitants of Denmark. From the examination of Chart 7, p. 18, it will appear that this was not the case, or at least that the family there given was entirely distinct from the English Winslows, as the first ancestor of the name therein mentioned is Rev. Peder-Jacobsen Winslow, father of Prof. Jacob-Benignus Winslow, who was born 2 Apr. 1669. The father, therefore, in all probability, was born later than the Pilgrim Winslows. It is now some twenty years since efforts have been progressing, by visitation and correspondence, to trace the pedigree of the Danish and English Winslows. The compilers hope to re-visit Europe and by personal examination of the best records determine several ancestral lines. There was a parish in Scania named "Winslow" at an early date, which may have originated with a more ancient family, from whom it is possible that the English and American Winslows are descended.

The following letters were found among the papers of Isaac¹ Winslow, of Boston, a descendant of John¹ Winslow. The first, in the order of time, is from Mathew Lunn, an Episcopal minister of Kempsey, Worcestershire, England, to Edward Winslow, of London, probably Edward^o, Private Secretary to Lord Lyndhurst. See John¹ Winslow Memorial.

VICARAGE, KEMPSEY, 23d March, 1835.

Sir: In obedience to your request I have been to the church to examine among the tomb-stones and inscriptions, but can find no armorial bearings of the family of the Winslows, who lived in the parish a century ago.

There is no family of that name now residing in this neighborhood, and I should be led to conclude by the copies of the inscriptions which I shall give you, that John Winslow, who died in 1719, left no son, having buried two, aged 35, some years before his own death. His second son, as you will see, was Vicar of Snitterfield, near Warwick, for nine years, and there may be possibly some record of him in the Register of that parish and perhaps a document with his armorial bearings. If you will write to the Rev. George Clifton, the Vicar, making use of my name, he will, I am sure, gladly give you every information on the subject. I perceive on a tablet on the wall of our church, one of the daughters of John Winslow marries to John Ward, gentleman, [their daughter Hannah was buried 1732, aged 19.] On a tablet of donations to the poor, I perceive that, in 1659, Richard Winslow gave forty shillings forever, and Alice Winslow of Draycot, the hamlet of our parish in which the family resided, also gave the same sum in 1669.

I have been looking into Nash's Hist. of Worcestershire, and find that Winslow was a very ancient family in this place, but there is no mention of Pedigree or Arms. You may consult Vol. 2d, p. 20 and 21, in any Library. Perhaps also Drysdale's Warwickshire may afford the information you wish. The inscriptions below are copies from stones on the floor of Kempsey church. There have been several pews erected and they have concealed a part and perhaps more records of the same family, and perhaps a crest. I wish it were in my power to assist you in any way. I beg you to make no apology for the little trouble you have given me.

I am yours very truly

(Signed)

Mathew Lunn.

TRANSLATION.

Here lies buried the Reverend John Winslow, formerly Vicar of the Parochial church of Snitterfield, in Warwickshire, which position, he, happy in erudition, eloquent, fluent, polished in his manners, faultless in his life, lacking in no virtues, adorned eminently for nine years. But the course of this life being run,—prematurely alas!—having been adopted in the number of the saints, and having received the heavenly prize of virgins and priests, he has left an example of primitive piety to all his friends, who, sad at the loss of him, forget how great is the blessedness of his changed lot.

On the 8th day of February in the 1712th year of our salvation, and the 35th of his age.—Peace to his memory!—contrary to the order of human life, his unhappy father, John Winslow of Draycot in this parish, waxing old and already a septuagenarian and almost worn out with grief as well as age, has erected this monument, such as it is.

Next in chronological order is a letter from Isaac' Winslow to his father, written while he was in England.

BIRMINGHAM, 12th Aug. 1839.

DEAR FATHER:—I found Messrs. Cross & Son so busy at Bristol with the timber trade (having * * * *) that they could neither attend to us, or the American branch.

* * * * *

* The old Latin word Bravinum, is derived from the Greek word Brabeion, the Prize or Reward. The expression Virginium evidently shows that he died a Bachelor; and I should imagine that his older brother Richard died childless in 1777.

I started for Worcester and Droitwich on Saturday morning and arrived at the latter about sundown, remaining all night to look up the family, as suggested by you. I could not gather much information. Though I was until midnight, and again till noon of Sunday searching all the records, I could only learn as follows:—

ST. PETER'S PARISH.

The earliest records are A. D., 1560,—of our family as follows,—none earlier than 1594; [See also corrected dates page 23.]

1594 Nov. 3 mar. Edward W. at Lond. (not made out) to Magdalene his wife.
 1595 Oct. 20 Bapt. Edward son of Edward b. previous Friday.
 1596 Apr. 24 “ Eleanor dau. of “ “ Saturday next before.
 1597 Apr. 15 “ John son of “ “ “ “ “ 1599 May 3 “ Kenelm “ “ “ Friday “ “
 1600 Oct. 29 “ Gilbert “ “ “ Monday “ “
 1601-2 Nov. 8 “ Elizabeth dau “ “ Saturday “ “
 1604 Jan. 20 buried “ “ “
 1604 Dec. 30 bapt. Magdalene “ “
 1628 Nov. buried John Winsmore, } Supposed by clerk to be same family
 Dec. “ Jane (wife). } tho' spelt as given.

ST. ANDREWS.

The books are no farther back than 1560—of our family only:—

1601 21 Feb. Bapt. John son of Phillip Winslow.
 1597 was buried Edward Winslow—April.
 1577 bapt. Alexander son of Richard Wendslow (so spelt).

PARISH OF DODDREL.

Records only back to 1665—could not see any name of Winslow. * * *

An old man at the work-house informed me there was a tomb-stone at Salop [Shropshire?] a neighboring parish, with Winslow on it—the rest he says not legible; but having already expended near 3 guineas in fees and expenses I did not perceive the advantage of further investigation. There is no record of the family subsequent to the date above. It would appear therefore, that we were not an extensive connection at Droitwich. It is likely that Edward came to D— from elsewhere, and was followed to America by all his family. The Rector says, that unless the Winslows were Mayors, or of the city government the names would not appear in the city records. It is likely therefore the above is all the information to be had at Droitwich and which only tends to confirm our previous impressions.

Droitwich, seven miles from the ancient city of Worcester, nineteen miles from Birmingham and one hundred and eighteen from London, is one of the oldest corporations in England, and sends a member to parliament. Its sole support is its salt works; these were discovered about the year 1200 by a pigeon being observed to go continually to drink at a little wet spot. A man shooting at him with an arrow, it pierced the ground and a brine spring spurted up, which soon encrusted the grass around with salt. It was found that the whole valley abounded in these springs, and that wherever a well or hole was dug about twenty feet deep, and then bored some thirty to sixty feet, the brine at once ran to the surface. About a dozen salt works are in this valley. Two kinds of salt are made; the broad or coarse fine, and the stoved, or those beautiful lumps formerly sent us by Cross. It is said some twenty or thirty thousand tons of each are made annually. It is sent by canal to Bristol and Liverpool. [See page 22.]

All the churches are fine old buildings—the tower of St. Andrews said to be built in 1320—the other parts more modern. It is a mixture of Gothic and Saxon. Doddrell's tower was built about 1450. The body of the church is brick, and of a much later date. St. Peter's was built about the year 1500. The population of Droitwich is about 3,000. Of these, fully 1,000 are employed in the salt works. The brine is simply evaporated by heat, and the fine salt, while damp, put into square boxes or moulds and dried in a large room tempered with a stove; and in some of these rooms are several hundred tons at a time. * * * *

Letter from Francis Thompson to Isaac* Winslow.

LONDON, 12 KING'S BENCH WALK, TEMPLE, }
4 March, 1845.

ISAAC WINSLOW, ESQ. ;

MY DEAR SIR:—

I take this opportunity of answering your letter of the 13 December last, and have to apologize for not replying thereto at an earlier period; but owing to my having been much engaged in various matters, I was prevented giving that careful attention to the subject matter of your letter, which I considered it to require. But now, finding myself more at leisure, I embrace with much satisfaction the opportunity of re-examining such papers as are in my possession relative to the family of the Winslows.

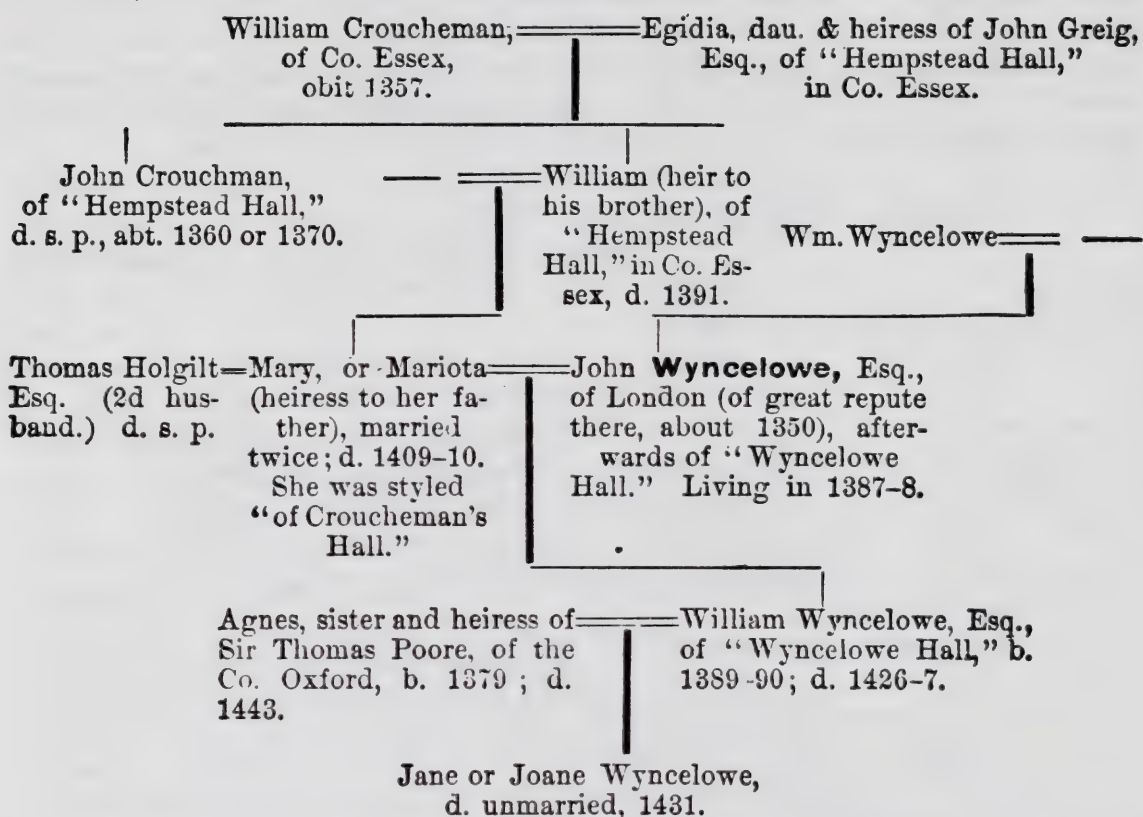

I perceive your impression to be that the Winslows originally came from Denmark, but, as far as I can trace the name, I very much doubt it, unless they came over here at an extremely early period of our history. In the first place, I may remark that the celebrated anatomist, to whom you refer, who died at Paris, was Benignus Winsloe* [commonly printed Winslow] who, being a very learned man, there cannot be a question that he spelled the name as was usual in his family. I admit the pronunciation is alike; for, in early times, when learning was confined to the few, every man wrote his name in that manner, in which the letters made use of sufficiently expressed the sound of it; therefore, it is by no means improbable that originally the families came from the same source; but whether English or Danish, the information I possess is insufficient to determine, although my impression is in favor of the English origin, at least for six hundred years.

The family of the Winslows existed in England long previously to the date of the individual first named in the sketch of a pedigree which I gave to your son when in London; as a proof of which, I will give you a very short outline of a portion of a pedigree of the family of the "Crouchmans" as connected with them; at which time the name was most generally written Wyncelowe or Winslowe, —in fact the same sound. The ancient residence of the family was called "Crouchman's Hall," but when it came into possession of the Winslows by marriage it was always styled Wyncelowe's, and is still written by some of our modern antiquarians "Winslows," and the ancient arms of that family are sculptured in stone in various parts of the old Hall, as I have read; also the name "Winslow's" comprises both the old Hall and the Manor. I have attached to it a rough imitation of the "Crouchman" arms as well as those of the Winslows as borne by them at the period of the Winslow marrying the heiress of the Crouchmans. The gentleman who married the above heiress was a person of great repute in the city of London about 1350, but I am not able to determine from what part of England his family came. This name is frequently mentioned in the early history of London.

CHART I.

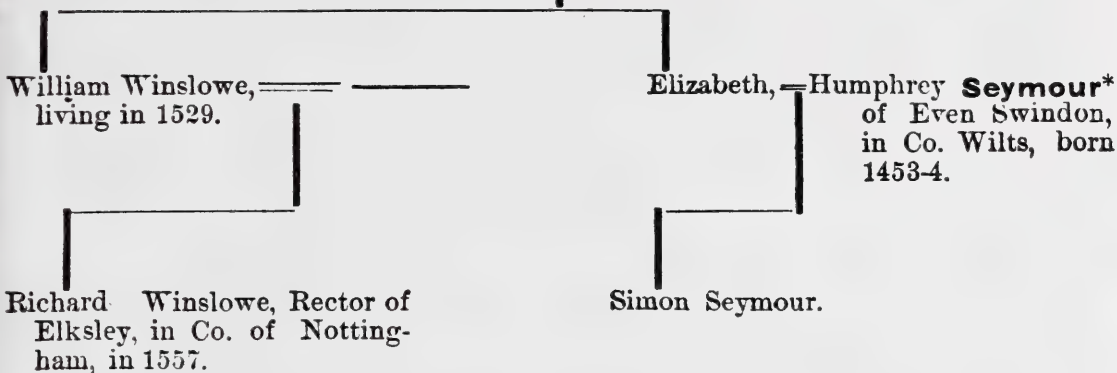

And as a further corroboration I also have much pleasure to give you a short sketch of a family of "Winslow" who principally resided in the county of Oxford; and likewise another rough draft of their coat of arms*; and although I have not at present been able to prove an absolute relationship, yet the dates and the christian names seem very much to justify the opinion that they sprang from a common ancestor. I may also here remark that in ancient days coats of arms of an individual were not necessarily borne by his descendants, as we find it was the pride of every individual to distinguish himself, and in commemoration of some event or action, bear a coat of arms expressive thereof, or of a celebrity he had obtained from other causes. As, for example, some families still existing bear for their crest a Moor's head, with an arm bearing in the hand a scimitar, manifesting that the ancestor had made himself remarkable by some personal contest with a Moor, whom he had slain. The arms of "Crouchmans" show that the ancestor had taken the cross in that ridiculous enterprise (which set all Europe mad) for the recovery of the Holy Sepulchre. Many other families have falcons in their arms, showing that the ancestor was a great sportsman,—that of falconing at an early period being highly esteemed among all men of birth. In fact there are numerous instances on record of several brothers, of the same father and mother, having each borne different coats of arms.

See pp. 12, 13, for Winslow Coat of Arms.

I am very strongly inclined to think that the above Thomas Wyncelowe [Chart II] was descended from a son of a son (William) Wyncelowe in the former pedigree, because I have good reasons for supposing that John W. was his first son, but that he had a second son named William Wincelowe who had a first son Thomas Winslowe, of Burton, as above. [p. 7.]

I flatter myself that the above will tend to demonstrate that the family of the Winslows is a very ancient one in this county, nor am I aware that any family bearing the same name has so ancient an origin in Denmark; and, therefore, I think that the great anatomist's ancestors may have sprung from the English family, as a trading connection between the two countries existed at a very early period.

[See p. 18 for the line of ancestry of Prof. Jacob Benignus Winslow.]

In further illustration, I will here give you the copy of an ancient writ preserved among the Parliamentary Records, viz :

“An. 1322—Walter de Wynslaive, Esquire, (Gentleman at Arms) returned by the Sheriff, pursuant to writ, tested at Bishopstrophe, 20 June, 15th Edward 2d, as summonsd from the County of Buckingham to perform Military Service in Person against the Scotts—To muster at New Castle upon the Tyne, on the Eve of St. James the Apostle, 24th July, 16th Edward 2d.”

As Edward Winslow, the principal leader of the Pilgrims, was a person of note in England, and extremely well connected, it is much to be regretted that so few papers concerning his family were preserved; for, no doubt, he could have given a regular account of the family, had not the religious fanaticism of the day been a bar to it. But we must content ourselves with taking advantage of all information whom, according to “Playfair's British Antiquities,” the Seymours of Oxfordshire and Hanford, County Dorset, are descended.

Humphrey Seymour was the second son, his elder and only brother being John, who was the grandfather of lady Jane, who married King Henry VIII the day after the decapitation of Ann Bullen. Edward, Duke of Somerset, brother of Lady Jane, became the Protector of the kingdom in the reign of her son, Edward VI. From the Duke's great grandson Edward, created Baronet 29 June, 1611, descended the present nobility of that house in England. The eldest daughter of the Baronet, Elizabeth, married Ames Meredith, Esq., who was advanced to the dignity of a Baronet of Nova Scotia, in 1639. From “Burke's Landed Gentry” we copy the following, of the Hanford Seymours:

“This family, resident for several centuries at Hanford, in Dorsetshire, claims a common progenitor with the ducal house of Somerset. In Collins' Peerage, under that Dukedom, there is a conjecture as to the descent of the Seymers of Hanford from Humphrey Seymer, of Even Swindon. The conjecture arose probably from the coincidence of date, similarity of arms, and the spelling of the name. It appears, in the early part of the pedigree of the ducal family, the termination was er.

John Seymer, of Hanford, living in the 22 Edward IV., 1483, m. a dau. of William Pulvertopp, and was succeeded by his son, Richard Seymer, of Hanford, in the 12 Henry VIII., who m. Helena, dau. of — Gaunt, and had a son and heir.

John Seymer, of Hanford, living in the 31 Henry VIII. He m. Edith, dau. of William Laver, and was s. by his son,

John Seymer, of Hanford, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Thomas Attwater, of Todbere, in Dorsetshire, by whom (who m. 2ndly, John Bayly, and 3rdly, William Hannam, of Purse Candel) he had a son,

Agnes, dau. of William Rawles, Esq., of Fifehead, County Dorset, and relict of Robert Saunders, Esq., and had four sons and six daus., viz., Anne, m. to John Squibb, of Winterbourne Whitechurch; Elizabeth m. to Laurence Sweteham of Sherbourne; Bridget m. to Thomas Young, of Child, Oxford; Judith m. to John Dolling, of Worth; Edith m. to Richard Ryves, of Child, Ockford; and Johanna, m. to Arthur Squibb, of Knowle, Somersetsire. He d. 12 Jan., 9 King James I., and was s. by his son, Robert Seymer, Esq., of Hanford. This gentleman m. Bridget, dau. of — Phelips, Esq., of Montacute in Somersetshire, and by her (who died in 1721) left at his decease, in 1706, an only surviving son, which may be obtained in carefully examining the immense mass of various records which exists in this country, either in public establishments, or in the hands of private individuals; and I have very little doubt by time and patience the connecting link between the families I have alluded to will finally crown our labors. The earliest direct ancestor to whom I have been able to trace the family at present is John Winslow, but, as I am not certain whether I commenced with him in the genealogical table I gave your son, I will place it here.

He m. 4 July, 1839, Isabella-Helen, youngest dau. of the late W. Weber, Esq., of Binfield Lodge, Berks, [in 1846].

We suppose the following to be the genealogical table to which Mr. Thompson alludes, as having been previously given by him to the son of Isaac Winslow.

CHART IV.

By comparing these two charts, a serious discrepancy will be noticed. In chart III, John Winslow, of Kempsey, in County Worcester, who married Agnes Throckmorton, fourth daughter of John of Coughton, etc., is given as the son of Kenelm, who, in 1559, purchased "Newport's Place." In chart IV, he is given as the grandfather, which is the more probable of the two statements, if he was living in 1400 and 1420, although from the dates it would seem that he must have been his great grandfather, at least.

There is one argument in favor of chart IV; it was the first one executed, and evidently drawn up with more care than the other. In chart III, he may have trusted more to his memory.

Let us now consider Chart I, showing the intermarriage of Crouchman and Wyncelowe. We will commence with the Wyncelowes, in order that we may express what we understand by Mr. Thompson's statement on page 8, regarding the pedigree of Thomas Wyncelowe.

CHART V.

William Wyncelowe, =

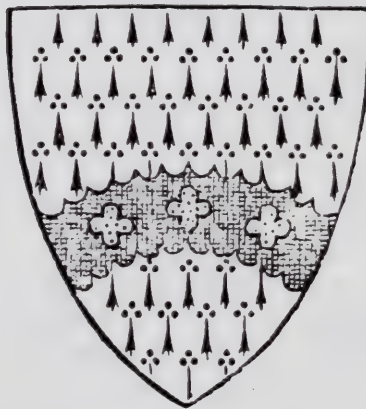

Eleanor Pelham, dau. of Sir Edward^A, b. 7 Oct. 1560, parish of St. Andrew, Droitwich, = Magdalene Olylyver.
 4 Nov. 1594.

So far as dates are concerned, this relationship of William and Thomas, suggested by Mr. Thompson, does not seem very improbable. If we consider the date of Thomas' birth as 1400, allowing a difference of ten years between the two cousins, then William, son of Thomas, might be born in 1435, making him 94 in 1529; or he might be born in 1440, making him 89 in 1529. By another supposition, rendering the difference in the ages of the two cousins twenty years, (not an unusual thing) we will call the date of Thomas' birth 1410, and of his son William 1440. The father would, in that case, be thirty years of age when his son was born, and the son would be 89 in 1529.

As Mr. Thompson thus gives the line of ancestry of Richard Winslow, Rector of Elksley, in Co. Nottingham, and as, by chart IV, on page 10, Kenelm and Richard are represented by him as brothers, we place them in that relation on chart V, p. 11.

It will be observed that in chart III, p. 9, John Winslow of County Worcester is given as the father of Kenelm, and John of County Worcester as son of Kenelm, while in chart IV, John of Kempsey, County Worcester, (evidently the one mentioned as the son of Kenelm, in chart III, p. 9,) is given as the grandfather of Kenelm, while the father's name does not appear, and from the dates it seems that John, who was living in 1400, should be his great grandfather, rather than his grandfather. Finding so many errors with regard to said John renders us somewhat inclined to drop him altogether. In that case, the only line of ancestry left to us, furnished by Mr. Thompson, is that to be found in chart V; and here we may as well confess that in that our confidence is somewhat shaken by the detecting of these mistakes in the other charts. We have, however, thought best to lay the whole matter before the reader, believing that it would be apparent, that, in order to satisfactorily determine the Winslow line of ancestry, further research in England would be necessary.

Mr. Thompson, in his draft, gives the engrailed chevron an arched form, which, though ordinarily right-angled, may, as well as a Bend or Fess, be represented as arched or bowed.—[See Arms of Saxony in the shield of the Prince of Wales.]

The reader may find in the Appendix a few heraldic terms, with their usual definitions.

While a daughter of Isaac⁷ Winslow, of Brooklyn, was at Naples, Italy, not many years since, she met there a Danish woman bearing the name of Winslow, who had in her possession a coat of arms like that used by the Winslows of America [See the Winslow coat of arms in Appendix.], and her line of ancestry for many generations. We regret that we are not able to obtain the latter, as it might aid in settling the question of the ancestry of the Winslows, whether of English or Scandinavian extraction.

A small parish in Scania, Sweden, bore the name of Winslof or Winslow, which name was adopted by the minister of the place, and retained in his family. "In Danish the name Winslow is spelled with an 'o' which sounds like the French 'eu' or the English 'o' in 'love.' The 'lof' or 'low,' on which a number of local names terminate in the Scandinavian Centres as well as in England, derives its origin from the Icelandic form 'lief,' which is supposed to denote property appertaining to the royal domains."

During many years Scania¹ was a province of Denmark, but forming one mainland with Sweden, this kingdom often tried to wrench it from Denmark, and several times during the numerous wars between the two countries, the former succeeded in retaining it for a short period. During one of these Swedish occupations, the Winslows, loyal to the Danish crown, fled from the southern shores of Scania and landed on the little Danish island of Banholm, where they have continued to dwell until the present day, and whence originates the Winslow family, not very numerous in Denmark.

Several members of the Danish Winslow family have obtained quite a fame in the annals of the old world, which will be seen by a reference to the large biographical lexicons of Europe. Conspicuous among these is Jacob Benignus Winslow, born in 1669. Having first devoted himself to theological studies, he finally embraced the sciences of medicine and anatomy, and settled in Paris, France, where he is still revered as the father of the modern school of anatomy; himself considered as the most eminent anatomist of France. He died April 3rd or 5th, 1760. His biography is to be found in the "Histoire de l'Academie des Sciences, an 1760, Paris, 1766." As an author he is well known by his work, "Exposition Anatomique de la Structure du Corps Humain," written in 1732.

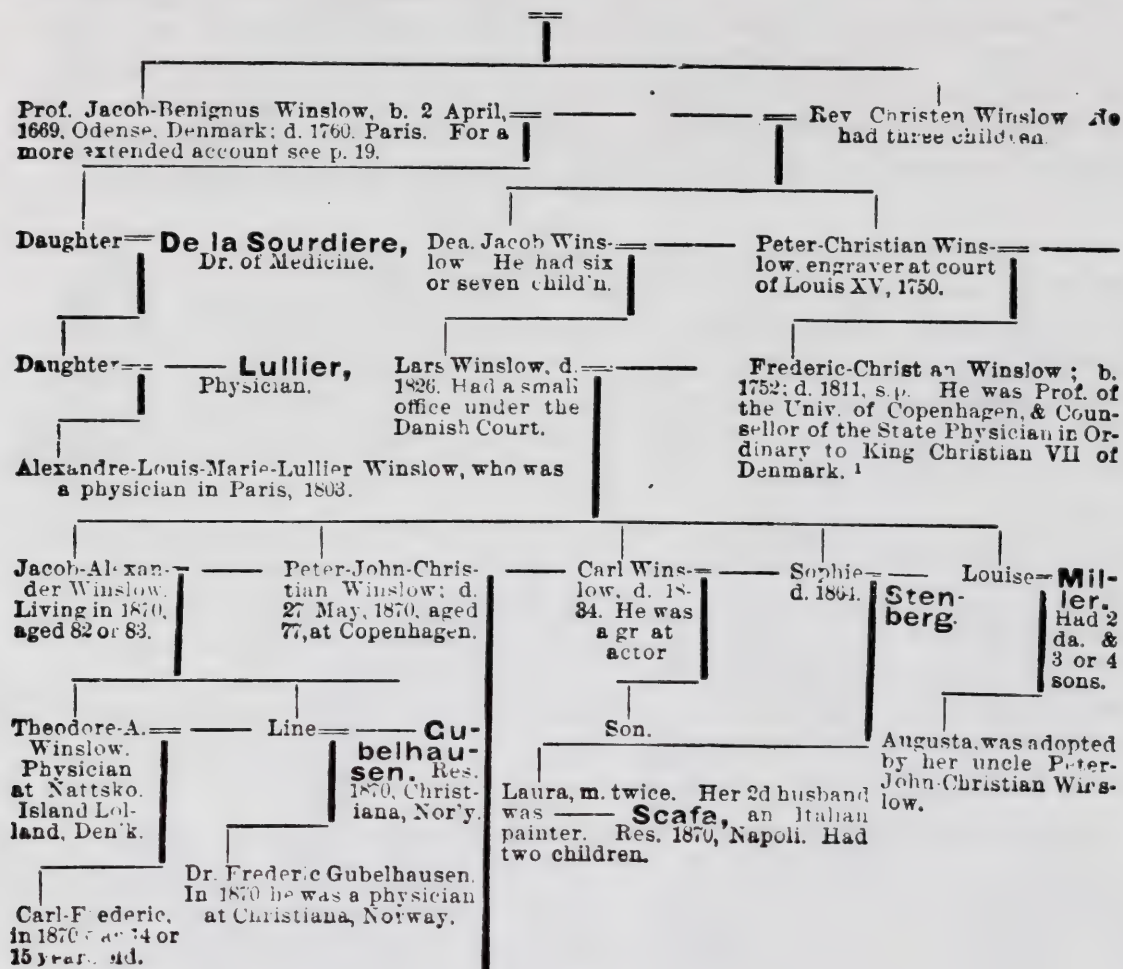

The chart on the following page, in connection with chart V, p. 11, serves to show that the English Winslows, with whom our Memorials have to do, did not originate from the line given in the former, as the families were contemporaneous; but the question naturally arises, whence came the Winslows loyal to the Danish crown, who fled from the southern shores of Scania and landed on the little Danish island of Banholm [Bornholm²]? Were they of Danish origin, or had they, like the Winslows of a later period, emigrated from some other country to these shores?

¹The province of Scania or Schonen in Gothland, southern Scandinavia, was ceded by Denmark to Sweden in 1645.

²Bornholm, in the Baltic, an island about twenty-eight miles long and eighteen broad, is S.E. from the parish of Winslow in Scania. There are mines of coal and quarries of marble in the island.

Rev. Peder-Jacobsen Winslow was a minister at Odense, Island of Funen. He had thirteen children, of whom were:

The genealogies of the Mayflower passengers, prepared at our office, and awaiting corrections and additions prior to separate publication, are open to inspection. All persons desiring to co-operate with us in completing their own branch are invited to bring records any afternoon or evening. The second Tuesday evening of each month is set for the regular sessions of the PILGRIM RECORD SOCIETY. Those residing in New York City or vicinity, who prefer to appropriate an early morning hour, at their own residence, commencing one hour after sun rise, may write to that effect, and we will by mail state the morning of visitation, and, at the time selected, carry manuscript or proof sheets for examination, additions, or corrections.

The Memorials now being printed, 1877, embrace, among others, families whose ancestry in the paternal or maternal line traces back to the Plymouth Pilgrims.

Among descendants of Plymouth Pilgrims, whose records (more or less complete) we are now preparing for publication, are many hundreds in maternal lines, having surnames associated, only by marriage, with Pilgrim records.

Persons thus associated—or patronymically so—are invited to bring to the office of the PILGRIM RECORD SOCIETY, New York, SECOND TUESDAY EVENING of each month, his or her pedigree to determine its derivative course pilgrimward or otherwise.

Prof. Jacob Benignus Winslow was born 2nd [9 ?] April, 1669, at Odense, Denmark, and died in 1760, at Paris, France. The following inscription is on his monument, in the monastery of the Little Augustus, at Paris, he having been converted to the Catholic faith by Bossuet.

PROF. WINSLOW commenced the study of theology, but abandoned it for that of medicine. He first went to Holland where he studied for some time, and afterwards at Paris under Duvernoy, having arrived there in 1698. He took his degree from the Faculty of Medicine in that city in 1705. In 1707, was admitted as a student in the Royal Academy of Sciences at Paris, and was afterwards an Associate. About this time he assisted Duvernoy at the Jardin du Roi ; and succeeded to the chair of Anatomy in 1743. He practised medicine in Paris, but was remarkable for the timidity with which he prescribed, and is said never to have ordered a powerful dose of medicine without trembling. He married in 1711, and left behind him a son and a daughter. He was styled the "Father of Anatomy." The following is a portion of the title page of his extensive work on Anatomy, copied from an edition printed in 1776 at Paris. There was also an edition printed in 1752, at Amsterdam, by Emanuel Tourneisen:—"Exposition Anatomique de la Structure du Corps Humain, Par M. Winslow, Docteur-Regent de la Faculte de Medecine de Paris, de l'Academie Royale des Sciences, Interprete de la Langue Teutonique a la Bibliotheque du Roi, Ancien Professeur d'Anatomie & de Chirurgie au Jardin Royal, de l'Academie Royale des Sciences & Belles Lettres de Berlin."

He was grand nephew of the celebrated Steno.

[See Biographie Universelle, Paris, 1828.]

In the introductory chapters of the description of each system of organs, he gives a general view of their functions, and in this department of science his judicious observations did much to prepare for subsequent discoveries, especially with regard to the functions of the muscular system. His "Exposition" has often been re-published. It was translated into Latin, German, English and Italian ; and is a model on which most of our text-books on human anatomy have since been constructed.

Some of Winslow's biographers state that he was twice nearly buried alive, by falling into a state of apparent death. This induced him to take up the subject of the certain and uncertain signs of death, and the result of his researches he published in 1740, in an answer to the question, "An mortis incertæ signa minus incerta a chirurgicis quam ab aliis experimentis?" In this work, the author has brought forward a number of cases of persons buried, opened, and otherwise treated as dead, who were only apparently so, and arrives at the conclusion that nothing but the indication of the process of decomposition is sufficient evidence of death.

[See the Penny Cyclopaedia of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge.]

The preceding charts have been compiled from town, county, probate, and church records; from letters of correspondence, and from examination of the returns of heralds and other public officers of the English crown, who, it is to be regretted, have too frequently neglected to give exact dates, or collateral items of brothers and sisters of their chosen line. It appears that English genealogists habitually omit collateral branches, which are as outposts to establish and strengthen pedigrees in the main line.

We now proceed to give in a preliminary way, a general sketch of what is known of the Winslow ancestors as they lived in England; but it is our more especial design to notice the career of such leading members of the family and their descendants in this country as are not living, whose common ancestor was Edward^A Winslow, of Droitwich, England, and whose sons, Governor Edward¹ Winslow and his brothers John¹, Kenelm¹, Josiah¹, and Gilbert¹, came to Plymouth. It is believed that this introductory statement will be of service to all interested in the family, while a more minute knowledge of their pedigree may be learned from the dates and statistics that follow, by such of our readers as desire to know the story in detail.

On the east bank of the Severn stands the ancient city of Worcester, a little west of the geographical centre of the United Kingdom of England and Wales.

The river here receives from the north-east the Birmingham and Worcester canal. It flows to the South, and four miles below, has, on its eastern bank, the parish of Kempsey with its hamlet of Draycot, south of the Parish Church.

Here lived, in 1400 and in 1420, John Winslow, possibly the ancestor of the Winslows of America, who married Agnes, fourth daughter of John Throckmorton, Esq., of Coughton, Warwickshire.

Kenelm^B Winslow, who acquired in some way the considerable estate of Clerkenleap, half way to Worcester, on the west side of the road, between it and the river, also bought of Sir Richard Newport, in 1559, "Newport Place," another estate in Kempsey.

Richard Winslow, who, 17th July, 155-, received, from Edward VI., the lands of the Rectory of Elksley, Nottinghamshire, on the north bank of the Poulter, four and a half miles north-west of Juxford, and about north-west of London, was a brother of Kenelm^B.

Later in life, this Kenelm^B Winslow removed to St. Andrew's parish, Worcester, where he died in 1607, leaving a widow Katherine and sons.

This appears from his will, dated 14th April and proved 9th Nov., 1607, extracted from the District Registry of Her Majesty's Court of Probate at Worcester.

Edward^A, the only son of Kenelm^B of whom we have any knowledgc, is supposed to have married for his first wife, Eleanor Pelham, daughter of Sir Herbert Pelham of Droitwich, by whom he had a son Richard, born about 1585, and who died 20th May, 1659. [See Chart V, p. 11.] [For Pelham family see account of Gov. Josiah² Winslow.] Also MARGARET, b.c. 1595; d. 1665 Plymouk; m. 1606 ROBERT HICKS (to P. in Kortmuy 1621)

From St. Peter's Parish Register, Droitwich, England, we obtain the following:
Nov. 1628, buried John Winsmore.

Dec. “ “ Jane “ wife of John.

[This name though spelt Winsmore, is supposed by the Clerk to be Winslow].

From St. Andrew's Parish Register we have the following:

21st Feb. 1601, Baptized John, son of Philip Winslow.

Sept. 1597, Edward Winslow was buried. \

Mar. 1577, Alexander, son of Richard Wendslow, was baptized, or buried.

Nov. 1628, John Winsmore buried under this stone.—From the above we find that there were residing in the vicinity a Richard and Philip Winslow, who might have been sons of Kenelm^B Winslow, and, if so, Richard would have been older than Edward (who was born 1560) as he had a child baptized, or buried, Mar. 1577, and might have been at that time twenty years old.

Now Richard may have been a son of the eldest son of Kenelm^B, spoken of in the will, instead of a son of Edward^A, who was probably a younger son of Kenelm^B, as he went to Droitwich to live instead of remaining on the estate at Kempsey, or Clerkenleap. The last named estate was sold by Richard, grandson of Kenelm^B, in 1650, which shows that the family estates were in the possession of that branch of the Winslow family.

Edward^A Winslow, son of Kenelm^B and Katharine, born 17 Oct. 1560, died before 1631; married (second) at St. Brides, London, 4th Nov. 1594, Magdalene Ollyver, as the name is still seen upon the Parish Register. Subsequently, in the Register at his new home, Droitwich, six miles north-east of Worcester, this marriage was interlined in the proper place :

1594 Nov. 3^d Edw. Wynsloe & Magdalen married at London. This last date is evidently a day too soon. The London Clerk also writes Winslowe. The characteristic carelessness of the age as to orthography is further shown by the Parish Clerk at St. Peters, Droitwich, where he writes Kenelme Wynsloe sonne of Edward Wynslowe. His father, in the body of his will, wrote his name Kenelme Wynslove, and signed it—if indeed we have there a completed signature—Kenelm Wynslo.

But what and where is Droitwich? And how may Edward have come there?

As this is the birth-place of men who have made their impress upon the character and fortunes of New England forever, a more particular account of this remarkable town will be of interest.

Droit means right; wych means salt-spring. It may then mean a well that is owned in shares; or it may imply that the manufacture of salt from it is lawful.

If we follow up the Severn a few miles from where the Birmingham and Worcester canal enters it at Worcester, we strike the mouth of the Salwarp, Saldorpe, or Droitwich canal, and, just above, the mouth of the Salwarp river. The canal for most of its length hugs the southern or left bank of the river.

As we follow them up, we come in less than three miles to the village of Salwarp, the birth place of Robert Beauchamp, who in 1381 was the great Earl of Warwick. A little north of this is the beautiful Westwood Park with its ample lakelet.

About a mile further on is Droitwich, seven miles from Worcester, nineteen from Birmingham, and one hundred and eighteen from London. This would be a beautiful place but that its roads from excessive use are fearfully muddy in wet weather; and the smoke of numerous furnaces fills the air with soot. The tower of St. Andrews Church, in Droitwich, is said to have been built in 1320. St. Peters parochial church, which was built about the year 1500, stands on the principal street, and anciently there was a chapel dependent on it, upon the very bridge, with the cart-way between the congregation and the pulpit and reading-desk. Or, we might reach Droitwich by highway, a distance of six miles. Half-way we leave on our right. Hinlip or Hindlip Hall—Hindlip House up some distance from the road.

This curious old pile was new in the days of Edward^A Winslow, the father of Gov. Winslow of Plymouth, and its builder, John Abingdon or Habyngdon, still lived there. His ingenuity exhausted itself in building hiding holes with secret stairways, trap-doors, and sliding panels. For these his son and successor, Thomas, had too much need, as he was subsequently deep in the Gunpowder Plot. The father was almoner to Queen Elizabeth, and she was god-mother to the son, Thomas. [See Appendix, HINDLIP HOUSE.]

The salt-springs at Droitwich have been known from time immemorial. From earliest ages salt (sal) has been warped down to the Severn by the little river Salwarp. Here was probably the "Salinæ" of the Romans.

The monopoly of the brine was sold by King John, for £100 per annum, to certain individuals, many of them residing at some distance. Possibly Edward^A Winslow, the father of the four Winslows who came to Plymouth, was one of these, before his removal to Droitwich.

The droit in the time of Henry VIII, a century earlier, amounted to £20 per annum, a very considerable sum in those days; and just before the war of the American Revolution the duties rose to £80,000. An attempt to raise more from it ruined this convenient source of revenue. Subsequently a great change took place which increased its business manifold.

A man, who had a beautiful place and considerable property in the western border of the village, satisfied himself that all persons had a constitutional right to bore for salt on their land. He tried it—fought the Crown and the monopolists till, in 1689, he gained a complete victory and spent his last penny.

Any one who can buy a lot and build a furnace may now freely buy coal and sell salt. The structure of the land is as follows: Four feet mold, thirty-two marl, forty gypsum, then a river, twenty-two inches in depth, of brine, by far the strongest in England, that rises to the surface without pumping.

Below this are seventy-five feet of gypsum, and the solid salt to an unknown depth.

Salwarp Canal is covered with boats of salt and coal. The annual product, limited only by the demand, is more than 30,000 tons. A grateful posterity remember the assertor of their rights as a "Mr. Steynor," who died a pauper; and the Records of the Parish of Claims, just north of Worcester, show that his daughter was a parish charge there in 1777.

The records of the family of Edward^A Winslow are found in the Parish Register of St. Peter's, Droitwich, which, however, extend no further back than 1560. A very completely made copy, by Wm. S. Appleton, is found in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of 1867; Vol. XXI, p. 210. For important purposes we here copy it, with insertions of our own in brackets:

1594. Nov. 3. [It should be Monday, 4 Nov., O. S.] Edw. Wynslove and Magdalen married at [~~S.~~ Brides] london.

A copy of the births only, in the Register at Droitwich (See Gen. Reg. iv, 297) has been found pasted on the inside of the left hand cover of an old and imperfect copy of the Bible which Savage, IV: 599, thinks to be of the time of George II, or perhaps of George I (1714-60).

The record, which, he says, is in a hand four generations later than Gov. Edward¹ Winslow's, and, in more than three or four places, corrected with erasures and interlineations, incurs his suspicions because its baptisms are not all on Sunday. And apparently, it was because that 1594, 20th Oct. was Sunday, that Belknap, Am. Biog. II: 281, places this birth in 1594. In this, Savage follows him, and also Bailies, II, 17. Dr. Young does the same at first, but changes "on the faith of an extract from the rec. [Register] of St. Peters: "born the Friday," adding, "which was the 19th day"; whereas Friday was the seventeenth. Certainly here is more than one “blunder” for here, and in every particular save one, the old record in the Bible agrees with that copied from the Register which we have given above. It makes the birth of Kenelm on Monday, while another copies from this hasty transcript from that Register this word as Sunday once, and again as Friday.

That this old family record is taken from the parish register is apparent from this: neither omits the day of the week on which any child was born except Magdalen, whom each states to have been “baptised 30 December and born on the twenty-sixth of the same.” And while it omits the marriage and burial, it states no fact not found in the Register.

But the rash change of Edward’s birth from 1595 to 1594 encounters another serious obstacle. It makes the child to be born before the marriage of his parents. This record is interlined in the Droitwich Register at the proper place in point of time. But the perseverance of our countryman, Col. Joseph L. Chester, great-great-great-great-great grandson of Edward^A has unearthed the original record of this marriage, in the parish register of St. Brides, London, and found it according to the Gen. Reg. XXIV: 329, to read as follows:

“1594 Nov. 4, Edward Winslowe and Magdalene Ollyver.” This authority may be considered final; and of this record there can be no valid doubt. The Droitwich entry was probably from memory only, and incorrect by a single day. In the Leyden Records in Holland, we read that Edward Winslow was married by Rev. John Robinson, 16 May, 1618, to Elizabeth Barker, of Chetsum, England. Her niece, Jane Phesel, witnessed to the record. The interval between this date and our last, that of Josiah’s birth, is twelve years and one fourth. This leap is from the salt furnaces of central England to the narrow confines of a Dutch mart, where a handful of refugees from ecclesiastical tyranny are leading an anomalous life. Some had made a heroic escape from the low shores of Lincolnshire, ten years before.

Some had known what it was to forsake all earthly possessions. They had risked liberty, even life. After residing a year or two in Amsterdam, or wandering in Holland, strangers in a strange land, and among a people of strange speech, and of a laxity of religious principles that shocked them, they had found a temporary home together, at Leyden, five miles from the coast of Holland, opposite the beginning of the southern third of that almost unbroken stretch of coast between the great bay on the north of it and the great net-work of inlets, river-mouths, and islands on the South.

The old fable of the halcyon only foreshadows the incubation of the New England Church in Holland.

The fierce and dreadful struggle with Spain and the Inquisition was closing, just as the first attempts were made to exchange religious persecution for cruel and bloody war. The peace of Antwerp was made certain by a series of victories, and was signed while the flights of this church were preparing, 1609.

The terrible thirty-year’s war, which turned Germany into a desert, began in 1618; but its fury came not near the Low Countries till after the pilgrims had sailed from Delft Haven.

But, even under these favorable circumstances, the church of good John Robinson was almost in a state of siege. People who had been cradled in luxury, or who had all their lives been amply supplied with comforts and elegancies, now suffered absolute want. Their beloved children, “through the extreme necessity that was upon them, although of the best dispositions and graciously inclined, and willing to bear their part of their parents' burdens, were oftentimes so oppressed with their heavy labors, that, although their spirits were free and willing, yet their bodies bowed under the weight of the same, and became dwarfed in their early youth, and the vigor of nature consumed in the very bud."

Among these martyrs at "a faith's pure shrine" for "freedom to worship God" was Elizabeth Barker. If, pale and careful, she had first accidentally met Edward Winslow in the streets of Leyden the fall before, an English traveler on the Continent, just twenty-two years of age, attracted to the ancient city, perhaps, by the fame of the university, now only forty-two years old, and making its mark upon the annals of science, he may have been utterly indifferent to the great cause that had drawn her from her home in Chetsum; but she spoke English; she had borne no common weight of trial for one of her age; and her first look may have spoken to a soul that he was not before conscious of possessing. There was no more salt-boiling for him. He was about to receive a calling like that of Abraham, "Get thee out of thy country and from thy kindred and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee." Some give Rev. John Robinson the credit of being the means of Edward's conversion, but a transformation like this is not the work of logic, nor indeed of earthly love. That casual meeting in the streets of Leyden may have had in it the fate of those five Droitwich boys—all of them now between twenty-two and eleven, of which he was the senior and was to be the leader—and of all New England as well. Even now the question of the removal of the Leyden church to the New World was nearly settled, if only a suitable spot could be found for them.

Holland would cheerfully make room for them somewhere in her infant Niew Nederland would they but be true to the Dutch Republic,—just what they were resolved against. "England, with all thy faults I love thee still"—a line written by one to be born after the last of them were dead, expressed the ineradicable feeling of their hearts. English they were and English they would remain.

Just now come two of their messengers returning from England, bringing news that the King, while granting them no chartered rights, would promise graciously to wink at their non conformity,—till it pleased him to open his eyes upon them.

Young Winslow inquires into their plans, and then into their motives. Their cause has a fair exponent in Elizabeth, and she, an apt scholar, in the wealthy traveler. Of her family we see nothing, save the niece with the remarkable name—Jane Phesel. They are married and reside in Leyden till the time of embarkation. He may have returned to England in the mean time, or else availed himself of the delays there, for a visit to Droitwich.

He was accompanied by his brother Gilbert, now just closing his twentieth year. He had realized so much from his property, as would enable him to stand at the head of a family,—without children of his own, and not including his brother Gilbert. The family consisted of himself and wife, George Soule, a boy Elias Story, and a girl Ellen Moore. Of the five, he and Soule were the only ones to survive the winter.

We give only the main stages of the journey or passage from Leyden to New England, noting dates in Old Style.

PASSAGE OF THE PILGRIMS FROM LEYDEN TO NEW ENGLAND.

THE Pilgrims left Leyden—Delft Haven, Holland—in the Speedwell, July, 1620,* for Southampton, where they found the Mayflower had arrived from London. The two vessels sailed from Southampton on the 5th August. They had not gone far before the Speedwell proved so leaky that they were forced to return and refit.

On the 21st August, they sailed again and proceeded about one hundred leagues, when they were obliged to return again, and to leave, as unfit for service, the Speedwell.

Leaving a part of the company, the remainder went on board the Mayflower. On the 6th September, they sailed from Plymouth; sighted land near Cape Cod, 9th November; anchored, 11th November.

And now on this eventful 11th of November, 1620, O. S., there is a [Compact] drawn up and unanimously signed by all the men of lawful age; drawn up, and by whom? Probably the first four signers were its authors, and, in fact it was not the work of that Saturday. For on Friday they had come in sight of land, had taken a departure from it, and sailed away south for the mouth of the Hudson, a region claimed by both the English and the Dutch.

COVENANT

But aside from any improbable bribery of Captain Jones by the Dutch, there were enough reasons, natural and providential, for retracing their steps.

The island of Monomoy was then a tongue of land stretching down straight south from the elbow of the Cape; and to double it had been a fearful task to the vessels of those days in better seasons than November.

Most serious, if not long continued, must have been the councils held on the Mayflower before the destination, to which the captain was held by contract, was changed for one unknown.

The decision must have been made while buffeting the troubled waters around that spit, which had then been named Cape Malabarre and Tucker's Terror.

But it was the purpose of Providence to transplant the Leyden church into the most sterile ground on all the coast of the United States, and He had emptied it of its old inhabitants, and had even prepared interpreters between the Pilgrims and the neighbors of their predecessors. So they turned again; and we should imagine that they could not have made much northward progress before daylight that Saturday morning.

That day they doubled Cape Cod, found and entered Cape Cod Harbor, anchored, landed, and brought off from the shore a load of wood.

So the change of destination, and the compact, though their consequences must reach to the end of time, are but a part of the work of two days that would otherwise be among the memorable ones of a life time.

Among the authors of that Magna Charta—inferior to the decalogue and the Lord's prayer, yet surpassed in significance by but few uninspired compositions, the third was Edward Winslow, a man of just twenty-five, one of the fifteen who were accompanied by either children or servants, one of the eight that bore the honorable distinction of "Mr."

* FOREFATHERS' DAY.—Descendants of a Mayflower Pilgrim having been invited to participate in appropriate exercises at 19 Great Jones Street, New York City, the evening of Thursday, the 30th December, 1875, the true Anniversary Day of the Landing of the Pilgrims, Dr. Holton, by way of introduction, and as an apology for proposing a change of date for FOREFATHERS' DAY, stated only the main stages of the journey or passage from Leyden to New England, noting dates in Old Style.—See BULLETIN OF PILGRIM RECORD SOCIETY.

Only three things could tend to place him among the leaders of this greatest of the enterprises of the age: piety, intelligence, or wealth.

His brethren had gauged him well—all the three recommendations pointed, as we now know, to his occupancy of the part assigned him.

The permanent landing of the Pilgrims began on 20th December, Old Style, corresponding to 30th December, New Style. * * * * * It would be a greater pity to disturb the time of celebrating Forefathers' Day, if there had been no stupendous blunder in adopting for it the 22d December, New Style.

Assuming 11th December, Old Style, for the correct date, it ought not to be translated into New Style, even for the purpose of celebration, unless it be correctly done.

To events in papal countries after 1582, ought to be assigned the New Style date, with the invariable addition, in English, at least, of N. S. But a continual intermixture of dates of both styles is intolerable.

What day of New Style corresponds to the 11th December, 1620, Old Style?

The day was Monday. The use of means we put into the hands of the readers of the series of Plymouth Pilgrim Genealogies; the calendar affixed to said series will show the merest child that the day was 21st December, New Style. [See the page on Chronology.]

The correction from Old to New Style was first attempted in 1769, by the Old Colony Club. There were then eleven days' difference—a day more in consequence of having wrongfully made the year 1700 a leap year, and so they inconsiderately added eleven instead of ten days to the Old Style date.

But when did the Pilgrims land? On Saturday, 11th November, some went ashore at the wrist of Cape Cod, Truro, for wood. On Monday, 13th November, the women went ashore there and washed, and some men were on shore, well armed, both that day and the following. On Wednesday the 15th (16th, according to Morton's New England Memorial), an expedition of sixteen well-armed men went to Pamet River, in Truro, found some maize, and a kettle, and returned to the ship on Friday. On Monday, 27th November, twenty-four men start off in the shallop, which had not before been ready; they seem to have been out till Friday, at least, if not longer.

These two expeditions were but preliminary adventures. Monday and Tuesday of the next week seem to have been devoted to discussion, and the decision seems to have been not to weigh anchor till the place of settlement had been found.

On Wednesday, 6th December, O. S., they sent a party; that is, the leaders themselves, Carver, Bradford, and Winslow, went with fifteen other men, including seamen, coasting over to the very bight of the bay in two days. Attacked by the Nauset Indians on Friday, the 8th, they at length abandoned the exploration of that part, and struck out boldly to the north-west—to the mainland, where Coppin, the pilot, thought he recollected a harbor. Storm comes on; the shallop is disabled, and they are drifted without choice of theirs into Plymouth harbor. They lay under the lee of Clark's Island that night, and landed on it, Saturday morning, 9th December, in so exhausted a state that they made no effort to do more than render themselves comfortable, and prepare for the Sabbath, 10th December. This Saturday, the 9th, may have been needed to repair damages.

On Monday, 11th Dec., O. S., it being certain that they were in a good harbor, if deep enough, the boat set a party ashore—probably in Duxbury, or the north part of Plymouth—and proceeded to take soundings. The shore party went southward, till they came to a considerable brook running into the harbor. Convenient to it they found a rock on which at a suitable stage of the tide the women and the sick might step ashore from the shallop without wading.

Near Cape Cod Harbor, where the ship lay, was no fresh water. The first American water tasted by any of the company was at Dyer's Swamp, in Truro, on the morning of the 16th November, by a party who had been more than twenty-four hours ashore. "There we saw a deer, and found springs of fresh water, and sat down and drank our first New-England water with as much delight as we ever drank in all our lives."—But at Plymouth, was a brook which ran down a hill and fell into the harbor. This was enough; they were in the place which the Lord had emptied for them. The hands that had tilled the maize, of which they saw the remains, were all beneath the sod; and the fields were waiting the advent of a new race to till them. That very day they returned to the ship rejoicing.

Not such was their greeting from the ship. In fear they climbed her side, and William Bradford was in the presence of his dead wife, her whom he had left in health the last Wednesday, and now it was only Monday night. She had fallen overboard Thursday, the 7th.

It was not till Friday, 15th December, that they raised their anchor from where it first touched American ground. [From 11th November to 15th December = thirty-four days.] So much of deliberation must there be over an irrevocable step.

Driven by stress of weather from the very mouth of Plymouth harbor back to her anchorage, the Mayflower finally left Cape Cod on Saturday, 16th December, thirty-five days from its first anchorage; and that night found her berth for all the winter. Sabbath, the 17th December, was kept aboard her. Monday and Tuesday, Captain Jones and some of his sailors spent in explorations.

"On the morning of the twentieth [Wednesday], AFTER IMPLORING HEAVEN FOR GUIDANCE, a considerable number LANDED, with the view of selecting a location for settlement."

The women had not, before, so easy access to the shore as the Rock afforded. Their taste was to be consulted, and they probably went ashore in large numbers. Some talk was had as to who should first set foot on shore. Pretty Mary Chilton is said to have claimed the privilege. Let us not doubt that this was conceded to the girl, and let the descendants of John Alden be satisfied with the idea that of all the Mayflower bore across the Atlantic, he was the first, on the 11th November, 1620, to step upon the soil of the New World at Cape Cod harbor. But here, on this memorable occasion, which has evoked the genius of poet and painter, place aux dames!—let the ladies take precedence. The scene is familiar to artists, scholars, and antiquarians, for Charles Lucey's painting in the capitol, at Washington, and copies of it, are familiar to most of our readers. * * * * *

We see the ship "a mile and a half from the shore," that shore on which, but a moment ago, there was not a European in all New England, but on which never again for an instant shall the busy foot of the white man cease its forward march.

Even now, though the original surface of the Rock has taken refuge elsewhere from the remorseless hammer of the relic-hunter, we can, in imagination, reconstruct the same.

"The waves that brought them o'er
Still roll in the bay and throw their spray,
As they break upon the shore:
Still roll in the bay as they rolled THAT day,
When the Mayflower moored below."

Now, when was "THAT DAY?"

Not 11th December, O. S., when the Mayflower was in Cape Cod harbor, hull down more than twenty-five miles away. The men set ashore from Clarke's Island, that Monday morning, to explore, did not constitute the landing. They left, these remained, from Wednesday, 20th; and on Saturday, the 23d, the remainder of the party bid adieu to the Mayflower, went on shore, and began to fell and carry timber. The case is a clear one, then; THE Landing of the Pilgrims was on Wednesday, 20th December, 1620, O. S., nearly ten days after the winter solstice, which, in New Style, comes every year within twenty-four hours of the noon of 21st December, but which then had fallen so far from its proper place as to come about the 11th. "The days had begun to lengthen and the cold to strengthen" more than a week before this memorable epoch, and its proper anniversary is the penultimate day of the New Year, the THIRTIETH OF DECEMBER.

A dreary winter followed the landing. Elizabeth (Barker) Winslow, one of the victims, died 24 March, 1621. She saw not the New World in its robe of green; but, as when Moses desired to enter the earthly Canaan, God gave him a better inheritance, she that had been the help-meet and companion of Edward¹ Winslow in his wanderings, when her work was done, opened her eyes on "Sweet fields, arrayed in living green,

And rivers of delight."

As in cruel war—when brother falls at brother's side, the survivor looks not around, but a stranger shoulder touches his shoulder, so it was here. It shows the cruel necessities of the time, when one hundred and two persons had been assigned to nineteen houses, of one room each, to note the brief interval of Edward Winslow's widowhood.

Strange to say, we have not the exact date of the birth of Peregrine White, in Cape Cod Harbor, unless we take the statement of Dr. Thatcher, that it was precisely at the close of that Nauset Indian attack, 8th December: it is said to have been "in the latter part of November," and "during the absence of the expedition that set out on 6th Dec." Mr. William White, his father, "died the following spring." The widowed mother, when her babe—the first born in New England—was just turned five months old, became the first bride of the colony, by marriage to Mr. Edward Winslow, 12th May, 1621.

We quote with interest from a distinguished writer, a felicitous statement of the circumstances attending this marriage, and of the principles involved in the method thereof.

As yet there had never been a Christian wedding on the soil of New England, and, but for the breaking up of families in the mortality of the first winter, there might have been none, till some of the children brought in the May-Flower had become old enough to marry. Edward Winslow's wife, Elizabeth, died in that mortality, and his house was left to him desolate. William White, one of the chief men in the colony, had died before her; and his widow, Susanna, was left with two little boys to care for, (one of them, an infant, born while the May-Flower was lying at Cape Cod); and with neither man-servant nor maid-servant to help her, for they had died also. It cannot be thought strange, when the circumstances of the case are considered, that at an early day, Edward Winslow and Susanna White were married. At that time, and long afterward, there could be no lawful marriage in England without sacerdotal intervention and the use of ceremonies which Puritan scrupulousness denounced as superstitious. By the compromises of the Anglican Reformation, marriage had ceased to be in name a sacrament, without being distinctly recognized as anything either less or greater than a sacrament. In Holland, the Pilgrims had seen what is now called civil marriage; and by that method they had themselves (many of them) been joined in holy wedlock. There the law was, "that those of any religion, after lawful and open publication, coming before the magistrates in the town-house, or stadt-house, were to be by them orderly married, one to another." Accordingly, the first wedding in the Pilgrim colony was an open contempt of the canon law maintained in England, and, to that extent, it was an informal declaration of independence.

In conformity with "the laudable custom of the Low Countries in which they had lived," marriage was thought most requisite to be performed by the magistrate, as "being a civil thing upon which many questions about inheritances do depend," and which for other reasons come properly under the cognizance of the state—a thing, too, which is "nowhere found in the Gospel to be laid upon ministers as a part of their office." Therefore as Adam and Eve, in the beginning of the world, were married without any priestly intervention—as Boaz took Ruth, the Moabite widow, to be his wife, before the elders of Bethlehem—so Edward Winslow and Susanna White, before the magistrate, Governor Bradford, and with public solemnities, entered into the sacred covenant of marriage. Nor was theirs a Godless wedding. Acknowledging God in all their ways, they acknowledged him especially in that momentous act. They married "in the Lord," and the church, we need not doubt, invoked a blessing on their union. Thus in the first New England wedding, a precedent was given which has never yet been set aside, and which marked clearly the distinction between the jurisdiction of the civil power in "causes matrimonial," and the legitimate jurisdiction of the church.¹

The May-Flower, on her return, sailed 5th April, 1621 and arrived in England 6th May, bearing doubtless, letters from Edward and Gilbert Winslow to their brother John, and perhaps Kenelm. The world would gladly pay a great price for those letters. The only known result of them was that the ship Fortune, which first started from London in the early part of July, and arrived at Plymouth 9 November 1621, brought among her passengers to the New Colony,

JOHN¹ WINSLOW.

The age of John,¹ at this epoch, to be precise, was 24 years and 207 days. The departure of Edward¹ the year before must have left him the eldest son at home, and the youngest child, when the second left the paternal roof for New England, was in his sixteenth year. At the time of our writing, the date of their father's death is unknown to us. Neither do we know whether the sisters, Eleanor and Magdalen, were living. If so, they may have been married, and probably remained in England, as we find no trace of them in America. Mr. Young, in his Chronicles, states that neither of them came to America.

We find that the father was not living in 1631. The most natural presumption is that at the time that John¹ left Droitwich, arrangements had been perfected for the removal of the family to America. Kenelm¹, who was then 30 years old, and Joseph¹, 24 years old, probably came to Plymouth together in 1629. They were made free men together, 1st January, 1632-3, and it is not probable that either property of parent was left behind.

Having stated this much, in a preliminary way, of what is known of the five sons of Edward^A Winslow of Droitwich, we now proceed to sketch more especially their career in this country. As Governor Edward¹ was the eldest of the five sons, and their pioneer in the emigration to this country, and his career so interwoven with the Pilgrims, both in Holland and America, we have thought proper to introduce a sketch of his life and labors before proceeding to give the history and genealogy of the junior members of the family.

EDWARD WINSLOW.

The time and birthplace of this eminently useful and heroic man have already been noted.¹

Of his education and first appearance in life we have no certain knowledge. He appears, however, to have been a well-educated and accomplished man. In the course of his travels on the continent of Europe he went to Leyden, as we have seen, and there became acquainted with Mr. Robinson, and the church under his pastoral charge. To this church he joined himself as early as the year 1617; married 16 May, 1618, and settled in that city, where he remained until the church had decided upon a removal to America.²

He resolved to share their fortunes, and accordingly came hither with the first company of emigrants, in 1620.

The account of their departure is copied from his Brief Narration :

“These things being agreed, the major part stayed, and the pastor with them for the present; but all intended (except a very few who had rather we would have stayed) to follow after. The minor part, with Mr. Brewster, their elder, resolved to enter upon this great work. (But take notice, the difference of number was not great.) And when the ship was ready to carry us away, the brethren that stayed having again solemnly sought the Lord with us and for us, and we further engaging ourselves mutually as before, they, I say, that stayed at Leyden feasted us that were to go, at our pastor’s house, being large; where we refreshed ourselves, after tears, with singing of psalms, making joyful melody in our hearts, as well as with the voice, there being many of our congregation very expert in music; and indeed it was the sweetest melody that ever mine ears heard. After this they accompanied us to Delph’s Haven, where we were to embark, and there feasted us again; and after prayer performed by our pastor, where a flood of tears was poured out, they accompanied us to the ship, but were not able to speak one to another for the abundance of sorrow to part. But we only going aboard (the ship lying to the quay and ready to set sail, the wind being fair), we gave them a volley of small shot and three pieces of ordnance, and so lifting up our hands to each other, and our hearts for each other to the Lord our God, we departed, and found His presence with us, in the midst of our manifold straits he carried us through. And if any doubt this Relation, the Dutch, as I hear, at Delph’s Haven preserve the memory of it to this day, and will inform them.—Young’s Pilgrim Fathers, Chap. XXV. p. 384.

¹Extract from the records of St. Peter’s church, at Droitwich; “1595, October 20, baptized Edward, son of Edward Winslow, born the previous Friday”—which was the 19th. His mother’s name was Magdalen [Ollyver,] surname unknown, and she was married 3—[4] November, 1594.—Young’s Chron., 274.

²“Winslow was superior in condition to all or most of his companions, is believed to have become acquainted with Robinson while on his travels in Holland; and at twenty-two years of age he joined the society, three years before the emigration.—Palfrey’s Hist. of New England, vol. I. p. 160.

“He was a gentleman of the best family of any of the Plymouth planters, his father, Edward Winslow, Esq., being a person of some figure at Draughtwich, in Worcestershire.—Hutchinson’s Hist. Mass., I: 172.

“Of a very reputable family.”—Ibid., II: p. 408.

“I living three years under his ministry before we began the work of plantation in New England.”—Brief Narration by Winslow, p. 93.

As has been already stated, Winslow's name is the third on the list of those who subscribed the Covenant, or voluntary compact, before their disembarkation at Cape Cod. He was one of the first who came on shore to seek out the most eligible place for founding a settlement in this then wild and unknown land. "In all the initiatory labors for establishing their little colony, the nucleus of a great nation, he was ever active and influential. Possessing a sound and well-disciplined mind, a pious heart, and happy address, he was eminently useful in mitigating the sufferings, and promoting the welfare of the pilgrims, who, on account of the respectability of his family, and the excellent qualities of his mind and heart, appear to have regarded him with more than ordinary respect, and with a confidence which was certainly never misplaced."—New England Hist. and Gen. Register, 1850, p. 298.

When the great Sachem of the Wampanoags, Massasoit, first made his appearance, and through a messenger invited an interview with the settlers, Mr. Winslow was deputed by Governor Carver to meet him; and he voluntarily placed himself as a hostage in the hands of the Indians, while their chief, Massasoit, held his conference with the Governor.¹

When Mr. Winslow arrived, his family consisted of himself, his wife Elizabeth, and three other persons.

His wife died on the 24th of March, 1620–1, and, on the 12th of May following, he married Susanna, widow of William White, and mother of Peregrine, the first English child born in New England. This was the first marriage solemnized in the colony.

In July,² 1621, Mr. Winslow went in company with Stephen Hopkins, to visit the Sachem, Massasoit, at Pokanoket. The design of this visit is related in Bradford's Life.³ The particular circumstances of the visit may be properly detailed here, in the very words of the original narrative, supposed to have been written by Winslow.

This account is interesting, as illustrative of Winslow's practical, sagacious mind and also of the savage life in the wilderness, into which the Pilgrims thus found themselves thrown.

"We set forward the 10th of June,⁴ about nine o'clock in the morning, our guide [Tisquantum] resolving that night to rest at Namaschet,⁵ a town under Massasoit, and conceived by us to be very near, because the inhabitants flocked so thick upon every slight occasion amongst us; but we found it to be some fifteen English miles. On the way, we found some ten or twelve men, women and children, which had pestered us till we were weary of them; perceiving that (as the manner of them all is) where victual is easiest to be got, there they live, especially in the summer; by reason whereof, our bay affording many lobsters, they resort every spring-tide thither, and now returned with us to Namaschet. Thither we came about three o'clock in the afternoon, the inhabitants entertaining us with joy, in the best manner they could, giving us a kind of bread, called by them Mazium, and the spawn of shads, which then they got in abundance, insomuch as they gave us spoons to eat them; with these they boiled musty acorns, but, of the shads we eat heartily.

“After this they desired one of our men to shoot at a crow, complaining what damage they sustained in their corn by them; who, shooting some four score off, and killing, they much admired at it, as other shots on other occasions.

“After this, Tisquantum told us we should hardly in one day reach Packanokick,¹ moving us to go some eight miles further, where we should find more store and better victuals than there. Being willing to hasten our journey, we went and came thither at sun-setting, where we found many of the Namaschucks (they so calling the men of Namaschet), fishing upon a ware [wear] which they had made on a river² which belonged to them, where they caught abundance of bass. These welcomed us also, gave us of their fish, and we them of our victuals, not doubting but we should have enough where'er we came. There we lodged in the open fields, for houses they had none, though they spent most of the summer there. The head of this river is reported to be not far from the place of our abode; upon it are and have been many towns, it being a good length. The ground is very good on both sides, it being for the most part cleared. Thousands of men have lived there, which died in a great plague not long since; and pity it was, and is, to see so many goodly fields, and so well seated, without men to dress and manure the same.

“The next morning we brake our fast, took our leave and departed, being then accompanied with six salvages. Having gone about six miles by the river's side, at a known shoal place, it being low water, they spake to us to put off our breeches, for we must wade through. Here let me not forget the valour and courage of some of the salvages on the opposite side of the river; for there were remaining alive only two men both aged.

“These two, espying a company of men entering the river, ran very swiftly and low in the grass to meet us at the bank, where, with shrill voices and great courage, standing, charged upon us with their bows, and demanded what we were, supposing us to be enemies, and thinking to take advantage of us in the water; but seeing we were friends, they welcomed us with such food as they had, and we bestowed a small bracelet of beads on them.

“Thus far we are sure the tide ebbs and flows. Having here again refreshed ourselves, we proceeded on our journey, the weather being very hot for travel, yet the country so well watered that a man could scarce be dry, but he should have a spring at hand to cool his thirst, besides small rivers in abundance. The salvages will not willingly drink but at a spring-head. When we came to any small brook where no bridge was, two of them desired to carry us through of their own accords; also, fearing we were or would be weary, offered to carry our pieces [guns]; also, if we would lay off any of our clothes, we should have them carried; and as the one of them had found more special kindness from one of the messengers, and the other salvage from the other, so they showed their thankfulness accordingly in affording us all help and furtherance in the journey.

“As we passed along, we observed that there were few places by the river but had been inhabited, by reason whereof much ground was clear, save of weeds, which grew higher than our heads. There is much good timber, both oak, walnut-tree, fir, beech, and exceeding great chestnut-trees.

“After, we came to a town of Massasoyt’s, where we ate oysters and other fish. From thence we went to Packanokick, but Massasoyt was not at home. There we stayed, he being sent for. When news was brought of his coming, our guide, Tisquantum, requested that at our meeting we should discharge our pieces. But one of us going about to charge his piece, the women and children, through fear to see him take up his piece, ran away and could not be pacified till he laid it down again, who afterward were better informed by our interpreter.

“Massasoyt being come, we discharged our pieces and saluted him, who, after their manner, kindly welcomed us, and took us into his house, and set us down by him, where, having delivered our message and presents, and having put the coat on his back and the chain about his neck, he was not a little proud to behold himself, and his men also, to see their king so bravely attired.

“For answer to our message he told us we were welcome, and he would gladly continue that peace and friendship which was between him and us, and for his men, they should no more pester us as they had done; also that he would send to Paomet, and would help us with corn for seed, according to our request.

“This being done his men gathered near to him, to whom he turned himself and made a great speech; they sometimes interposing, and, as it were, confirming and applauding him in that he said.

“The meaning whereof was (as far as we could learn) thus: Was not he, Massasoyt, commander of the country about them? Was not such a town his, and the people of it? And should not they bring their skins unto us? To which they answered, they were his, and would be at peace with us, and bring their skins to us. After this manner he named at least thirty places, and their answer was as aforesaid to every one; so that, as it was delightful, it was tedious unto us.

“This being ended, he lighted tobacco for us, and fell to discoursing of England and of the King’s majesty, marvelling that he would live without a wife. Also he talked of the Frenchmen, bidding us not to suffer them to come to Narroghiganset, for it was King James’ country, and he also was King James’ man. Late it grew, but victuals he offered none, for indeed he had not any, being he came so newly home. So we desired to go to rest. He laid us on the bed with himself and his wife; they at one end, and we at the other; it being only planks, laid a foot from the ground, and a thin mat upon them. Two more of his chief men, for want of room, pressed by and upon us, so that we were worse weary of our lodging than of our journey.

“The next day, being Thursday, many of their sachems or petty governors came to see us, and many of their men also. There they went to their manner of games for skins and knives.

“There we challenged them to shoot with them for skins, but they durst not, only they desired to see one of us to shoot at a mark; who, shooting with hail-shot, they wondered to see the mark so full of holes.

“About one o’clock Massasoyt brought two fishes, that he had shot. These being boiled, there were at least forty looked for share in them; the most eat of them. This meal only we had in two nights and a day; and, had not one of us bought a partridge, we had taken our journey fasting. Very importunate he was to have us stay with him longer; but we desired to spend the Sabbath at home, and feared we should be light-headed for want of sleep; for what with bad lodging, the savages' barbarous singing (for they use to sing themselves asleep), lice and fleas within doors, and mosquitoes without, we could hardly sleep all the time of our being there; we much fearing that if we should stay any longer, we should not be able to recover home for want of strength.

“On Friday morning, before sunrising, we took our leave and departed, Massasoit being both grieved and ashamed that he could no better entertain us; and retaining Tisquantum to send from place to place to procure truck for us, and appointed another [guide], Tokamahamon, in his place, whom he had found faithful before and after upon all occasions.”

This narrative gives us just an idea of the hospitality, and also of the poverty of the Indians.

They gladly entertain strangers with the best they can afford; but it is familiar to them to endure long abstinence. Those who visit them must be content to fare as they do, or carry their own provisions and be willing to share with them.

Mr. Winslow's next excursion was by sea to Monahigon (or, as the name is now written, Monhegon), an island a few leagues east of the mouth of the Kennebeck river, to procure a supply of bread from the fishing vessels which resorted to the eastern coast in the spring of 1622. He obtained a supply, which, though not large, was readily given to the suffering colony, and, being prudently managed in the distribution, amounted to one quarter of a pound a day for each person till the next harvest. By means of this excursion, the people of New Plymouth obtained a knowledge of the eastern coast, of which they afterwards availed themselves in the establishment of a beneficial traffic with the natives.¹

In the spring of the following year (1623), Mr. Winslow made a second visit to Massasoit, on account of his sickness,² the particular circumstances of which are thus given in his own words:³

“News came to Plymouth that Massassowat⁴ was like to die, and that, at the same time, there was a Dutch ship driven so high on the shore, by stress of weather, right before his dwelling, that, till the tides increased, she could not be got off. Now it being a commendable manner of the Indians, when any especially of note are dangerously sick, for all that profess friendship to them to visit them in their extremity, either in persons, or else to send some acceptable persons to them; therefore it was thought meet, being a good and warrantable action, that, as we had ever professed friendship, so we should now maintain the same by observing this their laudable custom; and the rather, because we desired to have some conference with the Dutch, not knowing when we should have so fit an opportunity.

“To that end, myself having formerly been there, and understanding in some measure the Dutch tongue, the governor [Bradford] again laid this service upon myself, and fitted me with some cordials to administer to him; having one Master John Hampden, a gentleman of London, who then wintered with us, and desired much to see the country, for my consort, and Hobbamock for our guide. So we set forward, and lodged the first night at Namasket, where we had friendly entertainment.

"The next day, about one of the clock, we came to a ferry in Conbatant's¹ country, where, upon the discharge of my piece, divers Indians came to us from a house not far off. They told us that Massasoyt was dead and that day buried; and that the Dutch would be gone before we could get thither, having hove off their ship already. This news struck us blank, but especially Hobbamock, who desired we might return with all speed. I told him I would first think of it, considering now, that he being dead, Conbatant was the most like to succeed him, and that we were not above three miles from Mattapuyst,² his dwelling-place. Although he were but a hollow-hearted friend towards us, I thought no time so fit as this to enter into more friendly terms with him and the rest of the sachems thereabout; hoping, through the blessing of God, it would be a means, in that unsettled state, to settle their affections toward us, and though it were somewhat dangerous, in respect to our personal safety, because myself and Hobbamock had been employed upon a service against him, which he might now fitly revenge; yet, esteeming it the best means, leaving the event to God in his mercy, I resolved to put it in practice, if Master Hamden and Hobbamock durst attempt it with me, whom I found willing to that or any other course, might tend to the general good. So we went towards Mattapuyst.

"In the way, Hobbamock, manifesting a troubled spirit, brake forth into these speeches: "Neen womasu Sagimus, etc. My loving sachem! Many have I known, but never any like thee!" And turning to me he said whilst I lived I should never see his like amongst the Indians, saying he was no liar, he was not bloody and cruel like the other Indians. In anger and passion he was soon reclaimed; easy to be reconciled towards such as had offended him; ruled by reason in such measure as he would not scorn the advice of mean men; and that he governed his men better with few strokes than others did with many; truly loving where he loved; yea, he feared we had not a faithful friend left among the Indians, showing how he oft-times restrained their malice, etc.; continuing a long speech, with such signs of lamentation and unfeigned sorrow, as it would have made the hardest heart relent.

"At length we came to Mattapuyst, and went to the Sachimo comaco, for so they called the sachem's place, though they call an ordinary house witeo; but Conbatant, the Sachem, was not at home, but at Puckanokick, which was some five or six miles off. The squa-sachem, for so they call the sachem's wife, gave us friendly entertainment. Here we inquired again concerning Massassowat: they thought him dead, but knew no certainty. Whereupon I hired one to go, with all expedition, to Puckanokick, that we might know the certainty thereof, and withal, to acquaint Conbatant with our there being. About half an hour before sun-setting the messenger returned, and told us that he was not yet dead, though there was no hope we should find him living. Upon this we were much revived, and set forward with all speed, though it was late within night ere we got thither. About two of the clock that afternoon, the Dutchmen departed; so that in that respect our journey was frustrate.

"When we came thither, we found the house so full of men as we could scarce get in, though they used their best diligence to make way for us. There were they in the midst of their charms for him, making such a hellish noise as it distempered us that were well, and therefore unlike to ease him that was sick. About him were six or eight women, who chafed his arms, legs, and thighs, to keep heat in him. When they had made an end of their charming, one told him that his friends, the English, were come to see him. Having understanding left, but his sight was wholly gone, he asked who was come? they told him Winsnow (for they cannot pronounce the letter l, but ordinarily n in the place thereof). He desired to speak with me. When I came to him, and they told him of it, he put forth his hand to me, which I took; then he said twice, though very inwardly, 'Keen Winsnow?' which is to say, 'Art thou Winslow?' I answered 'Ahhe,' that is, Yes. Then he doubled these words: 'Matta neen wonchanet namen, Winsnow!' that is to say, 'O Winslow, I shall never see thee again!' Then I called Hobbamock, and desired him to tell Massassowat, that the governor, hearing of his sickness, was sorry for the same; and though, by reason of many businesses, he could not come himself, yet he sent me with such things for him as he thought most likely to do him good in this extremity; and whereof if he please to take, I would presently give him; which he desired; and having a confection of many comfortable conserves, on the point of my knife, I gave him some, which I could scarce get through his teeth. When it was dissolved in his mouth, he swallowed the juice of it; whereat those that were about him much rejoiced, saying he had not swallowed anything in two days before. Then I desired to see his mouth, which was exceedingly furred, and his tongue swelled in such a manner as it was not possible for him to eat such meat as they had, his passage being stopped up. Then I washed his mouth, and scraped his tongue, and got abundance of corruption out of the same. After which I gave him more of the confection, which he swallowed with more readiness. Then, he desiring to drink, I dissolved some of it in water, and gave him thereof.

Within half an hour this wrought a great alteration in him, in the eyes of all that beheld him. Presently after his sight began to come to him. . . . Then I gave him more, and told him of a mishap we had by the way, in breaking a bottle of drink, which the governor also sent him, saying, if he would send any of his men to Patuxet, I would send for more of the same; also for chickens to make him broth, and for other things, which I knew were good for him; and would stay the return of his messenger, if he desired. This he took marvellous kindly, and appointed some, who were ready to go by two of the clock in the morning; against which time I made ready a letter, declaring therein our good success, the state of his body, &c., desiring to send such things as I sent for, and such physic as the surgeon durst administer to him.

"He requested me that, the day following, I would take my piece, and kill him some fowl, and make him some English pottage, such as he had eaten at Plymouth; which I promised. After, his stomach coming to him, I must needs make him some without fowl, before I went abroad, which somewhat troubled me; but being I must do somewhat, I caused a woman to bruise some corn, and take the flour from it, and set over the grit, or broken corn, in a pipkin (for they have earthen pots of all sizes). When the day broke, we went out, it being now March, to seek herbs, but could not find any but strawberry leaves, of which I gathered a handful, and put into the same; and, because I had nothing to relish it, I went forth again, and pulled up a sassafras root, and sliced a piece thereof, and boiled it till it had a good relish, and then took it out again. The broth being boiled, I strained it through my handkerchief, and gave him at least a pint, which he drank, and liked it very well. After this his sight mended, more and more; . . . and he took some rest; insomuch as we with admiration blessed God for giving His blessing to such raw and ignorant means, making no doubt of his recovery, himself and all of them acknowledging us the instruments of his preservation. That morning he caused me to spend in going from one to another amongst those that were sick in the town, requesting me to wash their mouths also, and give to each of them some of the same I gave him, saying that they were good folk. This pains I took with willingness, though it were much offensive to me, not being accustomed with such poisonous savors.

“The messengers were now returned, but finding his stomach come to him, he would not have the chickens killed, but kept them for breed. Neither durst we give him any physic, which was then sent, because his body was so much altered since our instructions; neither saw we any need; not doubting now of his recovery if he were careful. Many whilst we were there came to see him; some, by their report, from a place not less than a hundred miles. Upon this his recovery he brake forth into these speeches: ‘Now I see the English are my friends and love me; and whilst I live, I will never forget this kindness they have showed me.’ Whilst we were there our entertainment exceeded all other strangers. At our coming away, he called Hobba-mock to him, and privately revealed the plot of the Massacheuseucks against Master Weston’s colony, and so against us. But he would neither join therein nor give way to any of his. With this he charged him to acquaint me by the way, that I might inform the Governor. Being fitted for our return, we took leave of him, who returned many thanks to our Governor, and also to ourselves, for our labor and love: the like did all that were about him. So we departed.”

In the Autumn of the same year, (1623) Mr. Winslow went to England in the ship Ann, which sailed on the 10th September, as agent for the colony, to give an account of their proceedings, and of their condition and prospects, to the adventurers, and to procure such supplies as were necessary. While he was in England, he prepared for publication a narrative of the settlement and transactions of the colony at New Plymouth, under this title: “Good News from New England: or a true relation of things very remarkable at the Plantation of Plimoth in New England, showing the wondrous Providence and goodness of God, in their preservation and continuance, being delivered from many apparent deaths and dangers, &c. Written by E. W., who hath borne a part in the forenamed troubles, and there lived since their first Arrivall.”

This narrative, which was first printed at London, in 1624, in sixty-six small quarto pages, embraces the history of the colony from the return of the ship Fortune in December, 1621, to the 10th September, 1623, when the author sailed for England.

The book, in an abridged and mutilated form, was reprinted in 1625, by Purchas, in the fourth volume of his Pilgrims; and has been of great service to succeeding historians. This abridgement was again published in 1802, in I Mass. Hist. Coll., viii, 239-276: and the omitted passages were supplied twenty years afterwards in II, Mass. Hist. Coll., ix. Young in his Chronicles reprints the work, “for the first time entire and in a legible form, from the original London edition.” Mr. Winslow was induced to publish this work, in order that the friends of the colony in England might have a continuation of the narrative from the point where Mourt’s Relation ends, and also to correct the misrepresentations which had grown out of the breaking up and dispersion, a short time before, of Weston's colony at Wessagusset, composed in chief of idle and vicious persons, "who, as they were a stain to Old England that bred them, in respect of their lives and manners amongst the Indians, so it is to be feared, will be no less to New England, in their vile and clamorous reports because she would not foster them in their desired idle courses." Appended to this work is a "Relation of such religious and civill Lawes and Customes as are in practice amongst the Indians adjoining to them at this day. As also what commodities are there to be rayed for the maintenance of that and other Plantations in the said Country."

This memoir excited great attention at the time it was first published, and is, even now, when the manners and customs of the aboriginals of New England are better understood, read with interest. In concluding, after speaking of the soil and productions of the country, he alludes to the extravagant hopes which too often influence the emigrant, and gives a salutary warning to all such as "with too great lightness undertake such courses; who peradventure strain themselves and their friends for their passage thither, and are no sooner there, than seeing their foolish imaginations made void, are at their wit's ends, and would give ten times so much for their return. And can any be so simple as to conceive that the fountains should stream forth wine or beer, or the woods and rivers be like butchers' shops, or fish-mongers' stalls, where they might have things taken to their hands? If thou canst not live without such things, and hast no means to procure the one, and wilt not take pains for the other, nor hast ability to employ others for thee, rest where thou art; for as a proud heart, a dainty tooth, a beggar's purse and an idle hand be here intolerable, so that person that hath these qualities there is much more abominable."

In the following Spring, (March, 1624) Mr. Winslow returned in the ship Charity from England, having been absent six months, bringing a good supply of clothing and other necessaries, and, what was of more value than any other supply, the first neat cattle ever brought into New England.¹ The colonists learned from Mr. Winslow that a strong party had been raised up against them amongst the adventurers, who were extremely anxious to prevent Robinson and the remainder of his church from emigrating to America.

The following letter written by Edward¹ Winslow, probably to George Morton, who came out in the next ship, the Anne, will further show the friendly relations and intercourse which prevailed between the Pilgrims and the Indians—also the condition of the natives at that period, and the available resources of the country.

LOVING AND OLD FRIEND²:

Although I have received no letter from you, by this ship, yet forasmuch as I know you expect the performance of my promise, which was, to write unto you truly and faithfully of all things, I have therefore at this time sent unto you accordingly, referring you for further satisfaction to our more large Relations. * * *

We have found the Indians very faithful to their covenant of peace with us, very loving, and ready to pleasure us. We often go to them, and they come to us.

¹This fixes the date of the first importation of neat cattle, three heifers and a bull being brought over at this time. Bradford, in Prince, 146. The settlers were destitute of milk the first four years. The first notice of horses is in 1644. Before their introduction, (says Thacher), it was not uncommon for people to ride on bulls; and there is a tradition in the Old Colony, that when John Alden went to the Cape to be married to Priscilla Mullins, he covered his bull with a handsome piece of broadcloth, and rode on his back. On his return he seated his wife on the bull, and led the uncouth animal by a rope fixed in the nose-ring. This sample of primitive gallantry would ill compare with that of Abraham's servant, when, by proxy, he gallanted Rebekah on her journey, with a splendid retinue of damsels and servants seated on camels, Isaac going out to meet her.—Gen. xx v.

²This letter I think was addressed to George Morton.—"September 13, anno Dom. 1621."

Some of us have been fifty miles by land in the country with them, the occasions and relations whereof you shall understand by our general and more full declaration of such things as are worth the noting. Yea, it hath pleased God so to possess the Indians with a fear of us and love unto us, that not only the greatest king amongst them, called Massasoyt, but also all the princes and peoples round about us, have either made suit unto us, or been glad of any occasion to make peace with us ; so that seven of them at once have sent their messengers to us to that end.¹ Yea an isle at sea which we never saw, hath also, together with the former, yielded willingly to be under the protection and subject to our sovereign lord King James. * *

For the temper of the air here it agreeth well with that in England ; and if there be any difference at all, this is somewhat hotter in summer. Some think it to be colder in winter ; but I cannot out of experience so say. The air is very clear and not foggy, as hath been reported. I never in my life remember a more seasonable year than we have here enjoyed ; and if we have once but kine, horses, and sheep, I make no question but men might live as contented here as in any part of the world. For fish and fowl we have great abundance. Fresh cod in the summer is but coarse meat with us. Our bay is full of lobsters all the summer, and affordeth variety of other fish. In September we can take a hogshead of eels in a night, with small labor, and can dig them out of their beds all winter. We have muscles at our doors. Oysters we have none near, but we can have them brought by the Indians when we will. All the spring-time the earth sendeth forth naturally very good sallet herbs. Here are grapes, white and red, and very sweet and strong also ; strawberries, gooseberries, raspas, (raspberries) etc. ; plums of three sorts, white, black, and red, being almost as good as a damson ; abundance of roses, white, red and damask ; single but very sweet indeed. The country wanteth only industrious men to employ ; for it would grieve your hearts, if, as I, you had seen so many miles together by goodly rivers uninhabited ; and withal, to consider those parts of the world wherein you live to be even greatly burthened with abundance of people. These things I thought good to let you understand, being the truth of things as near as I could experimentally take knowledge of, and that you might on our behalf give God thanks, who hath dealt so favorably with us.

Our supply of men from you came the 9th of November, 1621, putting in at Cape Cod, some eight or ten leagues from us.² * * * *

When it pleaseth God we are settled and fitted for the fishing business and other trading. I doubt not but by the blessing of God the gain will give content to all. In the mean time, that we have gotten we have sent by this ship ; and though it be not much, yet it will witness for us that we have not been idle, considering the smallness of our number all this summer. We hope the merchants will accept of it, and be encouraged to furnish us with things needful for further employment, which will also encourage us to put forth ourselves to the uttermost.

¹“Know all men by these presents, that we whose names are underwritten, do acknowledge ourselves to be the loyal subjects of King James, king of Great Britia, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. In witness whereof, and as a testimonial of the same, we have subscribed our names or marks as followeth :

Obquamehud,
Cawracome, Obbatinnua, Nattawahunt,

²The Fortune, a small vessel of 55 tons, brought over Robert Cushman and 35 persons, a part of whom, no doubt, were the 20 that put back in the Speedwell. For list of passengers, etc., See Memorial of John¹ Winslow.

Now because I expect your coming unto us, with other of our friends, whose company we much desire, I thought good to advertise you of a few things needful. Be careful to have a very good bread-room to put your biscuits in. Let your cask for beer and water be iron-bound, for the first tire, if not more. Let not your meat be dry-salted; none can better do it than the sailors. Let your meal be so hard trod in your cask that you shall need an adz or hatchet to work it out with. Trust not too much on us for corn at this time, for by reason of this last company that came, depending wholly upon us, we shall have little enough until harvest. Be careful to have some of your meal to spend by the way; it will refresh you. Build your cabins as open as you can, and bring good store of clothes and bedding with you. Bring every man a musket or fowling-piece. Let your piece be long in the barrel, and fear not the weight of it, for most of our shooting is from stands. Bring juice of lemons, and take it fasting; it is of good use. For hot waters, aniseed water is the best; but use it sparingly. If you bring anything for comfort in the country, butter or sallet oil, or both, is very good. Our Indian corn, even the coarsest, maketh as pleasant meat as rice; therefore spare that, unless needed by the way. Bring paper and linseed oil for your windows¹ with cotton yarn for your lamps. Let your shot be most for big fowls, and bring store of powder and shot. I forbear further to write for the present, hoping to see you by the next return. So I take my leave, commending you to the Lord for a safe conduct unto us, resting in him.

Your loving friend,

E. W.

Plymouth, in New England, this 11th day of December, 1621.—Young's Pilgrim Fathers.

He brought letters from Robinson and Cushman. A carpenter came over for the purpose of building two ketches, a lighter, and six or seven shallops; and a person also to make salt. The carpenter built his craft faithfully, but soon died. The other was ignorant, and did not bring his undertaking to any successful issue.²

During the summer of 1624, Mr. Winslow again went to England, where he had an opportunity of correcting a mistake which had been made in his former voyage. The adventurers had, in the former vessel, sent over John Lyford, a preacher, much against the wishes of some of their number, who suspected him of being unfit for the office. Mr. Winslow, and others reluctantly consented to his coming. "Lyford wrote home to the adverse part of the adventurers, in 1624, counselling them that the Lyden Company, Mr. Robinson and the rest, must still be kept back or else all will be spoiled; and lest any of them should be taken in privately on the coast of England (as it was feared might be done) they must change the master of the ship, Mr. William Pierce, and put another also in Mr. Winslow's room, for merchant, or otherwise it would not be prevented."—MS. Records of Plymouth Church, b. i, fol. 30. [Copied from p. 476, Young's Chronicles.

John Robinson writes: "And for these adversaries, if they have but half their will to their malice, they will stop my course when they see it intended, for which their delaying serveth them very opportunely" etc.

His worthless character was soon discovered, and Mr. Winslow now imparted his suspicions to the adventurers in London. A meeting was held, and Mr. Lyford's friends employed counsel to defend him; but, upon the examination, it appeared that Lyford had been a minister in Ireland, where his conduct had been so unprincipled and base that he was compelled to quit the kingdom, and that the adventurers had been imposed upon by false testimony concerning his character. With this discovery, Mr. Winslow came back to New Plymouth, in the spring of 1625, happening to arrive while the court was sitting on the affair of Oldham, who had returned after banishment. The true characters of these imposters being thus discovered, they were both expelled from the plantation.¹

At the annual election in 1624, Governor Bradford having prevailed on the people of Plymouth to increase the number of assistants to five, Mr. Winslow was first elected to this office, in which he was continued by successive appointments until 1647, excepting 1633, 1636 and 1644, when he was chosen governor.² In these and very many other important public trusts, he acquitted himself with distinguished ability and credit. He was the author of several valuable works relating to the interests of the colony.

At the close of the year 1624, the number of souls in the colony was one hundred and eighty, who were then all dwelling within the town. Thirty-two dwelling houses had been erected. The town was impaled for half a mile in circumference. A well built fort was on the hill, surmounted by a watch-tower. For the last three years the health of the colony had been remarkable, and not one of the first planters had died. At Cape Ann, a plantation had been commenced by people from Dorchester, in England, which they held of the Plymouth people, and a fishing-stage had been erected there.³

The harvest of 1625 was plenteous, insomuch that the planters were over-stocked, and wished to dispose of some portion of it to the Indians. They had no other vessels than two shallops, built by the carpenter sent out to them in the preceding year, on one of which they laid a deck, and sent her, laden with corn, to the Kennebeck. They disposed of the corn to advantage, and returned with seven hundred pounds of beaver, beside other furs, having also a profitable trade for future occasions.

"This voyage (says Gov. Bradford) was made by Mr. Winslow and some old standards, for seamen we have none."

The plantation at Monhiggon being broken up in 1626, and the commodities belonging to it being offered for sale, Mr. Winslow accompanied Governor Bradford to that place, on behalf of the company, where they united with Mr. Thompson of Pascataqua in purchasing the goods. They also purchased a quantity of French goods, being part of the cargo of a ship cast away at Sagadehock.⁴

Mr. Winslow appears to have had the principal oversight of the commercial operations of the infant colony. He was well qualified to conduct the many difficult and sometimes perilous enterprises, which it became necessary to undertake for the benefit of the colony. He frequently went to the Penobscot, Kennebeck, and Connecticut rivers, on trading expeditions, and rendered himself useful and agreeable to the settlers on those rivers.

The remark sufficiently invalidates an insinuation of Hutchinson, that Winslow's "employment abroad prevented competition between Bradford and him for the governor's place." Hutchinson's History of the Province of Massachusetts Bay, 407.

Governor Winthrop notices the following narrow escape of Governor Winslow, while on one of these expeditions to the settlement on the Kennebeck, in the year 1642: "The Indians at Kennebeck, hearing of the general conspiracy against the English, determined to begin there, and one of them knowing that Mr. Edward Winslow did used to walk within the palisadoes, prepared his piece to shoot him, but as he was about it, Mr. Winslow not seeing him nor suspecting anything but thinking he had walked enough, went suddenly into the house, and so God preserved him."¹

Upon coming to the chief magistracy, in 1633, Governor Winslow found that disputes had commenced with the Dutch of New Netherlands, respecting the trade upon the Connecticut river. A friendly correspondence had been established, in 1627, between the Dutch authorities and those of New Plymouth; and, during their intercourse, the Dutch had given information of a fine river extending far into the country, to which they had given the name of Fresh river, but which the natives called Quonektacut. They extolled the lands bordering the stream, and the river, as convenient for trade, and urgently pressed the people of Plymouth to open a trade with the natives. But their advice was neglected at the time. Soon after, some of the Indians living upon the river, who had been driven from their homes by the Pequots, came to Plymouth and entreated the English to establish a trading house on the river, in the hope that, through their assistance, they might ultimately be restored to their possessions. Mr. Winslow had himself been to the Connecticut, or Fresh River, and found the representations of the Dutch and Indians to be true.

But the people of Plymouth still declined to venture upon the establishment of a trading house. The Indians renewing their requests, both to the governments of Plymouth and Massachusetts, Governor Winslow and Mr. Bradford proceeded to Boston, and proposed to Governor Winthrop and his council to join with Plymouth in a trade to Connecticut for hemp and beaver, and in the erection of a house for the purposes of commerce.

It being reported that the Dutch were about to build on the Connecticut river, Winslow and Bradford represented it as necessary to prevent them from taking possession of that fine Country; but Winthrop objected to the making of a plantation there, because there were three or four thousand warlike Indians on the river; because the bar at the mouth was such, that small pinnaces only could enter it at high water; and because, seven months in the year, no vessel could go in, on account of the ice and the violence of the stream. This proposal being declined, the people of Plymouth determined to undertake the enterprise at their own risk. The materials for a house, entirely prepared, were put on board a vessel, and committed to a chosen company which sailed for Connecticut. The Dutch of New Netherlands hearing of the design, had just taken a station on that river at the place where Hartford now stands, made a light fort and planted two pieces of cannon.

On the approach of the Plymouth adventurers, the Dutch forbade them to proceed up the river, ordered them to strike their colors, and threatened to fire on them. But the commander of the enterprise, disregarding the prohibition and the menaces, went resolutely forward, and, landing on the west side of the river, set up his house at some distance above the Dutch fort, and soon after fortified it with palisadoes. This was the first house erected in Connecticut. The place where this house was erected was a little below the mouth of Little River, in Windsor. It was called by the natives Natawanute. The sachems, who were the original owners of the soil, having been driven from this part of the country by the Pequots, William Holmes, who conducted the enterprise from Plymouth, took them with him to their homes, and restored them to their rights.¹ Of these sachems the Plymouth people purchased the land where they erected their house. The conquering Indians were offended at the restoration of the original proprietors of the country, and the proximity of two such neighbors as the irritated Dutch and the ferocious Pequots, rendered it difficult and hazardous for the English to retain their new purchase.²

Mr. Winslow, in 1634, on returning from a trading expedition to the Dutch at New York, left his vessel in Narragansett Bay, and thence went by land to Plymouth. He called on his old friend Massasoit, who promised to accompany him home. Before he set off, the sportive sachem despatched a messenger before them to Plymouth to tell the inhabitants that Winslow was dead. This report filled the whole colony with grief and lamentation. The sorrow and mourning of the people, however, were of but short duration, for the next day Massasoit, (or, as he was now called, Ousamequen), appeared, conducting the lamented Winslow into the town. On being enquired of, why he had sent such a message, he answered by saying, that he might be the more welcome when he came home.

In 1635 Mr. Winslow undertook another agency in England for the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts, partly on occasion of the intrusions which had been made on the territory of New England, by the French on the east, and by the Dutch on the west, and partly to answer complaints which had been made to the government against the Massachusetts colony, by Thomas Morton, who had been twice expelled for his misbehaviour, and was labouring in England, with great zeal, against the colonies.

A special commission had been issued, in 1634, to Archbishop Laud and eleven others, with the most extraordinary powers.³ It menaced the complete subversion of the colonies, and the most absolute tyranny, both in civil and ecclesiastical affairs. The favorite scheme of a general governor for all the colonies was again revived, and Sir Ferdinando Gorges was the person selected. Morton, whose efforts had been unceasing to effect this result, in a letter to one of his friends, dated May 1, 1634, exultingly writes: "When I was first sent to England to make complaint, I effected the business but superficially. I have this time taken deliberation, and brought the matter to a better pass; and it is thus brought about that the King hath taken the matter into his own hands, appointed a committee of the Board, and given order for a General Governor for the whole territory to be sent over." But this boast of the inveterate enemy of New England was not realized. Owing to the troubles in Scotland and Ireland, and the subsequent decline of the influence of Laud and others of the council, the whole project failed; the apprehensions of the people of New Plymouth and Massachusetts were allayed, and both Winthrop and Morton have recorded the event as a special interposition of Providence.

¹Quite a contrast to the later treatment of the Indians.

Governor Winslow found his situation at this time very critical, and his treatment very severe. He presented a memorial in writing to the commissioners, in which he set forth the encroachments of the French and Dutch, and prayed for "a special warrant to the English colonies to defend themselves against all foreign enemies."¹ Governor Winthrop censured this petition as ill-advised, "for such precedents might endanger our liberty, that they should do nothing hereafter but by commission out of England."²

The petition, however, was favorably received by some of the Board.³ Winslow was heard several times in support of it, and pointed out a way in which the object might have been attained without any charge to the Crown, by furnishing some of the chief men of the colonies with authority which they would exercise at their own expense and without any public disturbances. This proposal crossed the design of Gorges and Mason, whose aim was to establish a general government; and the Archbishop, who was engaged in their interest, put a check to Winslow's proposals, by questioning him upon Morton's accusations respecting his own personal conduct in America.

The grave offences alleged against him were, that he, not being in holy orders, but a mere layman, had taught publicly in the church, and had officiated in the celebration of marriages. To the former charge, Winslow answered, "that sometimes when the church was destitute of a minister, he had exercised his gift for the edification of the brethren."

To the latter he replied, "that, though he had officiated as a magistrate in the solemnizing of marriage, yet he regarded it only as a civil contract"; that the people of New Plymouth had for a long time been destitute of a minister, and were compelled by necessity to have recourse to the magistrate in that solemnity, that this was not to them a novelty they having been accustomed to it in Holland." On this honest confession, the Archbishop pronounced him guilty of the crime of separation from the National Church, and prevailed upon the Board to consent to his imprisonment.

He was thereupon committed to the Fleet Prison, where he remained for seventeen weeks in confinement. But after that time, on petitioning the Board he obtained a release.

Petition of Edward Winslow, agent for the planters* in New England, to [the Privy Council], confesses that he had spoken by way of exhortation to the people in America, and had performed the marriage ceremony there, the inhabitants having been seven or eight years without a minister, but that, had he not done so "we might have lost the life and force of Christianity." their contentions with the French and Dutch, and the valuable supplies they can export to England, if the King will continue to them liberty of conscience, afford facilities for new settlers, and grant them a free commission for displanting the French and Dutch. Edited under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, by W. Noel Samsbury, Esq., London.]

On his return to New Plymouth, the colony again declared their confidence and respect by choosing him to the office of governor for the succeeding year, (1636). This was an important period in the history of the colony. The surrender of the Patent by the council of Plymouth, the arbitrary, though fruitless commission to Laud and others, and the treatment which Governor Winslow had himself experienced in England, all served to convince the settlers of the necessity of adopting and declaring the fundamental laws of the colony. Hitherto no laws defining the powers of the government had been adopted, and the governor and assistants maintained their authority rather by common consent, than any delegated power. The laws of England were considered in force, unless changed by colonial statutes; but there were no lawyers in the colony, and but few persons who had any practical knowledge of the science of law. The clergy only understood its elementary principles, and they were more disposed to follow the laws of Moses than the laws of England.

The period had now arrived when all perceived the necessity of defining the limits of the powers and the duties of the magistrates, of establishing fundamental and organic laws, civil and criminal, and of placing the government on a stable foundation. This was done by the court of associates, in November, 1636, after which the affairs of the colony appear to have been regularly and faithfully administered, upon the basis of the written code of laws.

The Plymouth colonists, in religious matters, were more tolerant than their neighbors of Massachusetts. When Roger Williams, the apostle of liberty in New England, had been driven from Massachusetts for his opinions, and was reduced to circumstances of extreme indigence, Governor Winslow extended to him the hand of charity, and afforded relief by advice and money. "It pleased the Father of Mercies," said Mr. Williams, "to touch many hearts with relentings, among whom that great and pious soul, Mr. Winslow, melted, and he kindly furnished me at Providence, and put a piece of gold into the hands of my wife, for our supply." In recent years a clearer discrimination has been made as to the spirit and policy of the Pilgrims in matters of toleration and opinion, as compared with what occurred later among the Puritans.⁴

"Those who read the story will understand, I trust—what many are ignorant of, and what some historians have not sufficiently explained—the difference between "our Pilgrim Fathers" and "our Puritan Fathers." In the old world, on the other side of the ocean, the Puritan was a Nationalist, believing that a Christian nation is a Christian church, and demanding that the Church of England should be thoroughly reformed; while the Pilgrim was a Separatist, not only from the Anglican Prayer-book and Queen Elizabeth's episcopacy, but from all national churches. Between them there was sharp contention—a controversy quite as earnest and almost as bitter as that which they both had with the ecclesiastico-political power that oppressed them both, fining and imprisoning the Puritan, and visiting upon the Separatist the added penalties of exile and the gallows. The Pilgrim wanted liberty for himself and his wife and little ones, and for his brethren, to walk with God in a Christian life, as the rules and motives of such a life were revealed to him from God's Word. For that he went into exile; for that he crossed the ocean; for that he made his home in a wilderness. The Puritan's idea was not liberty, but right government in church and state—such government as should not only permit him, but also compel other men to walk in the right way."

⁴In a recent number of the New York Tribune, (April, 1876) an interesting and instructive letter appeared on this subject from Rev. Edward C. Towne, of East Marshfield, Mass., whose studies of Pilgrim, Puritan and Colonial history have been thorough and very useful to others. Mr Towne defines clearly the difference between the Pilgrims and Puritans as to their views, and methods of dealing with church relations, and the rights of others as to such relations, showing that the Pilgrims were broad and liberal towards those who dissented from their views, while the Puritans, who came later to Massachusetts, were more inclined to enforce their views in a dogmatic way and at the expense of individual liberty.

Genesis of the New England Churches, pp. 9-10.

Another recent writer says:

"It was to this noble body that the "Pilgrims" belonged. The exiles who left Leyden and the shores of England, in 1620, and whom all intelligent writers agree in calling "The Pilgrim Fathers," were of the sect of the Separatists, and were, moreover, the direct ecclesiastical successors of the noble men at whose acts, and principles, and sufferings we have so hastily glanced."

"Such was the origin of the two parties formed at the birth of the Church of England,—parties differing widely both in principle and practice. The "early Puritans" were within the establishment, desiring and seeking its purification. The Separatists, or Pilgrims were outside of that organization, declining to recognize the ecclesiastical claims of the English Sovereign, and contending for the spiritual character of the church, and the exclusive headship over that church of another King—One Jesus, "who only hath spiritual rule of His people."—Tryon Edwards, in Scribner's Magazine, (June, 1876), and authorities there cited.

For an elaborate and learned statement, and discussions of this subject, the reader is referred to "The Genesis of the New England Churches," by Rev. Leonard Bacon, D. D., (New York, 1874.)

"Let it not be supposed that an exposure of the weak side of the Puritans, who founded Massachusetts, involves any insensibility to the heroic greatness of their character. Without that very feeling of zeal, however mistaken in some respects, for what they deemed the way and will of God; without that high ambition and uncompromising determination to work it out, they would probably never have been stirred up to the task they undertook, or performed it with such success and vigour. In the infancy of such a state, it doubtless required a firm hand to prevent its feeble elements from becoming divided and scattered. The very faults of these men were, therefore, instrumental in carrying out the work of Providence. The tyranny of the bishops drove the Puritans to America—the tyranny of the Puritans forced malcontents to found fresh colonies, stirred up the spirit of Roger Williams to proclaim the then new doctrine of the non-interference of the civil magistrate in matters of religion, and finally urged those very Episcopatians, who refused spiritual freedom to their dissenting brethren in England, to insist upon possessing it for themselves in America, and by so doing, throw open in that land the gates of religious liberty, which can never again be closed."—The Pilgrim Fathers of New England, by W. and H. Bartlett, London, 1854.

UNITED COLONIES OF NEW ENGLAND.

The year 1643 is memorable in the history of New England colonies. Since the establishment of New Plymouth, the colonies of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Haven, and Rhode Island had sprung into existence, and while the concerns of each were well and safely managed by their local councils and assemblies, all felt the necessity of some general authority to protect the common interests of the whole. Governor Winslow seems to have looked to the establishment of such a power, when, in 1635, he petitioned the royal commissioners in London for a special warrant to the colonies to defend themselves against their enemies. Certain it is, that the subject was discussed, from time to time, until the want of concert on the breaking out of the Pequot wars satisfied the people of the importance and necessity of some general union for mutual defence against the Indians. In 1643, Governor Winslow went to Boston, as one of the commissioners from Plymouth, where articles of Confederation were drawn up and signed, on the 19th of May, by the commissioners of all the colonies present excepting those from Plymouth, who, for want of power from their General Court, deferred signing until the next meeting; and then (Sept. 7), they also signed them. Governor Winslow continued to act as one of the commissioners until he left the colony, in 1646.

The Commissioners declared, that, as in nation and religion, so in other respects, they be and continue as one, and henceforth be called and known by the name of The United Colonies of New England.

The features of this confederacy, the prototype of the American Union, are thus described in Pitkin's Civil and Political History of the United States.

“By the articles of confederation, as they were called, these colonies entered into a firm and perpetual league of friendship and amity, for offence and defence, mutual advice and succor, upon all just occasions, both for preserving and propagating the truth and liberties of the Gospel, and for their own mutual safety and welfare. Each colony was to retain its own peculiar jurisdiction and government, and no other plantation or colony was to be received as a confederate, nor any two of the confederates to be united into one jurisdiction, without the consent of the rest. The affairs of the united colonies were to be managed by a legislature to consist of two persons, styled commissioners, chosen from each colony. These commissioners had power to hear, examine, weigh, and determine all affairs of war or peace, leagues, aids, charges, and number of men for war,—division of spoils, and whatsoever is gotten by conquest, receiving of more confederates for plantations into combination with any of the confederates; and all things of a like nature, which are the proper concomitants and consequences of such a confederation for amity, offence, and defence; not intermeddling with the government of any of the jurisdictions, which, by the third article, is reserved entirely to themselves. The commissioners were to meet annually, in each colony in succession, and when met, to choose a president, and the determination of any six to be binding on all.

“The expenses of all just wars to be borne by each colony, in proportion to its number of male inhabitants, of whatever quality or condition, between the ages of sixteen and sixty.

“In case any colony should be suddenly invaded, on motion and request of three magistrates of such colony, the other confederates were immediately to send aid to the colony invaded, in men. Massachusetts one hundred, and the other colonies forty-five each, or, for a less number, in the same proportion. The commissioners, however, were very properly directed, afterwards, to take into consideration the cause of such war or invasion, and if it should appear that the fault was in the colony invaded, such colony was not only to make satisfaction to the invaders, but to bear all the expenses of the war.

“The commissioners were also authorized to frame and establish agreements and orders, in general cases of a civil nature, wherein all the plantations were interested, for preserving peace among themselves, and preventing, as much as may be, all occasions of war, or difference with others, as about the free and speedy passage of justice, in every jurisdiction, to all the confederates equally as to their own, receiving those that remove from one plantation to another without due certificates.

“It was also very wisely provided in the articles, that runaway servants, and fugitives from justice should be returned to the colonies where they belonged, or from which they had fled.

“If any of the confederates should violate any of the articles, or in any way injure any one of the other colonies, such breach of agreement or injury was to be considered and ordered by the commissioners of the other colonies.”¹

This confederacy, which was declared to be perpetual, continued without any essential alteration until the New England colonies were deprived of their charters by the arbitrary proceedings of James II. In the year 1640, some of the inhabitants of Rhode Island requested to be admitted into the confederacy, but they were informed that the Island was within the patent granted to New Plymouth, and therefore their request was denied.

The plantations at Providence were also denied admission, and those beyond the Piscataqua were not admitted, because “they ran a different course” from the Puritans.

Mr. Winslow was, for the last time, chosen governor in 1644, and subsequently was first on the list of magistrates. He was soon after engaged in the public service abroad, and never returned to New England.

In 1646, the colony of Massachusetts Bay prevailed upon Governor Winslow to proceed to England in their behalf, to answer complaints which had been preferred by Samuel Gorton and others, charging the Massachusetts authorities with religious intolerance and persecution.² Governor Winthrop remarks, that Mr. Winslow was “a fit man to be employed in our affairs in England, both in regard to his abilities of presence, speech, courage and understanding, as also being well known to the commissioners.”³ He set sail about the middle of October, 1646.

Gorton was an enthusiast of more than common ability, who gave the colonists much trouble. He came to Boston in 1636; went thence to New Plymouth, where he caused some uneasiness; from whence he went to Newport, and there behaved so that they inflicted corporal punishment upon him. He very soon got into difficulty with the authorities of Massachusetts, was arrested and imprisoned, was afterward liberated, and in 1644 proceeded to England. On arriving there, he published an account of the proceedings against himself and others in New England, under the title of Simplicities Defence against Seven-Headed Policy, or, Innocency Vindicated, being unjustly accused, and sorely censured by the Seven-Headed Church Government united in New England, etc.—Printed in London in 1644, in 111 small quarto pages.⁴

Governor Winslow, on reaching London, found it incumbent upon him to answer the publication of Gorton, and he accordingly published a reply, covering 103 small ⁴Gorton's book is reprinted entire from the original edition, in Force's collection of Tracts, vol. iv., No. 6; together with the entire letter of Gorton to Secretary Morton, written in June, 1669, vindicating himself from the charges contained in the Memorial—a portion of which letter was published by Hutchinson, in the Appendix to his History of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay. There is no doubt that the zealot, Gorton, was cruelly persecuted for his singular theological opinions, expressed with a freedom that sometimes degenerated into insolence. He was arrested by order of Court, and, in 1643, condemned to be “confined at Charlestown, and there set on work, and to wear such bolts or irons as may hinder his escape;” with the further condition, that, if he maintain “any of his abominable heresies,” he should be, on conviction, put to death. Seven of his associates were also confined in separate towns.—Savage's Winthrop, ii, 147.

quarto pages, entitled: Hypocrisie Unmasked: By a True Relation of the Proceedings of the Governor and Company of the Massachusetts, against Samuel Gorton, a Notorious Disturber of the Peace, etc. Appended to this work, which has never been reprinted in America, and of which Young supposes that no copy exists in this country, is a chapter entitled, "A Brief Narration of the True Grounds or Cause of the First Planting of New England," etc. This portion of the book is reprinted by Young, as Chap. XXV, of his Chronicles.¹ The same book was afterwards published in London, in 1649, with the following title: "The Danger of Tolerating Levellers in a Civil State, or a Historical Narration of the Dangerous Practices and Opinions Wherewith Samuel Gorton and his levelling accomplices so much disturbed and molested the several plantations in New England: By Edward Winslow of Plymouth in New England."

We add the following introduction to "Hypocrisie Unmasked," as showing the spirit which animated him in his efforts in behalf of the colony.

To all well-willers and furtherers of Plantations in New England, especially to such as ever have or desire to assist the people of Plymouth in their just proceedings, grace and peace be multiplied.

RIGHT HONORABLE AND WORSHIPFUL GENTLEMEN, OR WHATSOEVER,

Since it hath pleased God to stir you up to be instruments of his glory in so honorable an enterprise as the enlarging of his Majesty's dominions by planting his loyal subjects in so healthful and hopeful a country as New England is, where the church of God being seated in sincerity, there is no less hope of convincing the heathens of their evil ways, and converting them to the true knowledge and worship of the living God, and so consequently the salvation of their souls by the merits of Jesus Christ, than elsewhere, though it be much talked on and lightly or lamely prosecuted, I therefore think it but my duty to offer the view of our proceedings to your worthy considerations, having to that end composed them together thus briefly, as you see; wherein to your great encouragement you may behold the good providence of God working with you in our preservation from so many dangerous plots and treacheries as have intended against us, as also in giving His blessing so powerfully upon the weak means we had, enabling us with health and ability beyond expectation in our greatest scarcities, and possessing the hearts of the salvages with astonishment and fear of us; whereas if God had let them loose, they might easily have swallowed us up, scarce being a handful in comparison of those forces they might have gathered together against us; which now by God's blessing, will be more hard and difficult, in regard our number of men is increased, our town better fortified, and our store better victualled. Blessed therefore be his name, that hath done so great things for us and hath wrought so great a change amongst us. Accept, I pray you, my weak endeavors, pardon my unskillfulness, and bear with my plainness in the things I have handled. Be not discouraged by our former necessities, but rather encouraged with us, hoping that as God hath wrought with us in the beginning of this worthy work, undertaken in his name and fear, so he will by us accomplish the same to his glory and our comfort, if we neglect not the means. I confess it hath not been much less chargeable to some of you than hard and difficult to us, that have endured the brunt of the battle, and yet small profits returned. Only by God's mercy, we are safely seated, housed and fortified, by which means great step is made unto gain, and a more direct course taken for the same, than if at first we had rashly and covetously fallen upon it.

¹No copy of it is known to exist in this country, although it was in the possession both of Morton and Prince; and I have endeavored in vain to procure it from England. The part on of the volume which I print was copied for me from one in the British Museum. It is very desirable that the whole work should be reprinted here, as Gorton's work, to which it is an answer, has been recently embodied in the collections of the R. I. Historical Society, and the merits of the case cannot be well understood without reading both sides. — Young's Pilgrim Fathers, XXV. Note on p. 379.

Indeed three things are the overthrow and bane, as I may term it, of plantations:

1. The vain expectation of present profit, which too commonly taketh a principal seat in the heart and affection, though God's glory, &c. is preferred before it in the mouth with protestation.

2. Ambition in the governors and commanders, seeking only to make themselves great, and slaves of all that are under them, to maintain a transitory base honor in themselves, which God oft punisheth with contempt.

3. The carelessness of those that send over supplies of men unto them, not caring how they are qualified; so that oft-times they are rather the image of men endowed with bestial, yea, diabolical affections than the image of God, indued with reason, understanding, and holiness. I praise God I speak not these things experimentally, by way of complaint of our own condition, but having great cause on the contrary part to be thankful to God for his mercies towards us; but rather, if there be any too desirous of gain, to entreat them to moderate their affections, and consider that no man expecteth fruit before the tree be grown; advising all men, that as they tender to their own welfare, so to make choice of such to manage and govern their affairs, as are approved not to be seekers of themselves, but the common good of all for whom they are employed; and beseeching such as have the care of transporting men for the supply and furnishing of plantations, to be truly careful in sending such as may further and not hinder so good an action. There is no godly, honest man but will be helpful in his kind, and adorn his profession with an upright life and conversation; which doctrine of manners ought first to be preached by giving good example to the poor savage heathens amongst whom they live. On the contrary part, what great offence hath been given by many profane men, who being but seeming Christians, have made Christ and Christianity stink in the nostrils of the poor infidels, and so laid a stumbling-block before them. But woe be to them by whom such offences come.

These things I offer to your Christian considerations, beseeching you to make a good construction of my simple meaning, and take in good part this ensuing Relation, dedicating myself and it evermore unto your service; beseeching God to crown our Christian and faithful endeavors with his blessings, temporal and eternal.

Yours in this service,

Ever to be commanded,

E. W.

TO THE READER.

Good Reader: When I first penned this discourse, I intended it chiefly for the satisfaction of my private friends; but since that time have been persuaded to publish the same. And the rather, because of a disorderly colony that are dispersed, and most of them returned, to the great prejudice and damage of him that set them forth; who as they were a stain to Old England that bred them, in respect to their lives and manners amongst the Indians, so, it is to be feared, will be no less to New England, in their vile and clamorous reports, because she would not foster them in their desired idle courses. I would not be understood to think there were no well deserving persons amongst us ; for of mine knowledge it was a grief to some that they were so yoked ; whose deserts, as they were then suitable to their honest protestations, so I desire still may be in respect of their just and true Relations.

Peradventure thou wilt rather marvel that I deal so plainly, than any way doubt of the truth of this my relation ; yea, it may be, tax me therewith, as seeming rather to discourage men than any way to further so noble an action. If any honest mind be discouraged, I am sorry. Sure I am I have given no just cause ; and am so far from being discouraged myself, as I purpose to return forthwith. And for other light and vain persons, if they stumble hereat, I have my desire, accounting it better for them and us that they keep where they are, as being unfit and unable to perform so great a task.

Some faults have escaped because I could not attend on the press, which I pray thee correct, as thou findest, and I shall account it as a favor unto me.

Thine,

E. W.

Besides the complaints of Gorton and his company, Governor Winslow was especially instructed to answer the charges of a want of religious freedom in Massachusetts, and denial of civil privileges to such as were not church members, preferred against that colony, by Robert Child,¹ William Vassall and others. In answer to the charge, that the Massachusetts government was intolerant and arbitrary, he was specially instructed to say, that "we have four or five hundred express laws, as near the laws of England as may be ; and where we have no law, we judge by the word of God as near as we can." And in reference to the well known objections, in Massachusetts, to the scheme of a general government for New England, he was instructed to assert for that colony their absolute power of government, as given to them by their charter.²

Governor Winslow had several hearings before the commissioners for the affairs of New England, among whom were the Earl of Warwick and Sir Henry Vane, both zealous Puritans, and friendly to New England, by whose influence, doubtless, the colony escaped censure.

The times had greatly changed, and the Puritans being in power in England, Mr. Winslow had great advantage in this business, from the credit and esteem which he enjoyed with that party. "By his prudent management he prevented any damage, and cleared the colony from any blame or dishonor.

Massachusetts was not alone in her dread of the advance of sectarianism. Rhode Island had been excluded from the league, on account of her toleration of what was deemed to be heresy, and a better understanding of the true principles of liberty was at the same time struggling manfully for a foothold in New Plymouth. Governor Winslow, in a letter to Governor Winthrop, dated "24 (9th), 1645," laments, in the following strain, the prevalence of a spirit of toleration in New Plymouth, which had already gained over a majority of the deputies, and three of the assistants: "The sum of it was, (says he) to allow and maintain full and free tolerance of religion to all men that would preserve the civil peace, and submit unto government; and there was no limitation or exception against Turk, Jew, Papist, Arian, Socinian, Nicolaitan, Familist, or any other, &c. But our Governor and several of us having expressed that sad consequences would follow, especially myself and Mr. Prence, yet notwithstanding, it was required, according to order, to be voted. But the Governor would not suffer it to come to the vote, as being that indeed would eat out the power of godliness, &c. By this you may see that all the troubles of N. E. are not at the Massachusetts."¹

William Vassall, mentioned above, was of Scituate; a man somewhat in advance of the age in which he lived, in his view of civil and religious liberty.² He was one of the agents sent to England in 1646, with complaints against the Massachusetts colony. Soon after his arrival there, a pamphlet purporting to have been written by Major John Child, and no doubt prepared with the concurrence, if not assistance, of Vassall, was published, under the quaint title of "New England's Jonas cast up at London, etc., a small quarto of 22 pages, printed in London, in 1647."

In a postscript to this pamphlet, Major Child attacks the book published by Winslow against Gorton, (Hypocrisy Unmasked) and characterizes him as "a principle opposer of the laws of England in New England."³

Winthrop characterizes Vassall as "a man never at rest but when he was in the fire of contention." Mr. Winslow, who held the pen of an able controversialist, was not long in preparing a keen and pungent answer, vindicating the colony, and repelling the accusations of his assailant; and, as if the remark of Governor Winthrop respecting Vassall had suggested it, he gives his pamphlet the title of New England's Salamander, discovered by an irreligious and scornful Pamphlet called New England's Jonas cast up at London, etc., owned by Major John Child, but not probably to be written by him, etc. London, 1647, 29 pp.

The civilization of the Indians, and their conversion to the Christian religion, were objects which the people of the colonies never lost sight of; and in this great and good work, Mr. Winslow was, from principle, very zealously engaged. While in England he employed his interest with the members of Parliament and other gentlemen of quality and fortune, to erect a corporation there for the prosecution of the design. For this purpose, an act of Parliament was passed, incorporating a society in England "for propagating the Gospel in New England."¹ The Commissioners of the United Colonies were constituted a board of correspondents, and distributors of the money, which was supplied in England, by charitable donations from all the cities, towns, and parishes in the kingdom.² By the influence and exertions of both these respectable bodies, missions were supported among the Indians of New England; the Bible and books of piety were translated into the Indian tongue, and printed for their use; and great pains were taken by several worthy ministers and other gentlemen to instruct the Indians, and reduce them to a civilized state. Under the auspices of this society, the celebrated John Elliot undertook his apostolic and successful labors among the Indians of Massachusetts, aided in their great work by the two Mayhews, the younger Cotton and others. Of this corporation, which he had done much to establish, Mr. Winslow continued during life to be an active and successful member in the promotion of its interests in England.

² William Vassall was one of the first assistants of Massachusetts, chosen in England in 1629; and came over in 1630, in the fleet with Winthrop. He soon after returned to England, but came back in 1632, and settled in Scituate, in the colony of New Plymouth, where he remained until about 1650, when, having laid the foundation of several large estates in the West Indies, he removed to Barbadoes in 1655. Hutchinson says he was a man of pleasant and affable manners, but always in opposition to government, both in Massachusetts and Plymouth.

³ The title to Major Child's pamphlet, was probably suggested by the following circumstances: The Rev. Mr. Cotton, at his Thursday lecture in Boston, before the sailing of the ship in which Major Child and Mr. Vassall had taken passage to London, preached from Cant. ii, 15: "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines, etc.;" and, in his uses, took occasion to say, that he advised the shipmaster, that if storms did arise, to search if he had not in any chest or trunk any Jonas on board, which, if you find, I do not advise you to throw the persons overboard, but the writings. Storms did arise; and some of the passengers remembering Mr. Cotton's sermon, a woman from among them came from between decks about midnight, to Mr. William Vassall who lay in the great cabin, (but for the present was in the steerage doorway looking abroad) and earnestly desired him, if there were any Jonas in the ship it might be thrown overboard. He asked her why she came to him? And she said, because it was thought he had some writings against the people of God. But he answered her that he had nothing except a petition to Parliament that they might enjoy the liberty of English subjects, and that could be no Jonas. After this she went into the great cabin, to Mr. Thomas Fowle, in a like distracted manner, who told her he had nothing but a copy of a petition, which himself and others had presented to the Court at Boston; but that if she and others thought that to be the cause of the storm, she and they might do what they would with it. So she took and carried it between decks, to them from whom she came, and they agreed to throw it overboard; but they had many great storms after that. After their arrival at London, the report of an astonishing miracle was spread abroad, v. z; the "saving of the ship and passengers by throwing the Petition to Parliament overboard; whereas," it was only the copy of a petition to their own Court at Boston; and the petition to Parliament was still in the ship, together with another copy of that which was thrown overboard, and were as well saved as their and other goods, and are here to be seen and made use of in convenient time.—See tract, (imperfect) in II Massachusetts History, coll. iv, 107.

The various employments of Governor Winslow, in England, on behalf of the colonies, and his own high character, had given him a standing such as no other New England man enjoyed at this time. His abilities were acknowledged by the party there paramount, and he found so much employment there and elsewhere, that he never returned to New Plymouth. Judge Davis, in a note to Morton, (p. 261,) says Mr. Winslow was one of the commissioners appointed to determine the value of the English ships seized and destroyed by the King of Denmark, and for which restitution was to be made, according to the treaty of peace made with the Protector, April 5, 1654.

The commissioners were required to meet at Goldsmith's Hall, in London, in the month of June; and, in case they should not agree by a certain day in August, were to be shut up in a chamber, without fire, candles, meat or drink, or any other refreshment, until they should agree. Of course, an order so peremptory and so characteristic of the times as this would be likely to be effectual, and accordingly we do not find that the commissioners had any difficulty in coming to an agreement.

When Oliver Cromwell planned an expedition against the Spaniards in the West Indies in 1655, and sent Admiral Penn and General Venables to execute it, he appointed three commissioners to superintend and direct their operations, of which number Winslow was the chief; the other two being Richard Holdrip and Edward Blagg.³ Their object was to attack St. Domingo, the only place of strength which the Spaniards, at that time, had in Hispaniola.

²*Hazard*, ii, 146. The Charter of this society bears date July 27, 1649. In aid of the formation of the society, a tract was published by Governor Winslow, in London in that year, entitled "The Glorious Progress of the Gospel amongst the Indians in New England, etc." It was dedicated by Winslow, to the Parliament, and contained some introductory remarks from his pen. The rest of the pamphlet consisted of three letters from Eliot, and one from Mayhew, with an appendix by J. D. [John Downam or John Drury.] This tract is reprinted in *III, Mass. Hist. ³1654. Order of the Council of State, concerning the arms and stores "for a special service under command of General Venables," to be shipped with all possible expedition, with list appended. (There are several orders relating to the preparation of this expedition to Hispaniola, which, although unsuccessful, led to the taking of Jamaica). On Dec. 12, Edward Winslow was allowed a settled salary of £1000 per annum, as one of the commissioners in this expedition £500 being paid to him in advance. On Jan. 25, 1654, he was appointed one of the commissioners for compounding for advance of money and indemnity; and on 26 March, 1655, after the yearly rate of £300 was ordered to be paid to him or his assigns, as one of the commissioners for managing estates under sequestration, from 24 June to 19 Dec. 1654, "when he left that employment." Calendar State Papers, Colonial Series, 1574-1660, p. 419.

It has been remarked that Cromwell well understood the character of Mr. Winslow, when he placed him at the head of this commission; for both commanders and many of the officers employed in the expedition were strongly suspected of cherishing a loyal attachment to the house of Stuart, and of nourishing a secret dislike to the Protector. He therefore placed in this responsible situation one whom he could trust.¹ His name had been mentioned in 1650, in connection with the government of Barbadoes.²

The commanders disagreed in their tempers and views, and the control of the commissioners was of no avail. The troops ill-appointed and badly provided, were landed at too great a distance from the city, and lost their way in the woods. Worn out with hunger and thirst, heat and fatigue, they were routed by an inconsiderable number of Spaniards; six hundred were slain, and the remnant took refuge on board their vessels.

To compensate as far as possible for this unfortunate event, the fleet sailed for Jamaica, which surrendered without any resistance. But Mr. Winslow, who partook of the chagrin of the defeat, did not live to enjoy the pleasures of victory. In the passage between Hispaniola and Jamaica, the heat of the climate threw him into a fever, which, operating with the dejection of his mind, put an end to his life, on the eighth of May, 1655, in the sixty-first year of his age! His body was committed to the deep, with the honors of war, forty-two guns being fired by the fleet on that occasion.³

The following well meant but inelegant verses, were written by one of the passengers on board the ship in which he died:

“The eighth of May, west from 'Spaniola's shore,
 God took from us our grand commissioner,
 Winslow by name, a man in chiefest trust;
 Whose life was sweet and conversation just;
 Whose parts and wisdom most men's did excell,
 An honour to his place as all can tell.”

the occasions of the infant settlement happened to require. Were the North-eastern fishermen to be sought for a supply of food in a famine, or was the Indian chief, whose capricious mood needed watching, to be looked up in his forest solitude ; or the governor's place to be taken that the regular incumbent might have some rest ; or Massachusetts to be dissuaded from too austere severity ; or, finally, were the rulers of affairs in England to be made propitious—the natural resort was to the agency of Winslow. For foreign employment, his better birth and breeding gave him advantages over his fellow-emigrants. Among the gentlemen of the British Parliament Winslow moved as one of themselves ; and his address and winning qualities, no less than his sagacity and diligence, justified the choice, which, when he went abroad for the last time, the larger colony overlooked her own statesmen to make. That Winthrop, by a sympathy of character, was so capable of estimating him, was on this occasion the good fortune of Massachusetts. Bradford grievously missed from his side the partner of his early struggles (Bradford, 444). Cromwell saw at once the worth of the honest, religious, capable, strenuous envoy from North America, and took care never to lose his services while he lived, which was for nine years after he left Plymouth for the last time. Distress at the failure, through military mismanagement, of the attempt upon St. Domingo, which he was superintending for the Protector, is thought to have brought on his final illness. Now, that Bradford was old, Plymouth could not have sustained a greater loss. But it was delayed till Plymouth hath set upon a secure foundation.”¹

Much light is thrown upon the important services in which Gov. Winslow was engaged in behalf of the Colonies, after his return to England in 1646, by the recent publication, in London, of a work entitled: Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, 1574-1660 State Paper Department, Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Published under the Direction of the Master of the Rolls and Edited by W. Noel Samsbury, Esq., London.

“The history of New England and of Virginia, the parents of the Northern and the Southern States of America, is largely illustrated in this volume.”

We find, upon examination of the entries in these “State Papers,” abundant evidence of Gov. Winslow's great activity and influence with the English Government in behalf of New-Plymouth and other English Colonial interests, from the time of his return to England until his entering upon service as one of three Commissioners under Cromwell, to which further reference will be made. It has been usual for writers to say of this period of Gov. Winslow's life, “that, while it is well understood that his services were important and valuable, yet we have no account of the particulars of his Agency in this respect. The entries in these “State Papers” fortunately give us some most interesting particulars and are a very valuable contribution to our colonial history as seen in the following extracts :

Before his departure from New England, Gov. Winslow had made a settlement on a valuable tract of land in Marshfield, to which he gave the name of Careswell, probably from an ancient castle of that name, nine miles from Stafford in Staffordshire, a family seat of the Vanes, ancestors of the Earles of Darlington and Westmoreland.¹

By his second wife, Susannah, whose maiden name was Fuller, and who was the widow of William White, and to whom he was married 12 May, 1621, he had a daughter, Elizabeth, who married Gilbert Brooks, of Scituate; and second, Capt. George Curwen, a prominent merchant of Salem, whose house was one of the most tasteful edifices of that place, a portion of it still appearing like the production of a by-gone age. His only son by this marriage, Josiah² Winslow, became a distinguished man in the colony; was a magistrate, governor, and in 1675 commander-in-chief of the forces of all the colonies of New England, in the war with the Indians. He died 18 December, 1680. His remarkable career will be further noticed in the Memorial of Governor Edward¹ Winslow.

¹ In Speed's Great Britain, I, ch. 35. Carswall is named as one of the thirteen ancient castles in Staffordshire; and Bowen in his Univ. Geog. I, 225, places Careswell among the chief seats of the nobility of the county. The Marshfield estate, which for many years remained in the Winslow family, passed into the possession of the Hon. Daniel Webster.

There is a burial ground near Mr. Webster's late residence, and on the Webster farm known as the "Winslow burial-ground." Upwards of fifty of the Winslows and their connections are buried there. Mr. Webster's remains were deposited there in a substantial mausoleum provided for the purpose. For inscriptions see biography of Hon. Isaac Winslow, in Gov. Edward¹ Winslow Memorial. By him the Winslow tomb is supposed to have been constructed.

A fine portrait of Governor Edward¹ Winslow, is in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society, where other family pictures have been deposited by one of his descendants. This portrait was painted in London, in 1651, when he was in the 57th year of his age.

The device on the seal used by Governor Winslow represents a pelican feeding its young. As an emblem of paternal affection it is placed in connection with the names of some of the most distinguished of the pilgrims, whose regard for posterity prompted to their great enterprise, and influenced them to a firm endurance of many hardships, dangers and sorrows.

Among other distinguished individuals, of whom extended biographies will be found in the aforesaid memorial we mention :—

Hon. Isaac Winslow, of whom Dr. Thacher says :—he was a gentleman, possessed of a true English spirit, much given to hospitality, universally beloved, and eminently distinguished, having sustained the chief places of power and honor in the colony, as chief military commander under the governor, Chief Justice of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas, Judge of Probate of Wills, and one of his Majesty's Council for the Province of Massachusetts Bay for more than twenty years, and for several years President of that body;

General John Winslow, a distinguished and successful officer, who, in 1740, commanded a company in the expedition against Cuba, afterwards rose to the rank of Major General in the British service, became the most prominent military character of his time in New England, and in 1755, was engaged in the expedition against Nova Scotia;—

Isaac Winslow, M.D., an eminent practitioner, who occupied the Careswell mansion, at Marshfield;

Edward Winslow, an accomplished scholar, who filled the office of Town Clerk, Clerk of the Court, Register of Probate and Collector of the Port, in Plymouth, and who on account of his loyalty to the British Crown, removed to Halifax soon after the commencement of the Revolution; [For offices held by him under that government, and account of the ceremonies at his funeral, which were in a style to confer the highest honor and respect on his memory, see Memorial of Governor Edward¹ Winslow.] and Governor Edward Winslow of Kingswood, New Brunswick, son of the preceding, who was Surrogate General, Judge of the Supreme Court and Administrator of the Government.

Of descendants of Gov. Edward¹ in female lines may be named :—

Nathaniel Watson Niles, M. D., (son of Rev. and Hon. Nathaniel Niles, author of "The Christian Hero," the war song of the Revolution.) [See appendix, p. 8.] Secretary of Legation to Paris, and afterwards charge des affaires of U. S. at Sardinia; Col. Elkanah Watson, author of several valuable works on canals and agriculture; and founder and first President of the Berkshire Agricultural Society; General James Warren, a Revolutionary patriot, President of the Provincial Congress, and for many years Speaker of the House of Representatives; and Col. James Warren Sever, President of the Society of the Cincinnati, and later, Vice President of the General Society of the Cincinnati.

JOHN¹ WINSLOW,

The eldest brother of Edward¹, was born 16 April, 1597, at Droitwich, England. He came over in 1621, in the ship Fortune, and was married at New Plymouth, 12 October, 1624, to Mary Chilton, daughter of James Chilton, one of the first emigrants in the Mayflower. They remained in Plymouth until 1656, when they removed to Boston, where he became an eminent merchant and shipowner. For his history and the genealogy of his descendants, see John¹ Winslow Memorial.

Among his distinguished descendants, of whom more extended biographies are given in said memorial may here be mentioned :—

BRIG. GEN. JOHN WINSLOW, who, at the age of twenty-two entered the Revolutionary army, and became distinguished for his bravery in the service, and for his accuracy and honesty as Paymaster;

JOSHUA WINSLOW, Paymaster General to the British forces of North America, and the father of Anna-Greene Winslow, whose journal of 1771-3, when she was a school-girl in Boston, is included in our memorial;

COL. EDWARD WINSLOW, Sheriff of Suffolk County, 1722-41, and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, 1743-52;

Of his sons may be mentioned :—JOSHUA WINSLOW, for many years a leading merchant in Boston, and one of the associates who signed the merchant's company currency notes, dated 1 August, 1740; WILLIAM and SAMUEL, both of whom were in the Commissariat Department at the siege of Louisburg in 1745, where they died; ISAAC, a graduate of Harvard College in 1727, and a wealthy merchant of Boston, whose large property was confiscated at the time of the Revolution in consequence of his being a Royalist, and John, also a merchant in Boston, and a Royalist, who removed to Dunstable, Mass., where he died in 1788. Of the two daughters of Col. Edward: Hannah, married Dr. William Davis, of Boston, whose daughter Mary married her second cousin, ISAAC⁶ WINSLOW, the genealogist of the family, from whose valuable collection of records we have made copious extracts for our Memorial of John¹ Winslow; Elizabeth, daughter by second wife, Elizabeth Pemberton, married Richard Clarke, an eminent tea merchant in Boston, and one of the consignees of the East India Company's tea, destroyed in the harbor in 1773. Their daughter, Susanna-Farnum Clarke, was the wife of John Singleton Copley, the distinguished artist, who sailed for England in 1774, and who, after spending some time in study and travel, in 1775 was joined by his family, consisting of his father-in-law Mr. Richard Clarke, his wife, his son John Singleton, his daughter Elizabeth Clarke, afterward wife of Gardiner Green, an eminent merchant of Boston, and his other daughter, Miss Mary Copley. John Singleton, jr., born in Boston, graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, admitted to the bar, soon distinguished as a lawyer, was knighted, and as SIR JOHN COPLEY, filled with great credit to himself the high office of Chief Justice of Chester, in 1818. Possessed of remarkable talents, he rose to some of the most important positions under the English government, and on the retirement of the Earl of Eldon in 1827, was created Baron Lyndhurst and constituted Lord High Chancellor of England. He took an active part in the legislation of the country, retaining his intellectual vigor to a remarkable degree, so that his great speech, at the age of eighty-eight, on the Navy of Great Britain, in the House of Lords, was said to have equaled, if it did not surpass, any speech he ever made. He died in London, 12 October, 1863, at the age of 91 years.

REV. EDWARD WINSLOW, grandson of Col. Edward Winslow, of Boston, was born 8 Nov. 1722, in that city. He was graduated at Cambridge College in 1741, and on leaving the University entered his father's counting-house. In 1747 he was at Barbadoes, probably for mercantile purposes. He doubtless also improved this opportunity to visit the relatives of his wife, Jane Isabella Alleyne, daughter of Abel of Barbadoes (after of Braintree, Mass.), and Mary (Woodbridge); and great-great-grand daughter of Col. Reynold Alleyne, who was one of the first adventurers to the settlement made in the Island of Barbadoes, where he acquired a considerable estate, "on which he built a capital residence, named by him, Mount Alleyne, and which now forms a part of the possessions of the family." [A Parallel Chart of the Alleyne family will be found under the record of Rev. Edward^s Winslow, in the Memorial of John^s Winslow.] Mr. Winslow subsequently relinquished commerce, went to England, and in 1754 was ordained deacon and priest by the Bishop of London; while there, was appointed missionary to Stratford, Conn., but subsequently in 1764, removed with his large family from Stratford to Quincy, (formerly Braintree) where he officiated over Christ Church, until, finding he could not safely read the prayer for the King, nor conscientiously forbear to read it, if he performed service at all, he resigned and went to the city of New York, where he occasionally preached.

In 1744 he was appointed by Admiral Parker, chaplain on board the king's ship Mercury, then in Boston Bay. In the later years of his life he suffered many privations owing to his sympathy with the royal cause. In the year 1780, October 31, on returning from a funeral, as he ascended the steps of his residence, which was at the junction of Pearl and Cherry Streets, New York City, he fell and expired. His remains were entombed under the altar of St. George's church, in that city.

In this list, we must not fail to mention some of more recent date :

NATHANIEL-BRADSTREET SHURTLEFF, M.D., born 29 June, 1810, being of the seventh generation from John and Mary (Chilton) Winslow, was Mayor of Boston, an eminent antiquarian, genealogist and historian. Having inherited from his honored father a peculiar faculty and love for such studies, and the ability and perseverance to pursue them, he gave great attention to these subjects. Of him, the Hon. James Savage, author of Savage's Genealogical Dictionary, said: "Precision and completeness of detail are the characteristics of Dr. Shurtleff's papers, in which no antiquary of our side of the ocean can excel him. Research on every point he touches is so nearly exhausted that a minute error will very rarely be detected, and he must be envied whose affluence of materials may afford any addition."

[A chart ancestral of Dr. Shurtleff may be seen in connection with his biography in our John Winslow Memorial.]

FORBES-BENIGNUS WINSLOW, M.D., D.C.L., OXON, and his distinguished brothers.—The former was born 10 Aug., 1810, in Pentonville, London, England. He received the rudiments of his education in Glasgow, Scotland, although many years of his boyhood were spent in New York City. He commenced his medical studies in London. Passing the College of Surgeons in 1835, he graduated M.D. at Aberdeen, and was soon after elected Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh. The specialty of Dr. Winslow, in the profession, was mental disease, in which, by his remarkable success, he acquired an extensive practice and a world-wide fame. He opened an Asylum for the Insane at Sussex House, Hammersmith. Being a devout Christian, "he was prepared—with his profound acquaintance with the philosophy of mind, and his simple views of evangelical truth—to take by the hand, and gently and skilfully lead in the good and the right way, all who repaired to his consulting-room mentally and spiritually depressed—

‘Tossed about
With many a conflict, many a doubt.’

“‘Have you found peace with God?’ was frequently the first enquiry put to the agitated patient who sat trembling at his side.” In the course of his active life he became the author of several valuable essays and works. He originated and published at his own risk and expense the first British Psychological Journal, and carried it on single-handed for several years. He died 4 Mar. 1874, in London. Among our extended biographies in the John¹ Winslow Memorial, will be found a reprint of the “Affectionate Tribute” to his Christian memory, written by his brother, REV. OCTAVIUS WINSLOW, D.D., incumbent of Emmanuel Church, Brighton, England, and the author of a number of valuable religious works:

ADMIRAL JOHN ANCRUM WINSLOW, a name rendered well known to fame by the brilliant victory achieved during the late war while commander of the Kearsarge, over the Alabama, Capt. Semmes, commander, off Cherbourg, France. It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of this victory, occurring, as it did, at a critical period in the war, when the faith of foreign nations in our ability and purpose to suppress the rebellion needed just such a stimulus. The fight and triumph came in foreign waters, under such circumstances as were likely to attract the attention of other governments, especially those of England and France, which at that time were believed to be in need of ocular evidence of our power and determination to maintain the integrity of this nation. As a token of appreciation of his services, the President and Senate gave to him the rank of commodore, dating from the memorable June 19, 1864; and March 21, 1870, he was made rear-admiral. A full account of this naval fight and victory will be found in the Memorial, in connection with his biography. Admiral Winslow was born 19 Nov., 1811, Wilmington, North Carolina. In 1825 his father brought him North and placed him under the tuition of Rev. Dr. Sewall, of Dedham, Mass., intending that he should prepare to enter college. An early fondness for the sea caused young Winslow’s father to consent to a change in his course of study, and on February 1, 1827, he entered the navy from North Carolina, receiving his commission through the influence of Daniel Webster. Promotion came slowly in those days of peace, and not till he had seen twelve years pass did he rise to the rank of lieutenant. In that capacity, attached to the ill-fated Cumberland, he distinguished himself in an attack on Tabasco, and in several other engagements, during the Mexican War.

His death occurred at Boston Highlands, Mass., 29 Sep., 1873, shortly after his return from the command of the Pacific Station.

KENELM¹ WINSLOW,

The second brother of Governor Winslow, was born at Droitwich, England, on the 29th day of April, 1599. He was at Plymouth before 1633, and it is believed by some that he arrived there in 1629. In 1634, he married Eleanor Adams, widow of John Adams, of Plymouth. Like his brother he was distinguished for his sagacity and good sense, and had good executive and business qualities. He was a considerable owner of lands in Yarmouth, in 1640. He was drawn to Plymouth, by the bonds of sympathy which held him to his brothers, Edward and John, and to the Pilgrims as representing a great cause. [See letter from Rev. Edward C. Towne, relating to the time of and circumstances attending the arrival of Kenelm¹ Winslow at Plymouth, found in connection with his biography in our Memorial]. He died while on a visit to Salem, and was buried September 13, 1672, at the age of seventy-three. See Chart V, P. 11. His descendants, who are numerous in various parts of this country, are now among the most active of those bearing the name of Winslow. Among those distinguished in the past may be named:

MAJ. EDWARD WINSLOW, who was engaged in erecting "iron works, to carry on the making and forging of iron," as early as 1725, in the town of Rochester, Mass., where he was a person of considerable influence;

COL. THOMAS WINSLOW, who also bore the title of Judge, having been appointed, 2 June, 1758, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, which office he held until the Revolution, and to which he was re-appointed after the courts were reorganized;

MAJ. NATHANIEL WINSLOW, a firm patriot, in 1776 entered the army, rose to the rank of major, acquitted himself with honor in the southern expedition, whom Deane describes as "a man who inherited the bold spirit of his distinguished ancestors;"

RICHARD-HENRY WINSLOW and JAMES, his brother, members of the firm of Winslow, Lanier & Co., distinguished bankers of New York City; and their brother, EDWARD-THOMAS WINSLOW, one of the founders and a leading and efficient member of the American Express Company;

RICHARD WINSLOW, a large ship owner, and the father of the Winslow family that have filled so important a place in the commercial and shipping history of Cleveland;

JEREMIAH WINSLOW, who went to Havre, France, not far from 1812, for the purpose of establishing the whale fishery between that country and the United States, and by successful management accumulated a large fortune; and NATHAN⁶ WINSLOW, his brother, one of the earliest abolitionists of Portland, and a fearless defender of those who advocated the then unpopular cause;

SHADRACH WINSLOW, M.D., who was born on the 17th day of December, in the year 1750, in Freetown, Mass., and died in Foxboro, Mass., on the 1st day of February, in the year 1817. He graduated at Yale College in 1771. His diploma is now in the possession of one of his grand-sons, John Winslow, of Brooklyn, and, while much valued by the family as a relic, is of general interest from the fact that diplomas from Yale of so early a date are now very rare. The diploma is of the brief style of that day, in Latin, and is signed by Naphtali Daggett, Præs., and five socii; dated September 11, 1771.

After graduation, Mr. Winslow studied medicine, and became a physician of good attainments with fine prospects. But at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War his patriotic feelings were aroused to the highest pitch. He became an ardent supporter of the Colonies, and resolved to do all possible for the cause. Being a gentleman of means, he contributed largely to fitting out a war ship to attack the enemy upon the high seas, and went aboard of her as surgeon. The particulars of the first and only voyage the ship made are unfortunately wanting, but it is known that she was captured—it is said off the coast of Spain. All on board were taken prisoners, and brought to the Wallabout Bay, off Brooklyn, and placed in the dismal prison-ships, which the British government in its policy thought wise and perhaps humane to keep there. [For description of the Jersey prison ship, see Appendix of John Winslow Memorial, in connection with biography of John^o Winslow (Joshua^a, Col. Edward^s, Capt. Edward^d, John^l)]. Here Dr. Winslow was detained a prisoner of war about one year, and suffered much. He used to say that he never fully recovered from the damage his health received on board one of those terrible prison-ships, where were held, by the British, many thousand prisoners, of whom twelve thousand soldiers and sailors miserably perished.

The remains of these prison-ship martyrs have recently been collected together by the authorities from the place where they were unceremoniously buried on the shores of the Wallabout, and enclosed in a suitable tomb constructed on Fort Greene, now one of the public parks of Brooklyn, and of historic interest as a portion of the fighting ground in the famous battle of Long Island. Under the inspirations of the centennial year, there is a project on foot to raise a Martyrs' Memorial Fund of $50,000, to be used for the erection of a suitable monument on Fort Greene, in honor of the prison-ship martyrs of the Revolution.

After his liberation, Dr. Winslow resumed practice as a physician, residing in Foxboro, Mass., where he reared a large family.

He was much respected, both as a physician and a man. His practice, in those days, included a large circuit, even as far as Boston, which is more than twenty miles distant from Foxboro.

His remains were buried in the old church-yard in Foxboro;

ELEAZER-ROBBINS WINSLOW, the eldest son of Dr. Shadrach Winslow, was born in Foxboro, Mass., on the 21st day of March, in the year 1786; and died in Newton Upper Falls, Mass., on the 8th day of August, in the year 1863. It frequently occurs in the history of families, that some members, though unknown to fame, impress all who know them that they are men of singular strength of character and judgement. Of such it may be said, that had circumstances required of them the display of bright character and fine abilities, they would always have been found equal to the occasion. The life of Eleazer-Robbins Winslow largely illustrates the truth of this observation. He was the father of a large family of children, and took good care to attend to their education. He was engaged in various manufacturing enterprises, and in this pursuit showed great and thorough knowledge. He was always philosophical; and the testimony of those who were associated with him was, that he had few superiors in general intellectual powers. His attention was not wholly confined to subjects relating to his business, but he was fond of thinking of and dealing with some of the larger questions of theology and politics. Among his neighbors in Newton no man was more respected. Some of his keen witticisms, and acute observations are quoted to this day, by his old friends or their descendants, as among the things worth remembering.

One of the choice honors in New England town life is that of being one of the "selectmen." This honor came to Mr. Winslow several times in Newton, together with other distinctions that showed appreciation by his fellow-townsmen. He died at the age of seventy-seven years, respected by all who knew him; and was buried in Newton Cemetery, now one of the most beautiful in that part of Massachusetts;

REV. MIRON WINSLOW, D.D., was born in Williston, Chittenden County, Vermont, December 11, 1789. He graduated at Middlebury College in 1815, and soon after became deeply interested in Foreign Missions, to which he devoted his life. He sailed from Boston in June, 1819, as missionary to India, where he labored with much success. After seventeen years' work in Ceylon, he founded a mission at Madras, and was president of a native college connected with it. In the course of his labors as a missionary he felt the need of a work that would illustrate the Tamil language. He accordingly devoted himself for twenty years, as occasion permitted, to the perfection of a complete "Dictionary of the Tamil and English language," which was published in 1862. This work has been highly commended by such scholars as Everett, Bancroft, and others, and is regarded by oriental scholars as one of the most valuable contributions yet made to oriental philology; and is a monument to the distinguished author's industry, devotion, and scholarship. He was also the author of several other works chiefly relating to Missionary subjects. He died in Cape Town, Africa, while on his way home to this country, on the 22d day of October, 1864;

REV. HUBBARD WINSLOW, D.D., was born in Williston, Vt., October 30, 1799. He became a clergyman and author, and was distinguished through life for scholarly attainments and profound interest in religious subjects and everything that in his judgment would promote the welfare of his fellow men. He graduated at Yale College in 1825, with honor, and studied theology there. In 1828 he became the pastor of the Congregational Church in Dover, N. H. In 1842 he became the pastor of the Bowdoin Street Congregational Church in Boston, and was the successor in that church of the late Rev. Lyman Beecher. In 1844 he became deeply interested in education, and, from that time to 1853, he had charge of the Mount Vernon or Beacon Hill Seminary for Young Ladies, in Boston, which institution, under his charge, became of high repute. Upon relinquishing this pursuit, he traveled extensively in France, Italy and Germany. His contributions to the American press during this period, giving sketches of his observations in Europe, are among the most interesting and instructive of that description. In 1857 he again resumed labor as a pastor, and took charge of the first Presbyterian church, in Geneva, New York. In 1859, his health failing, he removed to the city of New York, but soon took charge there of the 50th St. Presbyterian Church [see appendix p. 33]. He died at Williston, Vt., while on a visit, 13 Aug., 1864. He was a man of industrious habits, and published several important works. Among these may be named: "Controversial Theology," (Boston, 1832); "Philosophical Tracts" (1833); "Doctrine of the Trinity," (1834); "Christianity Applied to our Civil and Social Relations," (1835); "Young Man's Aid," (1836); "Aids to Self Examination," (1837); "Appropriate Sphere of Women," (1837); "Relation of the Natural Sciences to Revelation," (1839); "Design and Mode of Baptism," (1842); "Christian Doctrines," (1844); "Intellectual Philosophy," (1852); "Moral Philosophy," (New York, 1856); and "History of the First Presbyterian Church, and the Village of Geneva, N. Y.," (Boston 1857).

His works on Moral Philosophy and Intellectual Philosophy rank high and are much used in schools and colleges. As a man of sincere piety, pains-taking culture and love of goodness in men, and a desire to promote in all ways their happiness, Hubbard Winslow was noted and will long be remembered by his affectionate kindred and friends.

REV. GORDON WINSLOW, D.D., brother of Revs. Miron and Hubbard Winslow, was born at Williston, Vt., on the 12th day of September, 1803, and graduated at Yale College in the year 1830.

He became a clergyman of the Episcopal church, and after occupying several fields of labor settled on Staten Island, a bronchial affection rendering such a change necessary. He there became rector of St. Paul's parish and chaplain of the Quarantine.

When the civil war broke out his patriotic feelings were aroused, and he went from the city of New York with what was known as the Zouave Regiment, as Chaplain. The regiment became much attached to him. He was more than a chaplain to them. Being a man of much intelligence, and of a practical mind, he was useful in many ways, especially in sanitary matters. He was with the regiment in several severe battles, the first of which was the battle of Bethel, in Virginia. He was ever active among the sick and wounded. He was afterwards appointed on the Medical and Sanitary Staff, and in that capacity rendered valuable services for the army. He was the better prepared for this duty from having received a regular medical education. He died on the 7th day of June, 1864, under peculiarly distressing circumstances. He was on board a steamboat on the Potomac River, on his way from the seat of war, in charge of his son, Col. Cleveland Winslow, who had been seriously wounded in the severe battle of the Wilderness. Mr. Winslow had his favorite horse with him and on the morning of that day, in trying to obtain some water for him from the river, he slipped and fell overboard. Before aid could be had, he was drowned, leaving his wounded son on the boat. This son was placed in a hospital at Alexandria, where he was kindly cared for until his death, which occurred a short time afterwards. The Rev. Gordon Winslow is remembered by his friends with great affection and respect. His mind was of a philosophical type, and enriched by much learning and culture. On the front door of his house at Staten Island he placed an old fashioned brass knocker, presented to him by Daniel Webster, by whom it was taken from the front door of the old Governor Winslow house, now standing on the Winslow-Webster farm in Marshfield, Massachusetts.

Of descendants in female lines, to whom honorable mention is due, are the sons of REV. WINSLOW PAIGE, D.D.:

COL. JOHN-KEYES PAIGE, formerly Mayor of Albany, District Attorney, etc. etc.; and HON. CHRISTOPHER-ALONZO PAIGE, Reporter to the New York Court of Chancery, Senator, and Justice of the Supreme Court.

GILBERT¹ WINSLOW,

Born 26 October, 1600, at Droitwich, England, was the third brother of the Governor, with whom he came over in the Mayflower. His name is in the list of those who signed the compact on board that famous ship. It is thought that he went to Piscataqua after the settlement was commenced there; and thence to England, and that he never returned to this country. It does not appear that he left any family in New Hampshire. The only taxable person bearing the name of Winslow, resident in that province in 1732, was Samuel Winslow of Kingston, probably a son of Samuel Winslow [originally Winsley or Winsleade] who was killed by the Indians at that place in 1710.

JOSIAH¹ WINSLOW,

Born 11 February, 1605-6, at Droitwich, England, was the youngest brother of the Governor, and his assistant in many matters. He resided in Scituate in 1637, and was afterwards of Marshfield, which he represented at the General Court, in 1643, and several times afterwards in the Colonial Legislature; and of which he was town clerk for nearly thirty years. In 1636, he married Margaret Bourne, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth, of Marshfield. He died 1 December, 1674, aged 69 years. The only son mentioned in his will was Jonathan, who resided at Marshfield, where he died 8 September, 1676, aged 38 years.

Among the descendants of Josiah¹ Winslow, of other surnames, and those allied by marriage, are many who have nobly exhibited in their several callings and positions in life the virtues and principles of the pilgrim fathers, and who will in no wise suffer by comparison with those already named in other branches of the Winslow family. We briefly mention a few of these, whose extended biographies more properly belong to our Memorial of Josiah¹ Winslow :

COL. and HON. JOHN THACHER, one of the Governor's Aids, one of the Council of War, one of a Committee for Revising the Laws, Assistant of Plymouth Colony, and for many years Deputy to the General Court at Plymouth; "greatly honored and esteemed, he was buried under arms"; and his son HON. PETER THACHER, Town-clerk, and thirty years Treasurer, Judge, Councilor, and Chief Justice of the Colony.

MAJOR GEORGE LEWIS, of whom Rev. Dr. Prentiss says: "He was a man of great weight of character, excellent understanding, and was noted for the earnestness of his religious and political convictions. One might have gone far before finding a truer specimen of the Puritan deacon or of the old-fashioned Washingtonian federalist";

HON. GEORGE THACHER, member of Congress and Judge of the Supreme Court, — "a man of excellent qualities, considerable humor, a christian and a philosopher," of whom a conspicuous contemporary has said, "He had great acuteness of mind, much law learning, and was able to bring to his aid, in argument, more general knowledge on scientific subjects than any of his competitors";

ROBERT-TREAT PAINE, LL.D., Judge of the Superior Court of Massachusetts, Attorney General, and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence;

REV. AZEL BACKUS, D.D., first President of Hamilton College, New York; and his uncle, Rev. Charles Backus, D.D., an eminent theologian;

HON. GERRIT SMITH, member of Congress and a distinguished abolitionist;

HORATIO-NELSON ROBINSON, Professor of Mathematics and author of Robinson's Series of Mathematics and Astronomy;

HON. REUBEN-HYDE WALWORTH, LL.D., Chancellor of the State of New York, and compiler of Hyde Genealogy;

WILLIAM WOODBRIDGE, U. S. Senator, Judge of the Supreme Court, and Governor of the state of Michigan;

ROGER GRISWOLD, (son of Mathew, LL.D., Chief Justice, and afterwards Lieutenant-Governor, Governor of Connecticut, and his wife, Ursula, the daughter of Gov. Roger Wolcott) Member of Congress, Judge of the Superior Court, and Governor of Connecticut; of whose mother it may be said that her husband, father, brother, son and nephew were governors of Connecticut;

HON. ALBERT-HALLER TRACY, elected to Congress at the early age of twenty-four years;

WILLIAM-CURTIS NOYES one of the most distinguished Lawyers of N. Y. City.

HON. ROGER HUNTINGTON, Senator, Speaker of the House of Representatives and Comptroller of the State of Connecticut;

CHARLES-THEODORE PLATT, a brave naval officer;

JUDGE JOSIAH COTTON, Clerk of Court, Compiler of a copious English and Indian Vocabulary, Register of Deeds, Judge of the Common Pleas, and, for forty years, a preacher to the Indians; and WILLIAM CUSHING, LL.D., Judge of Probate for Lincoln County, Maine, successor to his father John, as Justice of the Superior Court, and Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, of whom, at the beginning of the Revolution, it is said that he alone, of the high in office, supported the rights of his country; was placed by Washington in 1789 on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, in which office he continued till his death in 1810. He united patience of inquiry with quickness of perception, and the learning of the scholar with the science of the lawyer. He was careful in the performance of christian duty and eminent for his public and private virtues.

The sketch thus given of members of the various branches whose common ancestor was Edward Winslow of Droitwich, England, shows that this family is identified with historical events of much importance. It also shows that it is a family of marked characteristics, of which it is firmly tenacious. While not claiming for it exemption from the frailties that are common to humanity, we do feel justified in asserting for it a high place of honor in affairs. We have generally found it possessed of those virtues that make manhood and inspire confidence and respect. In the four brothers who came to Plymouth and took part in organizing and maintaining the new colony, we see men who were engaged in a great enterprise of self-government, whose far reaching influence and power it is not easy to exaggerate. The various communities that constituted the Colonies in America in the seventeenth century have now grown to be a great people commanding in numbers and power. This people is cosmopolitan, and its palladium of safety and prosperity is necessarily a theory and policy and practice of equal and exact justice for all. Nothing less will satisfy the dream of the Pilgrim, nor the just expectations of their descendants, who have lived to exchange centennial greetings.

“To the frivolous philosophy of human life which makes all the world a puppet show, and history a book of anecdotes, the moral warfare which fills up the life of man and the record of his race seems as unreal and as aimless as the conflicts of the glittering hosts upon an airy field, whose display lights up the fleeting splendors of a northern night. But free government for a great people never comes from or gets aid from such philosophers. To a true spiritual discernment there are few things more real, few things more substantial, few things more likely to endure in this world than human thoughts, human passions, human interests, thus molten into the frame and model of our State. “O morem præclaram, disciplinamque, quam a majoribus accepimus, si quidem teneremus!”¹

On a recent memorable occasion, a distinguished poet referred to this and kindred themes in lines that may be fitly cited in closing this chapter, as illustrative of the homogeneity of spirit, race and destiny that may come from the ripening of Colonial into National life.¹

Sun of the stately Day,
 Let Asia into the shadow drift,
 Let Europe bask in thy ripened ray,
 And over the severing ocean lift
 A brow of broader splendor !
 Give light to the eager eyes
 Of the Land that waits to behold thee rise :
 The gladness of morning lend her,
 With the triumph of noon attend her,
 And the peace of the vesper skies !
 For lo ! she cometh now
 With hope on the lip and pride on the brow,
 Stronger, and dearer, and fairer,
 To smile on the love we bear her,—
 To live, as we dreamed her and sought her,
 Liberty's latest daughter !
 In the clefts of the rocks, in the secret places,
 We found her traces ;
 On the hills, in the crash of the woods that fall,
 We heard her call ;
 When the lines of battle broke,
 We saw her face in the fiery smoke ;
 Through toil, and anguish, and desolation,
 We followed and found her,
 With the grace of a virgin Nation
 As a sacred zone around her !
 Who shall rejoice
 With a righteous voice,
 Far heard through the ages, if not she ?
 For the menace is dumb that defied her,
 The doubt is dead that denied her,
 And she stands acknowledged, and strong and free !
 * * * * *
 Foreseen in the vision of sages,
 Foretold when martyrs bled,
 She was born of the longing of ages,
 By the truth of the noble dead
 And the faith of the living fed !
 No blood in her lightest veins
 Frets at remembered chains,
 Nor shame of bondage has bowed her head.
 In her form and features still
 The unblenching Puritan will,
 Cavalier honor, Huguenot grace,
 The Quaker truth and sweetness,
 And the strength of the danger-girdled race
 Of Holland, blend in a proud completeness.
 From the homes of all, where her being began,
 She took what she gave to Man :
 Justice, that knew no station,
 Belief, as soul decreed,
 Free air for aspiration,
 Free force for independent deed !

¹From Bayard Taylor's Ode, Philadelphia, 4 July, 1876.

She takes but gives again,
As the sea returns the rivers in rain ;
And gathers the chosen of her seed
From the hunted of every crown and creed.
Her Germany dwells by a gentler Rhine ;
Her Ireland sees the old sunburst shine ;
Her France pursues some dream divine ;
Her Norway keeps his mountain pine ;
Her Italy waits by the western brine ;
 And, broad-based under all,
Is planted England's oaken-hearted mood,
 As rich in fortitude
As e'er went worldward from the island wall!
 Fused in her candid light,
To one strong race all races here unite :
Tongues melt in hers, hereditary foemen
Forget their sword and slogan, kith and clan ;
 'Twas glory once to be a Roman ;
She makes it glory, now, to be a Man.

WINSLOW MEMORIAL.

KENELM¹ WINSLOW.

1. KENELM¹ Winslow, third son and fourth child of Edward^A Winslow and Magdalene (Ollyver) of Droitwich, Worcestershire, Eng., was born at that place, on Sunday, 29 April, 1599, and baptized the Thursday following, 3 May, 1599; he "died at Salem and was buried there 13 Sept., 1672," æ. 73 years. He came to Plymouth probably in 1629 with his brother Josiah¹, and was admitted freeman, 1 Jan. 1632-3. In 1640, he was chosen Surveyor in Town of Plymouth, but neglecting highways is fined ten shillings [Ply. Col. Rec., II, p. 1]. He removed to Marshfield about 1641, having previously received a grant of land at that place, then called Green's Harbor 5 Mar. 1637-8: "all that parcel of land remaining of that neck of land lying on the east side of the lands lately granted to Josias Winslow, at Green's Harbor, are granted to Kenelme Winslow and Love Brewster, to be divided betwixt them, provided that Kenelme Winslow have that part next adjoining to his brother Josias, upon the conditions the lands there are granted upon" [Plym. Col. Rec., I, 78]. Miss Thomas in her memorials of Marshfield, p. 27, says: he "settled on a gentle eminence by the sea, near the extremity of a neck of land lying between Green Harbor and South Rivers. This tract of the township was considered the Eden of the region. It was beautified with groves of majestic oaks and graceful walnuts, with the undergrowth void of tangled shrubbery. A few of these groves were standing within the memory of persons now living (1854) but all have fallen beneath the hand of the woodman. This homestead he gave to his second son, Nathaniel², and at his death it passed into the hands of his son, Kenelm³, who m. Abigail Waterman; their son Kenelm⁴, m. Abigail Bourne, was obliged to sell the place in consequence of the failure of the business of his younger brother Joseph⁴, of Boston, which also involved his other lands. Other lands were granted to Kenelm¹ Winslow at various times, and still others were purchased by him. He was one of the twenty-six original proprietors of Assonet (Freetown), Mass., purchased from the Indians 2 April, 1659, and received the 24th lot, a portion of which is still owned and occupied (1873) by Nathaniel⁶ Winslow, his gr. gr. gr. grandson "to whom, by heirship, it has descended through successive generations of more than two hundred years."¹

KENELM WINSLOW

of Kempsey, Eng.,
died, 1697, in the parish of
St. Andrew, Worcester, Eng.; m.
Catherine.

His estates were "Clerkenleap," and "Newport's Place."—His will, which was dated 14 Apr.
1697, was proved 9 Nov. of the same year, and is still to be seen in Worcester.

Mr. Winslow was styled "joiner," 6 Jan. 1633-4, when Samuel Jenney was indented to him as an apprentice; but he is elsewhere and generally called a "planter" and was somewhat engaged in the shipping interest.

Besides serving his townsmen in minor offices, he was deputy, or representative, in the general court, 1642-44, and 1649-53, eight years. [Plym. Col. Rec.]

There is, among different branches of his descendants, a tradition that he possessed a high spirit or temper which brought him into litigation.

He is probably the person named in the suit tried at New York, June, 1665, [see Valentine's Manual of 1852, p. 483] regarding the sale of a Bark to Mr. Fatche; and in the suit of Doughty vs. Kenelm Winslow—same jury—verdict, twenty-five gilders; also in the suit, Kenelm Winslow vs. Samuel Moore—same juries—"The Juries do allow the plaintive cost and damages of the court and no more—approved." [We are indebted to Mr. Charles B. Moore, Life Member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, for a copy of this suit.]

He m. June, 1634, Eleanor Adams, widow of John Adams, of Plymouth.¹ She survived him and d. at Marshfield, Mass., where she was buried 5 Dec. 1681, "being eighty-three years old." He d. 13 Sept. 1672, æ. seventy-three, Salem, Mass., where he had gone on business [Hon. Luther Hatch, of Marshfield]. According to Rev. L. R. Paige, he died there "apparently after a long sickness; for in his will dated five weeks earlier, 8 Aug. 1672, he describes himself as 'being very sick and drawing nigh unto death.' He may have been in Salem on a visit to Mrs. Elizabeth Corwin, [Curwen] daughter of his brother Edward¹ Winslow, or perhaps, for the purpose of obtaining medical aid." [See p. 275, Young's Chronicles].

Marshfield, Mass.

The following letter from Rev. Edward C. Towne to John⁷ Winslow, of Brooklyn, is interesting and suggestive, as relating to the time of and circumstances attending his arrival at Plymouth. Mr. Towne had previously published a letter in the New York Tribune, enforcing the discrimination that should be made between the Pilgrims and Puritans, in studies of colonial history.

John Winslow,

Dear Sir;

It gives me pleasure to answer your note of May 6th.

Of Gov. Edward Winslow's four brothers—John, born April, 1597; Kenelm, born April, 1599; Gilbert, born October 1600; and Josiah, born February 1605; Kenelm and Josiah "arrived at Plymouth before 1632, and both settled at Marshfield" (Young's Chronicles of the Pilgrims, p. 275). Kenelm died at Salem, 1672, but it was while on a visit there. He was from first to last one of the Pilgrims, within the limits of the Old Colony. The exact date of his arrival from England is not known. If he came in 1629, in Puritan company, and perhaps made some stay at Salem before proceeding to Plymouth, it would still be consistent with his being an original Pilgrim with the Mayflower people and their delayed companions. Only about one-third of the Pilgrim Church of Leyden came over at first, and in 1629 a long hindered portion of the original number came by way of Salem, in Puritan company, and proceeded thence to Plymouth. The Puritan ships, spoken of in my note to the Tribune—the Talbot, George, and Lion—were directly followed by three more—the Pilgrim, Four Sisters, and the Mayflower (the same that in 1620 came to Plymouth). It was in the Talbot and the Mayflower that 35 of the Leyden people smuggled themselves over. Gilbert had come with Edward in the Mayflower, 1620, and John the next year in the Fortune, with the second detachment of original Pilgrims. It is likely that Kenelm followed in their track, however he may have taken advantage of Puritan company. Possibly he came in the Mayflower itself, in 1629, when it formed part of the Puritan Expedition. The next year also the old Mayflower was one of the fleet which brought over Winthrop and his large company, and your ancestor may have taken advantage of that opportunity. But however he came, it was as a Pilgrim to join the Old Colony. Either he, or his son Kenelm, got a tract of land in Rhode Island, where many of his descendants lived, and still live.

Of the two ships of 1629 which brought Pilgrims, it must have been the Mayflower rather than the Talbot on which your ancestor came; for the original record states that "some serve the Pilgrim company were sent in the Talbot, "but these [The Pilgrims.] come in the Mayflower." No doubt your ancestor made a point, if he had a chance to do so, of coming over in the original Pilgrim ship. The probability is very great also that he took advantage of the first good opportunity, that of 1629, and that he proceeded directly to Plymouth, and was not even transiently a resident at Salem. His name does not appear in the lists of freemen within the limits of the Puritan Colony.

In Bradford it is mentioned that in 1631, Edward Winslow sent from London by the White Angel his brother Josiah, and that then began his employment with the Plymouth people. As Josiah was six years younger than Kenelm, it may be presumed that the latter had already come over, and that Josiah was taken as the only brother left. This leaves it almost certain, with the previous probabilities, that it was by the Mayflower, in 1629, that your ancestor came over to join the Plymouth pilgrims. He came to Marshfield on account, doubtless, of his brother Edward's estate, and as Edward was a good deal engaged with Puritans as well as Pilgrims, in the agencies which he undertook in England, it is likely that Kenelm had more or less business and acquaintance among the Puritans, and that in this way he was on a visit to Salem at the time of his death. When I next see the Whitmans of Plymouth, who are descendants of Edward Winslow, I will make further inquiry, and will also look at one or two books which I have not at hand here. It is not likely however, that any thing can be added to the probable conclusion that your ancestor, though not at first, yet came in the Mayflower.

Their children were:

2. 1. KENELM, [6] b. abt. 1635; d. 11 Nov. 1715; m. Mercy Worden; m. 2d, Damaris ———.
3. 2. ELEANOR or ELLEN, [18] b. abt. 1637; d. 27 Aug. 1676; m. Samuel Baker.
4. 3. NAHANIEL, [27] b. abt. 1639; d. 1 Dec. 1719; m. Faith Miller.
5. 4. JOB, [36] b. abt. 1641; d. 14 July, 1720; m. Ruth ———.

6. KENELM², [2] (Kenelm¹.) b. abt. 1635, Plymouth, Mass.; d. 11 Nov., 1715, Harwich, Mass., "in the 79th year of his age," acc. to gravestone, (14 Nov. acc. to Savage.) He early removed to Cape Cod, and settled in that part of Yarmouth which was afterwards incorporated with Harwich, and which is now Brewster. His homestead was near the westerly border of the town, now known as West Brewster, Satucket, or Winslow's Mills. He is mentioned in the Yarmouth Records as early as 1668, Harwich then being in the constablerick of Yarmouth. In a "rate" dated 29 Apr., 1676, "towards the charge of the late war," we find "Kenel. Winslow £4. 13. 6. [Freeman's Hist. Cape Cod, II, p. 195.] Whether he was engaged in any of the encounters with the Indians we do not know, but, in 1678, he is styled "Col. Winslow" in the list of freemen of Yarmouth (Hist. Cape Cod, II, p. 196). He is also called "planter" or "yeoman" in sundry deeds, and is a purchaser of large tracts of wild land, especially in what is now the town of Rochester, on which several of his children afterwards dwelt. In 1679, he was engaged with the "thirty partners" in such a purchase. See Mass. Hist. Coll., XIV, 259, where he is erroneously described as of Marshfield, instead of Yarmouth. We find also on the 15 Mar. 1680, an agreement was made "with our neighbors, the purchasers or proprietors of the land between Stoney Brook and Bound Brook," subsequently signed by Ananias Wing, Paul Sears, Kenelm Winslow, and John Dillingham, Jr., on the one part, and by John Thacher, Sam'l Hawes, Thomas Sturgis and Josiah Thacher in behalf of Yarmouth [Hist. Cape Cod, II, p. 198]. Among other purchases he secured a good "water privilege," which has been of advantage to his descendants even unto the present time. In 1699 he sold it to his son Kenelm, and now (1873) it is owned by his great-great-grandson, Wm.⁷ Winslow, of West Brewster, Mass.

From the Mansfield, Conn., Records, we find that Kenelm Winslow, of Harwich Barnstable Co., Mass., bought of George Denison, of Stonington, one thousand acre of land in Windham, (in that part of the town which afterwards became Mansfield, Conn., 11 March, 1700, for which he paid £30. On the 7th of October, 1700, he gives this land to his son Samuel, who afterwards sells it to his brother Kenelm [50]. It does not appear from the records that Kenelm Winslow, either father or son, ever resided in Windham or Mansfield. Like his father he seems to have incurred the displeasure of the General Court. Under date of 3 Oct. 1662 (Rec., IV, 29), it is recorded that "Kenelme Winslow, junr., for riding a journey on the Lord's day, although he pleaded some disappointment enforcing him thereunto, is fined ten shillings." He must not, however, be regarded as a scoffer at religion, or as negligent in the observance of its forms, for on three occasions he went to Scituate, some sixty miles distant, that his children might not remain unbaptized. "He brought to the 2d church in Scituate for baptism, Kenelm, 1668; Josiah, 1670; Thomas, 1672. It is well known that many of the ministers in the colony were opposed to infant sprinkling at that time" [Deane's Hist. Scituate, p. 389]. Also, about a year before his death, 4 Oct. 1714, he was one among five chosen "to seat persons, or place them where they shall sit, in the meeting house" [Hist. Cape Cod, II, p. 501]. He m. 28 Sept. 1667, Mercy Worden, b. abt. 1641, dau. of Peter, Jr., and Mercy, of Yarmouth. She d. 22 Sept., 1688, "in the 48th year of her age," according to her gravestone, which is still standing in the Winslow burying-ground in Dennis. The monument is of a hard slate, is said to have been brought from England, and is the oldest in the yard. The headstones of Kenelm Winslow, his two sons, and many of his descendants are also to be seen. According to History of Cape Cod, this burying-ground is "near the road leading from Nobscusset to Satucket," or, according to Josiah Paine, Esq., "a little south of the county road in East Dennis, which is but a short distance from the Brewster line." He m. 2d, Damaris——, who survived him, and was living 27 March, 1729. His will is as follows :

In the name of God Amen. The Tenth day of January one thousand seven hundred and twelve, I Kenelm Winslow, of the town of Harwich, in the county of Barnstable, and province of Massachusetts Bay, in New England, being grown in years and calling to mind that my time is short in this life as well as uncertain, and I being, through the mercy of God, of disposing mind and memory, do make, constitute, ordain and declare this my last will and testament in manner and form following, revoking and annulling by these presents all and every will or wills heretofore by me made and declared by word or writing, and this to be taken for my last will and testament and none other. First, I commit my soul to God who gave it me, humbly depending upon ye precious merits and death of Jesus Christ my only Lord for salvation and free and full pardon of all my sins and my body to the earth from whence it was taken, in comfortable hope through grace of a Glorious Salvation to life again, to be buried in such decent Christian manner as to my executor hereafter named shall be thought fit. And now for the settling my temporal estate and such goods, chattels and lands as I have not by deed formerly conveyed, I do order, give and dispose of the same in manner and form following: That is to say, First, I will that all those debts and duties as I owe in right or conscience to any man or person whatsoever shall be well and truly paid within convenient time after my decease b.

ny executor hereafter named. I give and bequeath unto my beloved wife Damaris all my now dwelling house and my barn, and my new orchard with all the farm which now encloseth it where now it stands round said orchard, which she shall maintain at her own charge so long as she hath the benefit of it. And she my said wife shall have the fruit of the two pear trees in my old orchard. Also my said wife shall have the land on which my said house stands, and that which is joining thereunto eastward and northward, with all s'd meadows lying on the northeast thereof as the said land and meadow is comprehended within and between the boundaries following, viz., from the s'd house the range extends eastward where the same now stands to a stone with the letter B, and thence by a settoff northeastward on a straight line to A. Dulb's swampwood tree, standing in the edge of ye marsh, and again westerly from said house ye range runs (as now the same stands) down near ye spring to a post in the same with a heap of stones by it. Thence said range runs by said mark northeastward strait to a stake and stones by it, thence turning more eastward on another straight line to a heap of stones at a briar bush. Thence by a settoff northward through an island of upland on a straight line to a post with stones by it. Thence near ye same range down into the marsh to a stake and so to ye main river, and as ye river runs to Andru Clark's meadow ponds and so up southward by said crook to a stake near the upland, and from the stakes westward in a straight line to the aforesaid swampwood tree in the edge of the marsh. And my said wife shall also have a privilege in my part of common or undivided lands for fire-wood or fencing stuff as shall be needful for her, and the use of my cart-way leading from my house up through my land to the said post-road, for carting wood, and fencing stuff etc., all which said housings, lands, meadow and all other the above mentioned particulars my said wife shall have and enjoy for her use, and her children so long as she remains my widow, and no longer, provided also my will is that if it so happen that my wife in the time of her widowhood do remove from my house to dwell with any of her children or friends, shall not put her lands, meadows and premises to Hire or rent to any persons, but to my son Kenelm Winslow, his heirs, Executor, Administrator, and in case that my wife and he or they cannot agree upon the yearly rent thereof, then they shall choose each of them one indifferent man, which two men by them chosen shall set the yearly value thereof, and if it so happen those two cannot agree how much shall be yearly paid for the premises, then these men aforesaid shall choose them a third man, and they, or any two of them agreeing what shall be paid for the rent of the premises, and if then my son Kenelm Winslow, his executor, etc., refuse to pay ye said rent, or hire the lott, then my s'd wife may let it to whom she please. Only the dwelling house, if my wife leave it, shall be at the disposal of my son Kenelm, his heirs, executor, Administrator, etc. And if he or they hire out the s'd house, my wife shall have half the rent of it, otherwise it shall stand void, and my wife may at any time return and dwell in it again during her widowhood. My will further is, that my said son Kenelm, his heirs, executor etc., shall always have the privilege of a convenient way through the land above bequeathed to my wife, down to his part of ye Island of upland above mentioned as he hath occasion, and further is, and I do give to my son Kenelm Winslow, his heirs and assigns forever at ye death or marriage of my said wife Damaris (which shall first happen) all my housings, lands, meadows, and all other of above mentioned premises, to have and to hold to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

He inherited the homestead in M. and was probably a farmer. He was a captain of militia as early as 1698, having been "sergeant" in 1686, when he was one of the selectmen of Marshfield. In 1675, we find him on a jury for the trial of the Indians who had murdered another Indian called Sassamon. [Thacher's Hist. of Plymouth, p. 381.] In 1689, he was a Deputy to the Plymouth General Court, and Representative in 1695, 1709 and 1711, after the union of the colonies. Rec., X, 364.*] He appears to have been one of the early settlers of Rochester, as he was there about 1680. [Barber's Mass. Hist. Collections, p. 524.] But he soon removed to Freetown, for, in 1686, he was one of the selectmen of that town; Town Clerk and grand-juryman in 1690; assessor in 1691, 1701-1706, and 1711; moderator of the annual town meeting in 1708 and 1711; deputy to the General Court in 1686, and representative, in 1692, at the first General Court in Massachusetts under the charter of Wm. and Mary. 50. KENELM^s, [7] (Kenelm^s, Kenelm¹) bapt. 9 Aug. 1668, at Scituate, Mass.; d. 20 Mar. 1728-9, "in the 62d year of his age." "He inherited the homestead in Harwich, and was a clothier, or cloth dresser; the business which he established at Satucket, or Winslow's Mills, was prosperously conducted both by himself and posterity" [Rev. Lucius R. Paige, D. D.]. He bought, of his brother Samuel^s, [69] the land in Windham (now Mansfield), Conn., which he had received from his father, 7 Oct. 1700. The Patent to the town of Mansfield was issued 20 Oct. 1703, and Kenelm^s Winslow was one of the patentees; his name also appears among the proprietors in the quitclaim given, by John Mason and Oweneco, of their interest in the one thousand acre rights, to the proprietors of Mansfield, 13 Nov. 1707. Kenelm^s finally sold this land, 20 June, 1709, to Benjamin Hall. Eight years later, 11 Mar. 1716-17, Nathaniel Hall of the town of Lewis, Penn., sells to Kenelm Winslow of Harwich, "all that belongs to my brother Joseph Hall, late of Mansfield, deceased, intestate." Gershom Hall, of Harwich, gives a letter of attorney to his son Kenelme Winslow, of Harwich, 21 Mar. 1717 [Mansfield Records]. He seems to have been a man of distinction in the town and county; in 1707, he was elected town treasurer, which office he held five years; in 1713, selectman, and served three years; and in 1720, was chosen representative. "3 May, 1708, Kenelm Winslow, Jr. and Joseph Paine were chosen agents to settle the bounds between this town [Harwich] and Yarmouth." In 1712, it was "voted also that Ens. Mirrick and Kenelm Winslow, Jr., run the range between Jona. Bangs' land and the ministerial land now in Mr. Stone's improvement, and set it out by bounds; as also measure the land of Dea. Freeman, before Mr. Stone's door and set out so much of the land that belongs to the training-place adjoining the said Freeman's land, by the pound, by way of exchange with the town." Again, in 1715, we find that "Kenelm Winslow Jr. and John Freeman Jr. were appointed by the town 'to look to the boys on Sabbath days to keep them from playing in meeting'"

[Hist. Cape Cod, II, pp. 498, 499 and 501]. In 1723, he had the second choice of pews in the new meeting-house, and was rated £7. 10 towards the £130 to be realized from selling the pews. It was "agreed that every man rated highest have a choice in order, to wit: he that is rated highest of all shall have the first choice; he that is rated next highest shall have the second choice, and so successively; provided, however, that if any do not, on the first Monday in Sept. next, appear at the old meeting-house, in town-meeting, and make their selection and pay the money, they shall forfeit the privilege of choice" [Hist. Cape Cod, II, 503]. He was sole executor of his father's will [See will, p. 75]. He m. 5 Jan. 1689-90, Bethia Hall, dau. of Rev. Gershom and Bethia (Bangs) of Yarmouth, and granddau. of Edward Bangs of Plymouth, who came in the Ann in 1623. She was published, 19 March, 1729-30 [acc. Harwich Rec.], to Joseph Hawes, of Yarmouth, and m. 21 March, 1729-30 [acc. to Yarmouth Rec.]. Joseph Hawes m. again 20 July, 1732 [acc. Yar. Rec., as given by Amos Otis]. The will of Kenelm, dated 22 Jan. 1728-9, and on record at Barnstable, Mass., names his brother Edward, his wife Bethia, and sons, Kenelm, Thomas and Seth. He gives a portion to each of his grand-children, Mercy Wing, Rebecca Wing and John Wing, children of his deceased daughter Bethia Wing, also to his five daughters, Mercy Vincent, Rebecca Rider, Thankful Crosby, Mary Clapp and Hannah Winslow. He provides that his negro and mulatto servants be sold by his wife, and the proceeds, with other amounts, be divided between his wife, three daughters, and three sons, Kenelm, Thomas and Seth. His son Kenelm is made executor. Will proved 24 Mar. 1728. Estate valued at £2684. 6. 0

He received one-fourth part of his father's land in Freetown, 27 Feb. 1693-4, "in consideration of natural affection and fatherly love to his well beloved son Josiah Winslow;" and 17 Feb. 1702, he purchased all his father's lands "on the west of the Taunton River, and in Freetown, on the East of that River, and by the Fall River." He resided one mile from Assonet Village, on the road to Taunton, on the "Charles Strange place," where the poor-house now stands. "He was a clothier, and established the business of cloth-dressing near Assonet Bridge, where it was continued by several generations of his descendants." (Rev. Lucius R. Paige.) The business is still carried on by his great-great-grandson Thomas Gilbert⁷ Winslow. Thus we have the two brothers, Kenelm² [50] and Josiah,⁸ both pursuing the same course in Harwich and Freetown, each establishing a business of importance to others, and profitable to themselves and descendants. He was also one of the proprietors of the forge erected in Freetown in or about 1704. He was very active in public affairs; was Constable in 1696; Surveyor of highways in 1699; Moderator of the annual town meeting in 1702, 8, 12 and 16; Assessor in 1702, 3, 5, 7, 10, 13 and 22; Selectman in 1702, 3, 4, 9 and 10; Town Treasurer in 1704; and grand jurymen in 1721. He was 1st Lieutenant of the Assonet company of militia, and 9 Feb. 1725, was commissioned Captain. He was one of the committee to determine upon building a meeting-house; was moderator of the town meeting held to act in this matter, 2 Feb. 1709; and still later we find that William⁸ (s. of Lt. Job²) and Josiah Winslow were the town's agents for building the first church edifice erected in Freetown. He was published 13 June 1695, at Freetown, to Margaret Tisdale, of Taunton, Mass., b. 1675, dau. of James and Mary (Avery) of Berkley, and gr. dau. of John, of Duxbury, who was slain by Indians, 27 June 1675, and Sarah (Walker). She d. 12 Jan. 1737, aged 61, and was buried in South Cemetery, Berkley, Mass. He m. 2d, 3 Nov. 1737, Mrs. Hannah Winslow, perhaps widow of his cousin, Richard⁷ Winslow, of Freetown. He married Mary ———, who survived him. His will, dated Wareham, 5 Dec. 1755, and proved 3 April, 1758, mentions all the children who are named below, excepting John. The first three are recorded in Marshfield, and William, Sarah and John in Swansea, where they are given as children of "John and Mary."

Hannah——, who survived him; as 19 Aug. 1737, Hannah Winslow, of Freetown, widow of Richard, gives a deed of land in Leicester, in which originally Samuel Ruggles had a

* According to the record, "Josias" was born 13 Jan. 1683-4, [New England Hist. and Gen. Reg., Vol. XXV, p. 357]; but this name is not found in the father's will, while "son John" is mentioned. Could this have been a error in recording said will? Miss Thomas, in her "Memorials of Marshfield," in giving the children of Nathaniel² Winslow, mentions only one Josiah, b. 1681; d. 1682, and no John. She states that Josias¹ Winslow had an only son Jonathan, who d. 1676, aged 38, leaving a son John, b. 1664; m. Mary, and had William, b. 1718, Eleanor, b. 1709, and Faith, b. 1706. John, the last named, alienated the home of his fathers, it is said, from fear, fancying from its lawn-like lands, and their contiguity to the sea, that it would eventually sink beneath its storm-stirred waves. He removed either to Bristol County or the south part of the County of Plymouth. The Winslows of Swansea are John's descendants, according to Edward Winslow⁷ Wilkings. [See John¹ Winslow Memorial.]

Rev. L. R. Paige states that John³ (Nathaniel², Kenelm¹) resided successively in Marshfield, Swansea, and Wareham, Mass., his will being dated in the latter place. The following inscriptions are also found on gravestones in the Marshfield yard:

"Here Lyes Buried the body of John Winslow, son of Mr. John Winslow, who dyed August ye 8th 1724 aged 18 years."

"Here Lyes Buried the body of Nathaniel, son of Mr. John Winslow, who dyed March ye 26th, 1723, aged 10."

These two children were considered by Chancellor Walworth, compiler of the Hyde Genealogy, as descendants of John³ (Jonathan², Josiah¹).

From the foregoing it is apparent that several difficulties present themselves. First, as to whether Nathaniel² had a son John. Second, if he had, whether he and his family have not been confounded with John, b. 1 Mar. 1664, and his family, as both were residents of Marshfield. It will be observed that Miss Thomas regards Faith, Eleanor and William as children of the last-mentioned John, while Rev. L. R. Paige gives them to John, son of Nathaniel².

right, to John Winslow, Joiner. [Worcester Registry of Deeds, vol. 10, p. 99]. His will, dated 7 Aug. 1727, was presented for probate, 16 Apr. 1728. In it he describes himself as a "practitioner of physick and chirurgeon," and mentions all his children.

Freetown, Mass.

*One party, which for greater facility, we designate pater-lineal, would write genealogies limited to lines bearing the patronymic of a male ancestor.

The other party, which for convenience we designate ambi-lineal, i. e., pater-mater-lineal, would present the records of descendants of a common ancestor, including those bearing the patronymic, and also those of equal kinship to said ancestor, though of female lines and changed names.

Physiological facts, harmonizing with the precepts of our holy religion, teach us unmistakably and authoritatively that a father and mother of equal personal merits, leaving old England;—say, in the Mayflower of Plymouth, or the Half-moon of Manhattan, are equally entitled to honor from their children and posterity. In the series of successive brothers and sisters, who become fathers and mothers of parallel lines from common immigrant parents, can the advocates of the pater-lineal system tell us at what link in the chain, or at what generation the honor of ancestors is to be transferred from the female to the male line of posterity?—

We maintain that, if in the act of marriage, a contract be made that the wife shall transfer her goods and chattels, her estate, real and personal, to her husband, there can be no law or ruling of equity by which the fair name of her ancestors can be so transferred or ignored by her posterity.

If the father of Elizabeth Winslow above named, has as his descendants several hundred families; of whom one hundred being the descendants of the said Elizabeth, bear one hundred different surnames; and some pious descendant of hers should now undertake to write her biography and the genealogy of her descendants; then these one hundred families would ALL be equally included.

They would severally bear to Lieutenant Job^s Winslow, the father of Elizabeth, the same degree of consanguinity that a son bearing the patronymic, Winslow, of any generation correspondingly equidistant would bear to the said father.

We plead, therefore, from all considerations for the untrammelled PRIVILEGE of genealogists, mater-linealists, pater-linealists, and ambi-linealists, without professional censure, to exercise their powers, according to their several opportunities, in the discharge of a pious duty, in paternal and maternal aspects. Nathaniel and Hannah (Mayo) of Barnstable] From the East Haddam Commercial Advertiser of Feb. 10, 1872, we extract the following:

Some authorities say that James, the subject of this sketch, was engaged in the old French war; if so, he was quite young, for he was but 17 years old at the time of the expedition against Louisburg.

I find among the East Haddam Law Records the following, which shows a determination to settle and identify himself with the place as a landed proprietor:

Thirteen purchases of realty in that day and place, and all within 28 years, is unusual; but I remember only one sale, which was to Epaphroditus Champion, for £20, 6s, 8d, Sept. 4, 1786. He was not 30 years old when he purchased his first real estate in East Haddam, and he died possessed of all except the piece sold to Gen. Champion.

I have not been able to find out the regiment to which he was attached, but am told it was a cavalry regiment, and he was with it as captain in some engagements during the war, probably in the year 1776. In the land records the title "Captain" appears 1st May, 1777, but in the other records it occurs as early as Dec. 1774.

The present generation remember the Landing (that portion of East Haddam facing the bend in the Connecticut River and just below the mouth of Salmon River) as a beautiful village, with a row of fine houses at the summit of a gently rising green, and two neat white fences marking two parallel roads and terraces, which, in contrast with the bold abrupt mountain behind, presented one of the most attractive and picturesque scenes on that most charming of rivers.

The most central, perhaps, of the dwellings was the residence of Captain James Green, whose high stone stoop facing both ways spoke hospitality almost as plainly as the gaily painted panel hanging in front, which introduced it as "The Blacksmith's Arms." This was a large building, but I doubt if much room was required to accommodate the occasional traveler who visited East Haddam a century and a quarter ago. The house next north of this is a more recent structure, which belonged to his son Timothy. Next beyond stands the former residence of his daughter Nancy (Mrs. Esquire Jared Spencer), and a few doors on (the site of the bank building) was the forge and then the residence of his son Oliver. The next house to the "old homestead," on the south side, was the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. Thomas Marshall. Next south lived his son Richard; next to that his daughter Hannah, Mrs. Joseph Hungerford. These have been metamorphosed into the Maplewood Music Seminary, and the two generations who made music and uproar (operas) there are but occasional visitors now, or gone forever. Here, then, in the midst of his children, lived Captain James Green, and just over the way, as first post-master of East Haddam, he presided over that event in New England—the mail arrival and distribution.

There were annual elections then, and we find James Green was chosen "Brander of Horses," Dec. 5, 1766, again 1767, and every year continuously until 1773. Mr. James Green was chosen Constable Dec. 4, 1769, and every year to 1776; in the two latter he is termed "Captain." He was chosen Collector to gather the County Rate, 1769 and 1789. To view roads and make another in some profitable place, 1771 and 1787. To purchase property for the town, 1772. Inspector of Provisions, 1780, To class the inhabitants of the town, 1780-82. Surveyor of Highways, 1782 and 1789, Selectman, 1776-7-8, 1783-4-5-6, and Moderator at Town Meetings, Dec. 7, 1778, Dec. 6, 1784, May 9 and Dec. 5, 1785, Dec. 4, 1786, May 5, Sept. 18, Nov. 12, and Dec. 3, 1787, and April 13, 1789.

I have alluded to the forge a little way up the road. It was there he made guns during the war, which echoed the notes of the Declaration of Independence on many a battle-field to the satisfaction of his present rebel associates, if not of his late royal master, and East Haddam was all rebel. As early as June 30, 1774, it voted unanimous for a "Declaration," and Jan. 6, 1778, adopted unanimously the Articles of Confederation. They were prompt, generous and patriotic in furnishing arms, provisions, money and men, and I hope a town history will some day appear which will publish and preserve these facts in full.

Mrs. Ruth Green was bapt. and they both entered the communion March 7, 1773 at the meeting-house of the first Orthodox Society in East Haddam. Captain Green died March 11, 1809, and his widow Nov. 27, 1816. They were both buried in the graveyard half a mile below the Landing on the road to Chapman's Ferry. The old stones, which were falling to decay, were replaced with a marble slab by the sons of Capt. Green, with both inscriptions as follows :

SACRED

CAPTAIN JAMES GREEN,
WHO DIED MARCH 11, 1809,
Æ 80.
ALSO OF MRS. RUTH,
WIFE OF CAPTAIN JAMES GREEN,
WHO DIED NOV. 27, 1816,
Æ 79.

AFTER THOUGHTS.

BY CLAES MARTENZE [471].

PREJUDICE—HER FRUITS AND HER VICTIMS.

'Twas Ruffin's hand that first the lanyard sprung,
That woke the echoes from the quay, and rolled
Its thundering volume all adown the port,
Till grim, cold Sumter—monument of him
Who in the olden time, though Southern born,
Fought for his native land and liberty,
Yes, grim, cold Sumter caught upon her sides
The cooling spray, dashed up by plunging shot,
And after it re-echoed back the thunder notes
To every little cavern and recess,
Which woke on that devoted starving band
The pent-up hatred felt by prejudice ;
Aye, and like Thor-hammers Vulcan driven,
While every tensed muscle felt the wedge
Spring and rebound, as if it loathed to break.

On every side and angle came the whir-r
Of sailing globes, anon to burst, and then,
In one death-rattle, disappear in death.
And calm, the central target-spot of all
This pyrotechnic hell, old Sumter stood ;
And when a temporary draught would raise
The smoky war-cloud-pall that covered her,
And place in bold relief against the sky
Those brazen-throated images of modern Mars
Upon her battlements and parapets,
Sullen, like the little band deserted,
Forced to see without the power to stay,
And look to sea-ward for the help they need ;
While up above, hauled taught against the sky,
Our flag, in angry tones, defiantly
Flaps out, and flings its curses with its warnings.

That flag came down !

But oh, the night came too!

'Twas like the night that saw God crucified ;
"The vail was rent," and op'd the way of joy,
And life, and manhood, to a race.

"And graves"

"Were opened" but to hide the ghastly leavings
Of secession's banquet, but to enulph
Battalions and brigades ;—dead now,

Because

They laid their piled-up bodies in the way
To throw "the car of progress" off the track.

Aye, and "there was an earthquake" too, and dire,
Such that it shook down art and nature both.
Go see the howling wilderness, in all
That garden-place, shut in between the lines
Of burnished baynets and stern blockade.
But there's a quiet after every storm,
And these together make the consciousness
In men, and then centurions say, convinced,

"Truly this was the Son of God"
 Black arms can stretch to heaven now, and not Compel a morbid, sickly "Christianity"
 — So called by its apostate followers—
 To fill the ear of God with weak excuses,
 And attempts to make Him comprehend that
 All this misery is to evangelize,
 And Christianize, and help His kingdom on.

Back with such doctrines to the hell they left!
 A less-polluted Adam would have blushed
 To stand thus in the light of God's great love,
 And try to saddle on Him wrong and hate.
 "'Twas Thou, and she Thou gavest me, not I!"—
 "God made them slaves—hold him responsible!"
 There our excuse, with his contrasted, stands;
 "He in the heavens laughs, and has them in derision."

It took a very Prince of Liars, and In serpent's dress, at that, to say to Eve,
 "Thou shalt not surely die."

This age is big

With impudence! That deed was common-place.
 An ass has better eyes for seeing angels
 Even than prophets, sometimes.

And wherefore?

Why, prejudice makes wretched spectacles.
 We've passed four awful years. The struggle's over,
 We stand to-day on vantage ground, and look Farther ahead, and back in history clearer;
 We see God's hand, and see our nakedness,
 And hear the echos of our fathers' crime,
 As it goes hissed and hissing down
 Through all the centuries.

Yes, Ruffin first awoke

The bark of noisy hell-hounds bent on war!
 'Tis over now!

Our flag hangs fearless now,

Strained to the top of every mast. There's not
 A hand on earth dare think to let it down
 It may look calm reproof, and that it should;
 And where's the cure?

The cure is in a heart

That's true. Some minds would rather face
 The burning woes of hell than come before
 The truth and see its purity.

And now,

Ruffin wakes up one other echo more,
 And bursts dissatisfied from one into Another world, if haply it may suit him.

There's Ruffin's history—here's Ruffin's end*
 The little smoke he raises now, is soon
 Blown from an atmosphere too clear for it.

And he who thought to fight to maintain wrong,
 But proved him wrong until he gave it up;
 And Ruffin's brains forced out by Ruffin's hand,
 Winds up the tragedy—and we're avenged.

* Ruffin, a Virginian, claimed the right to fire the first shot for the rebellion, which was granted, and, after the conflict was over, he shot himself in Richmond.

829. MARGARET⁴, [66] (Josiah³, Kenelm², Kenelm¹) b. 5 Apr. 1716, Freetown, Mass.; m. 5 July, 1733, John King, of Norton, Mass. She was admitted to the church in Norton, in 1741. In her father's will, dated 5 Mar. 1753, she was to receive "the One seventh part of my Old homestead land as before in this my Will is described and bounded, and also One seventh part of my Marsh & flatts on y^e Easterly side of y^e Cove, & at y^e foot or West End of y^e Upland of s^d homestead as y^e same is before in this my Will bounded for part of my homestead," also one third of "all my Stock of Creatures at y^e time of my Decease not heretofore disposed of with all my Movables within doors I give unto my 3 Daughters Namely:—Margaret, Mary & Rachel to be Equally Divided between them."

Mar. 18, 1718, "Benjamin Leonard Sen., of Taunton, deeded to John King"—who was possibly the father of John who married Margaret⁴ Winslow—"two hundred acres of land at a place called 'Buttomenummonthe,' together with a dwelling-house partly furnished, a quarter part of a saw-mill and a forge, 'colehouse,' and appurtenances, &c. Leonard was to have the right to dig and carry off the iron ore from ten acres of land 'near to Drinkwater.'"

Jan. 15, 1750-1, John King was one of the signers of a petition "To the Hon'ble Committee of the south Precinct in Norton," as follows:—

"This is to desire you to warne a south-Precinct meeting to be at the meeting-House in sd. Precinct, on the 21st day of this Instant January, or as soone as may be by Law, to see what the Inhabitants of sd. Precinct will do in Repayering the old meeting-house, or Building a new House in ye same Place, or as near to the old House as may be Conventant; and to do what sd. Precinct shall think Proper to be done, in order to Carey on sd. Busines."

At the meeting held Jan. 21, it was voted "that they would Buld a sutabell meeting-house on the town's Land, whare the old meeting-house stands now."

Members of the parish agreed to give a certain amount of building material, the value to be taken from the tax assessed upon each individual for building the house. John King agrees as follows:

"I Promise to Gitt five thousand of Good seeder Laths, full four feet and a halfe Long all of them, and to be full half Inch thick, and to be clear stuff, and no Knots nor hart Lathes, and to be Got out of Good stuff, noways twisting; at the Price of three pound, old tenner, a thousand."

His pew, for which he bought a place, and which he was to build at his own expense, as did others, was the pew near the front double door, and was marked £8.18.8.

Nov. 17, 1777, John King was chosen one of the committee to sell the ministerial lands lying in Mansfield; this committee were also empowered, 1 Jan. 1778, "to act in conjunction with a similar committee from Mansfield, to divide the lands belonging to the two towns, and establish the bounds."

John King was ensign in Capt. Nathan Hodges company from 12 May, 1759 to 2 Jan. 1760. Jan. 16, 1775, he was chosen one of a committee of correspondence and inspection. He was assessor, 1765, 70, 2, 3, 4, 6; and town clerk, 1773-8.

"In the alarm of August, 1780, Capt. Israel Trow marched to Rhode Island at the head of a company," to which John King belonged.

We find that Rachel, wife of John King, was admitted to the church in Norton in 1781. It appears from this and the other later dates that there was another John King, of Norton, but whether he was the son of John and Margaret⁴ (Winslow) King we are not able to determine. The father having died comparatively early may be the reason why he is not termed junior; not having obtained the date of the father's death, etc., renders it impossible for us to settle this question at present.

Samuel⁴ Dean (Dea. Samuel³, John², John¹), married, for his 3d wife, "Widow Margaret King." He settled in Norton as early as 1727, lived there a few years, and then removed to Dedham, where he kept a public-house for a time. He returned to Norton in 1747? and lived at the place owned, and probably built the house occupied, 1858, by Elkanah Wood, Sen. He died 30 Mar. 1775. As we have so few dates of this family, it is in vain for us to attempt to decide whether "Widow Margaret King" is Margaret⁴ with whom we have to do in our work. We have given a few facts to the reader, gleaned from the History of Norton, and regret that we have not been able to obtain a more satisfactory account of the King family.

He resided in Rochester, but removed to Hardwick, Mass., before 1749, for, in the Registry of Deeds of Worcester Co., we find a deed of land dated 4 July, 1749, from Christopher and Timothy Paige, of Hardwick, to Kenelm Winslow, of Rochester, land in Hardwick, in the southerly part thereof, called Gray's addition—sixty acres—butted and bounded as follows: viz.: westerly, partly on Experience Johnson's land and partly on a lot of land called the corn mill lot; southerly, on Proprietors land; easterly, partly on the said Kenelm Winslow and partly on Nathaniel Whitcomb's land; northerly, on Silas Deams' land—reference being had to the Proprietors' Records of Hardwick. Kenelm Winslow also gives deeds of land in Hardwick to Solomon Aiken, in 1754; to Timothy Ruggles, Nov. 1755; and from 1755-1763, to Thomas Winslow, his brother, to Benjamin Winchester, and to Samuel Smith. She was admitted to the church in Berkley, Mass., in 1742. In the will of her father, dated 5 Mar. 1753, she is mentioned as follows:

She d. 28 Dec. 1766. [“The date 1767, inscribed on her headstone, is a manifest mistake, if she was then ‘in the 45th year of her age,’ and if Capt. Winslow’s subsequent publishment is correctly recorded.”] He was published 9 Aug. 1767, to Mrs. Hannah Winslow, of Dighton.

1197. 14. EBENEZER, acc. to some members of the family.

1198. JEDIDIAH⁴, [219] (*John*³, *Kenelm*², *Kenelm*¹), b. 26 Mar. 1727, Rochester, Mass.; d. 5 Apr. 1794, Brandon, Vt. He was a sea-faring man for twenty years, and was remarkable for his great strength. He resided in Barre, Mass., till about 1773; from that time till after the war of the Revolution frequently changed his residence, but finally settled in Brandon, Vt. He was one of the first settlers and erected the first house in that place, which was situated at the south end, and one rod and a half east of the road leading to Lincoln's bridge, now Union Street, near the "Point of Rocks," at its junction with the low meadow land, which point is now about half a mile south-west from the railroad station.

From the Rutland County Herald we obtain the following: "Brandon was chartered October 20, 1762, by the name of Neshoba, which name it retained till October, 1784, when it was changed to the name of Brandon. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1773, by David June, Amos Cutler, Jedidiah Winslow, Noah Strong, and John Whelan. Amos Cutler was the first white man that ever passed the entire winter in this town. He came in 1772, and remained during the following winter. Several of his grand-children reside in town. Jedidiah Winslow was a man of strong mind, indomitable courage, and great shrewdness. He was regarded as a leader of the little band of early settlers." He was instrumental in the organization of the Congregational Church, which, at that time, had but ten members. This church was organized September 23, 1785; he was its first Deacon, and, from the church records, it appears that he filled at the same time, the offices of Deacon, Moderator and Scribe.

From the History of Pittsford, pp. 23, 57 and 207, we find that the charter of that town was granted, 12 Oct. 1762, and that Jedidiah Winslow was one of 64 grantees, of whom none ever had a permanent residence within its bounds. The lots in each division were drawn in conformity to the vote of the proprietors, June 3, 1776. Jedidiah Winslow received lot No. 54 in 1st Div., and Pine Lot No. 41. In 1785, John Hitchcock bought of Samuel Drury, said to be of Alstead, N.H., one right of land. . . . He pitched one hundred and ten acres of this right—the third-division lot of the right of Jedidiah Winslow—on the north-west slope of what has since been known as "Corn Hill." It covered the farm now owned by Amos C. Kellogg. This he deeded to his son John, May 23, 1785. He was published, 24 Mar. 1850, to Elizabeth Goodspeed, of Barnstable, Mass., who died in Paris, N.Y.

Their children, the first six of whom are recorded at Barre, Mass., were:

1211. NATHANIEL⁴,* [220] (*John*³, *Kenelm*², *Kenelm*¹,) b. 22 April, 1730, Rochester Records, but 26 April, 1730, acc. to Family Record; d. 6 Jan. 1778, Salisbury, Conn., "in the 48th year of his age," acc. to gravestone. He "fell a victim to a prevailing epidemic, while exerting his powerful influence in aid of the American arms, during the Revolutionary war."—Blake's Biographical Dictionary. He removed at an early day to Salisbury, Conn., and, in 1753, at the time of his marriage, was a resident of that place. He was admitted as a voter and "duly sworn" with others, in April, 1756, and, from that time to 1768, held the following town offices, viz: surveyor of highways; grand juror; tithing-man; sealer of weights; brander of horses; lister and tax lister (now called assessor). In 1756, he bought 60 acres of land, about one mile north of the village of Salisbury Centre, on a road leading into Massachusetts, about five miles south of the State line. Here he built a house in 1766, which, in 1873, was still standing and in good repair. It is two stories high, with a one story wing in the rear, and was once painted red, the usual color one hundred years ago. The house and land have since been owned and occupied, in succession, by two clergymen (one of whom died there) and their families, for twenty-three years. It is now owned by Mr. Edward Garrity. Mr. W. was a blacksmith and made a peculiar kind of hammered nails, called threepennies and fourpennies. They were small nails for lathing and shingling, and were made a specialty by him, the work being too fine and intricate for most of the other blacksmiths. There was considerable call for them, no nails being made by machinery at that date. The locality of his shop is still plainly to be seen, being indicated by the small particles of charcoal, cinders, etc., in the soil directly opposite his house. He was a chorister in the Congregational Church, and occasionally taught a class in sacred music. He was a scholar, and a man of high moral character. His son Lemuel⁶ was administrator of his estate: "May 29, 1778. This Ballans and Accounts with Lemuel Winslow, Administrator on the Estate of Nathaniel Winslow Late Deceased.

Samuel Moore.

Lemuel Winslow, Administrator."

He married Hannah Fitch, of Coventry, Conn. The following is an exact copy of the marriage record as it stands on the Records at Salisbury, Conn:

"Coventry, April y^e 9th, A.D. 1753. Then Was Nathel Winslow of Salisbury and hannah Fitch of Coventry Married Together by Test. Noah Porter.

Rebekah Porter.

Hannah Fitch was born 12 June, 1735, and was dau. of Rev. — Fitch, who was one of three brothers, all clergymen, who settled in Connecticut. Prof. Fitch, of Yale College, descended from this family. She was also a relative of John Fitch, inventor of the steamboat. In 1786, she removed with her family to Williston, Vt., where she resided till her death. She was instantly killed, 1 Aug. 1806, by a fall, while in the act of mounting a horse.

It was formerly supposed that the line of ancestry of Nathaniel⁴ was *Kenelm*³, *Nathaniel*², *Kenelm*¹, but a thorough investigation has led to the conclusion that the correct line is here given. The confusion arose from the fact that there were three Nathaniel Winslows, born about the same date (between 1730 and 1734) in Rochester, and Marshfield, Massachusetts, all of whom were married between 1753 and 1759. For correspondence and further details, which led to the settlement of this question, see Appendix, page 49.

We are especially indebted to Albert Moore, Esq., of Salisbury, Conn., for information concerning Nathaniel⁴ Winslow, and for specimens of nails made by him a hundred years ago. [See "Wrought Nails," 6832]. Salisbury, Conn.

Their children, all born at Salisbury, were:

1212. 1. LEMUEL⁵, [6622] b. 1 April, 1755; d. Aug. 1828; m. Elizabeth Beach.

He seems to have followed his brother Nathaniel⁴ Winslow to Salisbury, Conn., for, in 1761, we find that he buys a house and fifty acres of land, adjoining the land of his brother Nathaniel, who witnessed the deed. He sold this land, 18 Nov. 1763, but probably did not remove from Salisbury at that time, as he had a child born there in 1764. He afterwards settled in Sheffield, Berkshire Co., Mass., a town which joins Salisbury on the north. He was a farmer, and held the office of sheriff during the Revolution. He married, Salisbury, Conn., 21 June, 1763, Sarah Goodrich, b. 25 Nov. 1739, dau. of Jared and Miriam (Boardman) of Sheffield, Mass. She d. 12 Mar. 1822, Preble, Cortland Co., N. Y., and was buried there. From the town records of Salisbury we have the following record of his marriage: "Prince Winslow of Salisbury to Sarah Goodrich of Sheffield, 21 June, 1763." ["I read it June, but it is written so near the edge of the page or leaf, that a part of the word is worn off." Albert Moore.] Sheffield, Mass.

"Here a brother and sister lie
 Who lived in love and sympathy
 For near four-score years together
 Nature's summons call'd them hither
 They paid the debt and now are free
 As all of us will shortly be
 For here the wicked are no pest
 And in the grave's no weariness
 Affect Brother or Sister here."

He succeeded to the residence of his father-in-law, John Bryant, 3d, of Scituate, near the Cornet's old mill-dam, on the 3d Herring brook. This brook is a tributary of the North River, and is the largest of the three brooks of that name, being about five miles long. In Deane's History of Scituate, p. 17, we find the following concerning Cornet's Mill: "In 1656, Cornet Robert Stetson, Mr. Hatherly and Joseph Tilden erected a saw-mill on the third Herring brook. Remains of the dam may now be seen at the Bridge, near the house of the late Major Winslow [7476]. For this mill a very extensive tract was flowed, now called 'the old Pond.' We find the following act of the town in 1673: 'Whereas it is apprehended that the saw-mill upon the 3d herring brooke will not stand long, and when it is downe, the mill pond will be the occasion of miring of many Cattell, for the preventing of which, and that improvement may be made therof for meadow, it is agreed and concluded that when the saw mill is down, and seases to be a mill there, that then the mill pond shall be divided unto the now proprietors of the Towne, or their successors, and by them to whom division is made, to be well and sufficiently fenced.' In 1676, this mill was burnt by the Indians; and soon after the pond was divided according to the above act." He was born 26 July, 1712, son of Dea. Israel² and Bethiah (Sherman) of Marshfield, and grandson of John¹ and Sarah (Pitney) of M. He resided on a farm, west from the parsonage in Marshfield, once owned by John Somers, and afterwards by Dea. Israel² Thomas, "in whose family it remained for three successive generations. It is now [1854] the country residence of John T. Dingley, Esq., of Boston. The house standing thereon was erected by Dea. Israel² Thomas, and enlarged by his son, Dea. Nehemiah³, a man of sterling worth in the township, who rendered invaluable service in the American revolution, as a counsellor, committee man, &c. He was a member of the Provincial Congress, which met at Salem and at Concord, Oct. 1774, to ascertain what would be the most wise and prudent measures to be taken at this alarming crisis of their affairs. In 1775, he was a delegate to the Assembly held at Watertown, and, in 1776, he is again chosen to the Great and General Court, held in the meeting-house at that place. While absent on one of these occasions, the Whigs of the vicinity, in the ardor of their patriotism, took from his house, contrary to his intention, a quantity of tea, which had been seized by them and deposited there. This was burnt on a rock, near the meeting-house, with much eclat. This was known afterwards as Tea Rock. Dea. Thomas passed to his reward precisely six months prior to the signing of the preliminaries of peace. The following inscription is from his memorial stone:—

"In memory of Nehemiah Thomas, Esq. He Died May 30th, 1782, in y^e 70th year of his Age, who Sustained the Office of a Deacon in the First Church of Christ in Marshfield, upwards of 30 years.

Here sleeps his dust beneath these speaking stones,
 In whom each grace, each lovely virtue shone,
 Remembrance weeps, our Zion drops a tear,
 And sacred Friendship standeth Mourning here.

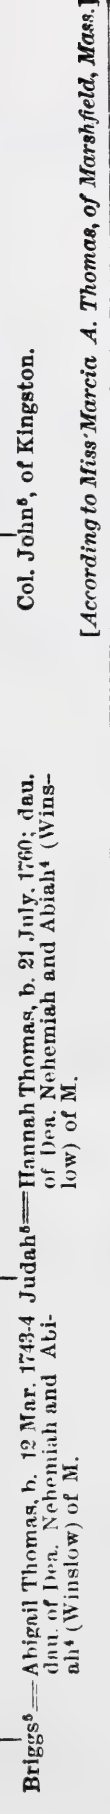

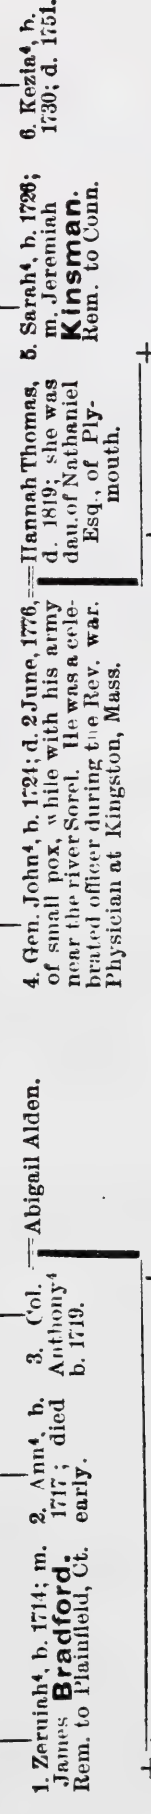

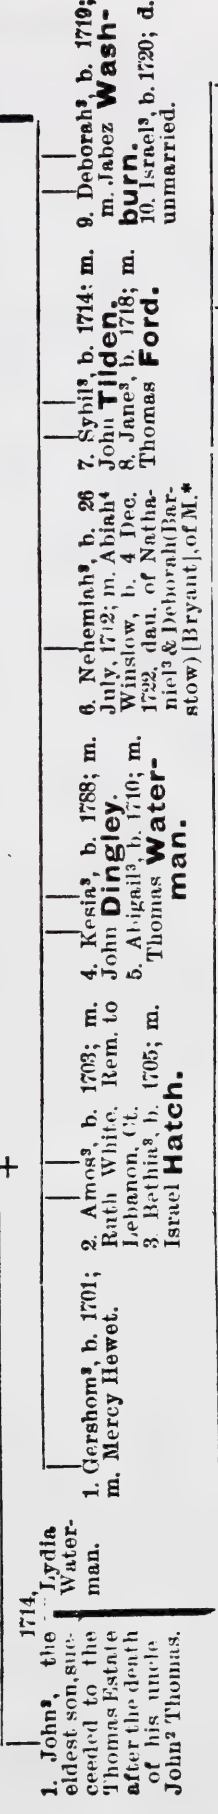

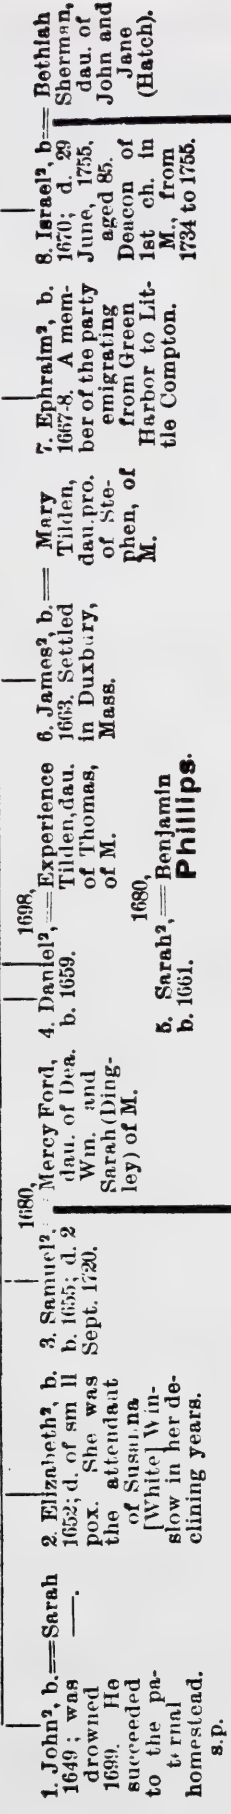

Dea. Thomas was town clerk from 1751 to his decease. He executed most of the legal documents needed in the township during that period. To farming he added the occupation of a tanner, and his account books show that his business was measurably suspended during the revolutionary struggle." [Memorials of Marshfield, Marshfield, Mass. p. 71.]

*An edition of the records of Abiah⁴ (Winslow) and Deacon Nehemiah Thomas and descendants will be published, detached from this volume, when the requisite subscriptions have been secured.

 dau. of James and Sarah Pitney, b. abt. 1628, rah, of Marshfield and Boston. She died

“JOHN¹ THOMAS, an orphan boy of fourteen years, was a passenger to New England, in the ship Hopewell, 1635.” It is supposed he came from Wales. “A tradition is transmitted to us that a paternal property had been lost to him by being improperly entrusted. He was kindly taken under the care and protection of Gov. Edward¹ Winslow, and was long the faithful steward at Careswell.” His name stands next to Winslow’s on the first list of those who bore arms in the township. In 1643, Gov. Edward¹ Winslow petitions for a number of grants of land for him at the age of twenty-one, all of which petitions were granted. A tract of land lying between the lands of Edward¹ Winslow and William Thomas was given by the said Edward¹ to the town of Marshfield, for the better accommodation of a neighborhood, provided they placed on the lands such a one as he, the said Edward, should approve; this was given to Robert Carver, in 1643, and transferred with all the housing and fencing thereon to John¹ Thomas, in 1649, with the approval of Edward¹ Winslow. This was doubtless the farm on which John¹ Thomas resided, and it has been owned by his descendants since that time, with the exception of a few years. He died in 1676.

* By reference to METHOD IN GENEALOGY in Appendix the reader will understand this notation to signify, that NATHANIEL² WINSLOW. (father of Abiah⁴) married Deborah, a daughter of Barstow, and widow of Bryant.

1580. REV. NEHEMIAH⁶, [1399] (Abiah⁴ (Winslow) Thomas, Nathaniel³, Nathaniel³, Kenelm¹), b. Monday, 3 Feb. 1765-6, N.S.; married in 1794, Hannah Otis, dau. of Dr. James and Lucy (Cushing) of Scituate. She d. 28 Mar. 1831. The following account of his death, which occurred 10 Aug. 1831, is from the History of Scituate:

"He had proceeded to the sea beach in a remarkably sultry afternoon (in company with his sister-in-law, Miss Elizabeth Otis) for the benefit of fresher air. He had, perhaps rather imprudently, thrown off his shoes and stockings, and waded in the cool sea water. On his returning to his chaise, at the east end of the 3d Cliff, and attempting to ascend the step, he fell and instantly expired of an apoplexy. He was a descendant of Nathaniel Thomas, an early settler in Plymouth Colony. His father was Nathaniel Thomas, Esq., of Marshfield, a worthy gentleman, who gave to his son the advantages of a religious education, and also the best means of a liberal education that the country could furnish. He received his first degree at Harvard College in 1789. His theological studies were pursued under the direction of Rev. Dr. Shaw, of Marshfield. He entered on the ministry in 1792. He preached for a short term to the New South Congregational Church and Society in Boston, in the summer of 1792, and in the autumn of the same year was ordained in the first church and society in Scituate.

“As to the faithfulness and ability with which he has served that people, there is an impartial witness in the facts, that he attached a numerous society to his personal friendship, and to his ministry for thirty-nine years. His ministry, though not remarkably long, was yet the longest that has been exercised in that Society.

“Mr. Thomas was distinguished for an open heartedness and a guileless simplicity, for much freedom in expressing his own sentiments, and yet without that bluntness of manner which gives offence, and for much candor in accepting the same freedom from others; for readiness to give advice or reproof, and for meekness in receiving it; for willingness to lead, or willingness to be led, if thereby the true path might be found. In faith and affection, in character and practice, he belonged to the class of liberal or Unitarian Christians. He was not given to controversy: he never aimed at the notoriety of attacking the faith of others, while he practised no arts to conceal his own. Desirous of keeping the even tenor of his own way, without molesting or being molested, he beautifully exemplified those traits of courtesy and gentleness which adorn the Christian character, and that charity which is greater than knowledge, or zeal, or eloquence, or even miraculous faith.

“With a constitution far from robust, he had been for years struggling against infirmities, and laboring on in his calling, often with despondent feelings, which nothing but a humble trust in divine providence could support. It is sixteen years since the loss of a promising and beloved son gave a sensible shock to his health. It is nearly four years since a paralytic affection added an irrecoverable stroke, and though he had risen so far as to resume his labors after a few months, yet from time to time he had received strong intimations that the final attack of a mortal malady was threatening him. The loss of his admirable consort in March last, was another stroke which he was doomed to suffer, and there was still another, simultaneous, the hopeless bereavement of reason of his daughter, Lucy Otis, at the time of her mother's decease. There was a train of calamities thus following this worthy man that has rarely been equaled. His burial was attended by a very numerous concourse, Aug. 12th. A funeral procession accompanied his remains from his late mansion to the meeting-house, where prayers were offered by Rev. Dr. Kendall, of Plymouth, and a sermon preached by the pastor of the 2nd Church, from Jeremiah xiv. 3, ‘The Lord hath added grief to my sorrows.’ His remains were then deposited, for the present, in the tomb of the Stockbridge family.”

His classmates erected a beautiful monument as a testimony of their respect to his memory, in the church-yard at Cambridge; and his college friend, the Rev. Ira-Henry-Thomas Blanchard, of Harvard, paid the respect to his lost friend, of procuring legal permission to assume his name.” [Hist. of Scituate, p. 190.]

1719. HARRIET-L⁸., [1717] (dau. of David⁷ Smith,) married, 16 Nov. 1856, Albert⁷ PRESCOTT, b. 19 Feb. 1830, son of Samuel-Tucke⁶ (Ebenezer⁵, Ebenezer⁴, Elisha³, James², James¹ Prescott of Hampton, N.H.) and Delia (Blanchard) of Charlestown, Mass. Spar-maker. •

His military taste, skill, and bravery, requires more than a passing notice. He commenced his military career, when but eighteen or twenty years of age, in the Charlestown Artillery. His soldierlike appearance and expertness in drill, soon attracted the attention of the commanding officer of the company, Capt. E. Lakeman, who appointed him his first sergeant. In 1850, a new company was organized, called the Charlestown City Guards. Mr. Prescott's critical eye soon discovered that this company possessed the requisite material for a first-rate company. He thereupon took a discharge from the artillery company, and united himself with this, and was made a sergeant. In 1854, he was promoted to first sergeant, and under his skill the company soon acquired a high reputation. On the 15th of June, 1855, he was elected and commissioned fourth lieutenant, and promoted to third lieutenant on the 26th of July following. On the 20th of April, 1856, the company having lost much of its prestige as a well-drilled company, he resigned, with the intention of retiring from military life; but a new commander having been chosen, who was solicitous to raise the reputation of the company to its former celebrity, Mr. Prescott was persuaded to again become a first sergeant and principal drill officer, by the urgent request of the new captain, W. W. Pierce. He soon had the satisfaction of seeing the company raised to its former reputation, as a well drilled company, which was considered the best in the Commonwealth. After having served in that capacity for several years, with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the commander and company, he resigned his warrant and withdrew.

At the commencement of the rebellion, April, 1861, the 5th Regt. of Mass. Vol. Militia, to which the company of Guards was attached, was ordered out for three months. Mr. Prescott at once rejoined the company, and was appointed by the captain, J. T. Rogers, first sergeant, which office he held through the campaign, and raised and sustained the reputation of the company for drill as No. 1 in the regiment.

For the coolness and bravery displayed by him at the disastrous battle of Manassas Plains, or first Bull Run, he received the praise and commendations of his superior officers, and the cordial respect of his comrades. He returned and was discharged when the three months had expired. On the 11th day of August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in the Warren Phalanx, for three years, Comp. D, J. B. Norton, Capt., 36th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry, Henry Bowman, Col. Mr. Prescott was appointed first sergeant, and immediately commenced drilling the company, and so rapidly did it improve, that it drew forth, even from regular officers, highly complimentary remarks. So well were the superior officers pleased with his improvement of the company, that on the promotion of Capt. J. B. Norton to be Lieut. Col., the Col. (Bowman) procured for Lieut. Prescott, a captain's commission. As a captain, he proved to be all that his friends expected or could reasonably desire. He was cool and brave in battle, a strict disciplinarian, but generous and humane to his men. Capt. Prescott was ever mindful of the wants of his men, looking out for their comfort, and sharing their privations. In April, 1863, he tendered his resignation for causes beyond his control, which was accepted, and he was honorably discharged from the service, having served as captain six months. Upon the removal of the causes of his resignation, he was influenced by an ardent love of country and patriotic zeal to return to the tented field and aid in rescuing his country from the malicious grasp of traitors. He applied to Governor Andrew for a recruiting commission, which was granted on the 1st of March, 1864. He immediately opened a recruiting office in Worcester, Mass., and in less than two weeks he had recruited his complement for a company, and received a commission as captain, and with his company was mustered into the 57th Regt. (of Veterans) Mass. Vol. Infantry.

April 18, 1864, the regiment left Worcester for Annapolis, Md., previous to which his company presented him with a sword, belt, pistols, field glass, etc. The regiment was attached to the 9th Army Corps, Gen. Burnside commanding. Left Annapolis in a few days to join the army of the Potomac, and arrived in season to engage in the terrible battle of the Wilderness, May 6, in which the regiment suffered severely; May 12th, at the first Spottsylvania battle, and on the 18th, at the second Spottsylvania battle, at which the colors of the 57th were captured. The Lieut. Colonel expressed a wish to have them retaken, when Capt. Prescott immediately stepped forward and called upon his men to follow, which they did promptly, stating that they would follow wherever Capt. Prescott would lead, and they recaptured the colors without loss.

May 24th, they were engaged in that hard fought battle at North Anna River, in which Captain Prescott captured a captain and two men himself. By an inscription on the sword he took from the captured captain, it appeared that it had been taken from an officer in the Union army. In this battle the Lieut. Col. was severely wounded, and being hard pressed by the rebels, Capt. Prescott endeavored to help him off the field, dragging him some distance alone, but the enemy pressed so close that the Lieut. Colonel told him to save himself, which he did by a narrow escape. In a letter to his wife, he expressed profound grief and regret at being compelled thus to abandon a beloved officer.

On the 3d of June, occurred that bloody affair at Cold Harbor, succeeded by a series of fights and skirmishes as the army proceeded on towards Petersburg. He wrote to his wife that it was "nothing but march and fight, fight and march, almost day and night." On the 18th June, he writes, "We made another charge yesterday, went right through the rebels, captured over 100 prisoners, charged close up to their works and could have taken them then, had we not had orders to the contrary. Capt. Tucker was severely wounded. I am in command of the regiment, and am very busily employed; not a day passes but some one is killed." On the 19th he writes, "I am gratified upon receiving letters from the citizens of Charlestown in approbation of my course and conduct. I left home with a determination to do my duty faithfully, both to my country, and to sustain and be an honor to the name of Prescott." On the 21st, he wrote reiterating similar sentiments, and that "he did not ask any greater reward than to exhibit to the world and to his friends, that he was ready and willing to do his utmost in crushing this awful and accursed rebellion."

On the 15th of June Capt. Prescott was commissioned Major, but was not duly mustered in until the 26th of July, when he appeared at the brigade drill in the full dress of Major, at the close of which Gen. Bartlett rode up to him and said, "Major Prescott, you have done well, and that is more than I can say of many other commanders who outrank you a good deal."

Only four days after this, July 30th, occurred that terrible and bloody affair and useless slaughter of the "Mine" and "Crater," before Petersburg, in which Major Prescott lost his life. Having packed away his watch and everything not indispensably necessary, he started at the head of his men, encouraging them onward; on, onward he went, through the crater, beyond, close up to the enemy's line, exposed to a murderous fire, through, up to the breastwork, directly in the face and eyes of the enemy. It was here, while rallying his men, that he received in his head the fatal ball of a sharp-shooter. He fell and almost instantly expired. His men were unable to procure and bring off his body. Of this sad event, Capt. Cook wrote to his wife, that, "although to no one but yourself could the news of the fall of the Major in the unfortunate action of Saturday last bring the saddest weight of grief, yet his brother officers and the entire command unite in tearful regrets at his loss, and sympathize with you, your family and friends, in this sad bereavement." He nobly performed his duty, and added a new lustre to the name of Prescott.—Prescott Memorial, p. 451. Charlestown, Mass.

1746. ABIGAIL⁴, [260] (Kenelm³, Nathaniel², Kenelm¹,) b. 25 June, 1707, Marshfield, Mass.; d. 13 April, 1776, Wellfleet, Mass.; married in her native town, 25 June, 1730, Rev. Isaiah⁴ LEWIS, of Wellfleet, who was born 10 June, 1703, Hingham, Mass., son of John³ and Hannah (Lincoln) of Hingham, grandson of Lieut. James² and Sarah (Lane) of Barnstable, Mass., and great grandson of George¹ and Sarah (Jenkins) of B. He graduated at Harvard College in 1723, and was ordained at Eastham, now Wellfleet, 23 Sept. 1730. We make the following extracts from Freeman's Hist. of Cape Cod. "The services of Rev. Isaiah Lewis being obtained, his ministry proved highly acceptable. A call was extended to him with the offer of £110 per annum 'in good and passable money, and whatever strangers being providentially in the place shall contribute,' also £200 'good money,' as a settlement, together with the use of the lands and meadows belonging to the parish. Mr. Lewis accepted, and a church was organized within the precinct by the council assembled to ordain him, and Elisha Doane was, at the same time, elected deacon. The church embraced about 50 male members, besides females. . . . In 1755, difficulties that had long been culminating in the North Precinct, growing out of a depreciated currency that rendered the minister's support quite precarious, were finally settled; it being agreed that 'his salary shall, in future, be £50 sterling,' and that he shall receive '£8 sterling,' on account of former losses." In 1776, "in response to the proposition of the Gen. Court that every town, at a full meeting called for the purpose, should obtain the minds of the people whether they desire to be independent of Great Britain, etc., this town 'Voted, That if the Honorable Continental Congress shall think proper for the safety of the good people of the united colonies, to declare said colonies independent, we, the inhabitants of the town of Wellfleet, WILL support them with our lives and fortunes.' The instructions to their representatives, Col. Elisha Cobb and Naaman Holbrook, attest the sincerity of the pledge; and when the Declaration of Independence was received, and read publicly, Aug. 25, on Lord's day, immediately after divine service, by the worthy pastor, Rev. Isaiah Lewis, agreeably to the order of Council, there was not so far as we are informed, one murmuring thought or discordant sentiment." In 1779, "Rev. Isaiah Lewis, having become aged and feeble, so that he was no longer able to perform all the labors of the ministry, he relinquished his claim for salary, proposing still to continue his pastoral connection; the town being at liberty, if it shall be thought desirable, to procure an assistant minister. The town generously voted £20 per annum to Mr. Lewis, and app. a com. to engage the services of an assistant. . . . In 1780, Rev. Mr. Lewis, in consideration of £500, gave 'a final discharge to the town for all dues on account of salary remaining unpaid'; and it was 'voted to pay him in addition to any former grant, at the rate of 7 1-2 for 1, for the interest of the parsonage money that is or may be due to him in May next, in consideration of the present depreciated currency. . . . In 1783, we find Rev. Mr. Lewis still the minister of the town, and often exchanging with the neighboring ministers; but some of the people here desired more active services; perhaps we should say, 'popular.' Some misunderstanding seems also to have existed in regard to the non-payment of arrears due as acknowledged in the previous arrangements for a relinquishment of salary. Mr. Lewis having now requested a dismissal from the pastoral charge, it was voted, July 29, that he 'be dismissed according to his desire'; and a com. was app. to procure a supply. These votes were afterwards reconsidered, Mr. Lewis yielding the matters in controversy; and a subscription was then opened for him. . . . In 1785, Feb. 7, a call was extended to Mr. Whitman to settle as colleague with Mr. Lewis, a salary of £100, and £200 settlement being provided. The call was accepted, and Rev. Levi Whitman was ordained Apr. 13. . . . In 1786, Oct. 3, the venerable and honored Rev. Isaiah Lewis died in the 55th year of his ministry. æ. 84. . . . He was a man of good order of intellect, with a heart devoted to his work. Under his ministry, 219 members were added to the church, and he solemnized 233 marriages." North Precinct of Eastham, now Wellfleet.

He died 3 Aug., 1875, aged 76 y., 26 d.; he was married by Rev. Bethel Judd, an Episcopal clergyman, at New London, Ct., 22 Feb. 1828, to Emeline Richards, b. 12 Oct. 1804, New London, dau. of Benjamin and Mary (Coit) of N. L. He was from 1861 to 1866, President of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society. He was a liberal contributor to its library and to its valuable quarterly, the New England Historical and Genealogical Register.

To Dr. Winslow⁷ Lewis belongs the credit of proffering the first order [pledging the payment of one hundred dollars] for a RADIAL CHART*, which should show at one view an abstract of the records of all the descendants of his great gr. parents,

* RADIAL CHARTS.—as proposed by David-Parsons⁷ Holton, M.D.—Of ancestors and descendants under consideration, the successive generations from the initial point in view are arranged in semi-circular belts of progressively increasing radii; constituting what, for convenience of description, reference, and correspondence, are named "Genetic Zones."

1. The initial ancestor shown occupies the first zone resting on the central portion of the base line which sustains the genetic semi-zones.

2. The entire second generation, sons and daughters, recorded in the order of birth, from left to right, are represented in the second semi-zone.

The particular member who is the representative of the line (whose descendants in subsequent zones are to be represented) is recorded in small letters, signifying that the name is transferred in large letters to the centre of said zone, where are given fuller details. In some cases the lineal representative is placed directly (i. e., without transfer or repetition) in the central section of the zone.

3. The third zone contains the record of the sons and daughters of said lineal representative in the previous generation, arranged on the system above named, having an analogous transfer of the lineal representative or representatives for whose descendants the chart is specially formed.

4. In like manner the successive genetic zones are constructed, till we come down to an ancestor three or four generations preceding the ultimate twigs of the branches proposed to be represented. From this point all the descendants in male and female lines, as far as known, are fully represented by constituting each descendant a representative centre, from which are developed sections of subsequent and outer zones; and thus onward to the outermost genetic zone. The genetic belts instead of being semi-zones may conveniently be extended to form a larger part of a circle, thus giving more space for the development of the later generations, without producing the visual distraction created by following zones of the full sphere.

5. That which is peculiar to the invention of the subscriber, is the transference of the lineal representative to the central section, or other appropriate section, of successive genetic zones;—thus showing in the clearest possible way the line of ancestors, with the brothers and sisters of each representative link in the ancestral chain.

6. The form and arrangement of this radial chart, originally designed for genealogies, are equally adapted to the illustration or presentation of any department of science. The division of any subject of study or instruction into classes, genera, species, varieties, and other subdivisions, may be advantageously shown by single charts or series of charts, constructed on the plan here above specified, having successive transfers to show the derivative line in the scientific series analogous to the ancestral and descental lines of the above-described genealogical series. Radial charts varied in structure according to the above rules, become useful instruments to facilitate the study and presentation of the facts of science. They are permanent apparatus adapted to varying circumstances of theory and facts, confirming this invention as a valuable aid in many departments of education.

Rev. Isaiah⁴ Lewis and wife Abigail⁴ Winslow, together with his Winslow ancestry, and the brothers and sisters of the representative of the line in each ascending generation, as far back as American and English records enable us with certainty to go—said chart to be photo-lithographed, engraved, or printed, and bound with the WINSLOW MEMORIAL.

The chart or diagram will have its merits, disconnected with the book; and when photo-lithographed, engraved, or printed, and securely bound therein will serve to illustrate the text and add to its positive value.

Dr. Winslow Lewis, sharing to the extent of one hundred dollars towards the expense of collecting the genealogical and biographical facts necessary for this chart, considered this to be the most economical way of conferring a present and lasting benefit to the numerous progeny of his said great grandparents, and to other readers of the proposed genealogical and biographical series. Since the way to success in this direction has been opened, others have imitated his mode of appreciation.*

* The charts will have their absolute or individual merits; and at the same time will add much to the interest of the text, and to the value of the book—a value contributed in part by the said serial reference appreciators.

We are now prepared, at our genealogical studio, 19 Great Jones Street, New York, to execute orders from living descendants of over three hundred and fifty great-great grandparents, bearing various patronymics, whose records, ancestral and descendent, we have.

At the rooms of the New-England Historic-Genealogical Society, 18 Somerset Street, Boston, during the months of July, August, September, and October, 1871, many members and visitors honored our work by an examination of the several systems of chart registration which we use for family records and pedigrees.

These forms of genealogical charts and diagrams may be succinctly stated:

1. We make, in large blank books, our primary records in manuscript charts in brace form, } with serial reference figures.
2. We occasionally combine several kindred branches in an abbreviated form by using the parallel chart, commonly known and used in England and America.
3. Sometimes we use the circular chart form, analogous to the one published by Rev. Dr. Lyman Coleman.
4. For some purposes our charts or diagrams are in the tree-form, the time-honored mode of exhibiting family records.
5. These forms above stated have, severally, characteristic merits; while the RADIAL CHART, as modified by ourselves, is acknowledged by all genealogists, who have examined it, to excel all previously invented charts or diagrams, for the purpose of presenting a bird's-eye view of results attained.

Many from among the descendants of ancestors whose memorials we have in preparation, seeing and realizing the magnitude of the work undertaken, appreciate the excellence of our improved Radial Chart, as a means of simplifying our otherwise complex effort.

She was married in Boston, by Rev. Charles Lowell, 14 Feb. 1830, to Joseph WILLARD, b. 14 Mar. 1798, Cambridge, Mass., s. of Rev. Dr. Joseph Willard, President of Harvard College, and Mary (Sheafe) of C. He died 13 May, 1865, Boston; and was buried in Mount Auburn Cemetery.

“At the age of ten years he entered Phillips Academy, under Mark Newman, where he continued two years. He then returned to Cambridge, to a private classical and mercantile school kept by William Jennison, and there remained until he entered college. He graduated at Harvard College in 1816. After graduating, he studied law with Charles-Humphrey Atherton, of Amherst, N.H., and first settled in Waltham; then went to Lancaster, and finally to Boston, about 1829. He was chosen a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1829, and was made its corresponding secretary, which office he held until April, 1864, when, on account of ill health, he declined a re-election. In 1838, Gov. Everett appointed him Master in Chancery under the Insolvency act of that year, and he held the same until the Masters in Chancery were superseded by Commissioners of Insolvency. In 1829, he was appointed by the Supreme Judicial Court, joint clerk of the Courts of Suffolk (Supreme and Common Pleas) with Geo. C. Wilde. In 1856, these offices becoming elective, he was chosen clerk of the Superior Court (which replaced the Common Pleas) for five years, and again in 1861, for a like term. He was also, for about the same period and until his death, one of the trustees of the old Boston Library that was so long located in Franklin Street.

While a resident of Lancaster, Mr. Willard wrote his valuable history of that town, which was published in the Worcester Magazine, September, 1826, Vol. II, No. 5, making 88 pages. He also published: Memoir of William Lincoln; Address to the Members of the Bar of Worcester County, Mass., in 1829; Memoir of the Rev. Samuel Willard, Vice President of Harvard University, 1839; Address at the Lancaster Centennial, in 1853, 8vo., pp. 230; Willard Family Memoir, in 1858, 8vo., pp. 471, containing genealogies of the family to the fourth generation.—Register, vol. xiii, p. 78.

He became a member of the Historic-Genealogical Society in 1845, the year of its organization.

A writer in the Boston Transcript of May 17th, says of Mr. Willard:—"He was in office as out of office, a kind, obliging, thoughtful, intelligent, Christian gentleman. He had a well trained, logical mind; he was of scholarly habits, fond of research and study; was in his manners and bearing judicial, but yet affable and urbane, diligent, fond of truth and justice, and exact as an antiquary. He was one of the best models of an executive officer the writer ever beheld, and was generally so regarded. As Master in Chancery he was called upon to settle many hundreds of insolvent estates, deciding numerous new and difficult points, and he did it all without provoking hardly an objection or an appeal; and as clerk, his decisions were seldom appealed from, and still more seldom were those appeals sustained."

2358. JAMES⁴, [305] (James³, Job², Kenelm¹), b. 6 Aug. 1725, Freetown, Mass.; d. 16 Nov. 1802, Farmington, Me., and was buried there. He "with his brothers, who lived in Falmouth, received a large tract of land, from their father, at Broad Bay, and removed there in 1752. His daughter Sarah was born there in 1754. They designed to remain, but the Indian troubles forced them back to Falmouth." He and his wife and three children were among those who "set sail from Falmouth in the fall of the year, 1760, and proceeded to what was then called Dr. Gardiner's estates at Cobbiseconte, or Gardinerstown. They were a Mr. Thomes, who was a builder of grist-mills; Benjamin Fitch, a saw-mill wright; Jacob Loud, a house carpenter; James Winslow a wheelwright; and Ezra Davis, James and Henry McCausland, and William Philbrook. They arrived in safety, with the families of Winslow, Davis, Philbrook, and the McCauslands, and run their vessel into a wide creek, formed by the mouth of the stream, which was then navigable to the sites now occupied by the saw-mills, and there, on the northern bank of the stream, the craft lay all winter. James Winslow's wife took her little daughter Sarah, then six years old, by the hand, and went ashore; and they are the first two white females known to have set foot within the limits of Gardiner or Pittston. They immediately threw up some log huts, and passed the winter in making preparations for the coming summer. The McCauslands and Winslows occupied the same cottage, and, on the 23d of March, 1761, Jonathan Winslow was born, the first white child native in ancient Pittston. The house stood exactly where now (1852) is the Widow Esmond's store.

"On the 27th of March, wishing to make an addition to the cottage of Winslow, they were able to haul logs on the crust, so cold and backward was the spring of that year.

"When the season opened they erected a grist-mill at the end of the lower dam, and the old sills were found in a state of preservation when the last dam was built. . . . The Cobbossee Grist-mill was known for several years among the northern settlers, and was resorted to from a great distance by them, even from Norridgewock and Canaan, until the mill was finished at Seabasticook, and caused settlers to increase rapidly in this neighborhood. James Winslow worked on the mill until it was done, and then obtained a fine spot of land which had been cleared by the Indians, 90 acres of which Dr. Gardiner conveyed to him as partial pay for his services. This land was the north-western lot in the present town of Pittston, and now includes the farms of Messrs. Amos Lyon [See 12389] and ——— Leavitt. The family removed to that place in 1763, and the deed is dated July 26, 1764, and was signed by Sylvester Gardiner, in presence of Wm. Gardiner and Jno. McKechnie, at Cobbisseeconte, before William Lithgow.

"Winslow went to Damariscotta and assisted on the mill at that place. While he was gone his wife and daughter raised their own crops. They took a batteau, and crossed the river repeatedly, and went to the Great House, where they obtained manure, with which they dressed their land for corn, and with their own hands they harvested forty bushels in the fall.

"James Winslow had been a drummer in a fort at Falmouth, while a young man, but he became a convert to the principles of the Society of Friends, and as such, abhorred war and all its preparations. Yet it was found necessary to erect a block-house immediately, for defence against the Indians. This was done in 1763. It was a substantial, bullet-proof fort. It stood on the side of the hill, near the site of the Universalist church. In the autumn of 1765 there was an Indian alarm. Several of the settlers heard mysterious sounds in the night, as of footsteps, and the dogs were clamorous, and one was heard to cry out as if struck. The settlers became very much alarmed, and fled to the block house. The Winslows, who then lived where Amos Lyon now (1852) dwells, fled across the river, and a Bullen family from Hallowell, and others of the settlers with them, until the settlement was entirely deserted, and thirty or forty families were congregated in the humble fort. Jonathan Winslow was then four years old. A little dark cloak was thrown around him, to make him the color of the ground, and he trotted along in the procession to the place of safety. They remained here several days. The next day all went out together well armed, and harvested Winslow's crops, and thus they worked, with their arms, and in company, until the crops were all gathered. The alarm seemed to be false, and gradually the settlers resumed their homes again.

"Mrs. James Winslow was a very energetic woman, and was much relied on in cases of sickness. . . . 'Granny Winslow' was the only physician in whom the early settlers believed indeed she was the only individual devoted to the practice of medicine, prior to 1769, about which time Dr. Zachariah Flitner, a German, settled on the east side of the river.

"James Winslow carried his Quaker principles with him and refused to serve in the Revolution; and Jonathan was once drafted and escaped serving, offering as a reason that he was educated a Quaker. James always took occasion to speak against the efforts of the Americans, though he and his son Jonathan made fifty paddles for Arnold's expedition. He used every effort to dissuade the men of the town from entering the contest against England, which he declared was foolhardiness. When Arnold passed up the river, many of his soldiers wore on their caps the motto, 'Liberty or Death,' and Winslow said, 'you'll all get the latter.' Without being exactly a tory, he was evidently a prudent, careful man, who thought it not best to strive against so formidable an adversary as Great Britain. He had 'rather bear the ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of.' He did not object to the drafting of Jonathan, but the tears of the mother caused the boy to offer his plea of being a Quaker.

"In the course of the Revolution there were so many roving parties constantly passing and repassing, and the Winslows were so liable to be disturbed, that they moved from the house they occupied into another in the orchard back of the house, where they remained until more peaceful times.

"On one occasion in 1778-9, a British scouting party of six entered the house, and demanded food. Mrs. Winslow said she had none cooked. They then said, 'boil us hasty pudding, or we will shoot you.' She obeyed the order, and soon the Yankee dish was smoking on the board. Before they had quite finished their repast, the party was alarmed by an unwonted noise without, and decamped, leaving a silver spoon, which one had taken from his knapsack to eat with, and a huge iron-handled sword. The latter is now (1852) in the possession of Mrs. Lyon, [12389] the granddaughter of James Winslow, and is a venerable relic of antiquity.

In the Valuation List of 1785, we find that he had 100 acres of land, and that his property was estimated at £72. He resided at that time in what is now Pittston "very near the Hallowell line, where is now a two story brick house."

The above extracts are taken from Hanson's Hist. of Gardiner and Pittston, published in 1852.

of age, and the same year commenced to learn the tanner's trade with Mr. Merriam, of Roxbury. After his majority he commenced business for himself, in which he was successful; in 1837, he met with heavy losses, which nearly swept away his hard-earned fortune, but not discouraged, with untiring industry and devotion to business, he soon made good his losses, and two years since retired from business with a comfortable fortune. Mr. Winslow served the city as a member of the city council in 1851. He also held other offices to the satisfaction of the people during his residence among them. Mr. Winslow was a kind-hearted man, who desired to see all men prosper, and many young men are indebted to his assistance and advice for their success in business and the position they now enjoy. He was liberal in his views, a kind husband and father, a consistent Christian, and an honest man." He married in

* "NYMPHAS MARSTON, Esq., brother of Prince Marston, was born 12 Feb. 1727-8; and died 11 Feb. 1788. He was very prominent in public affairs, and filled a large space in society. A graduate of Yale, 1749, he was from 1760, for a long course of years, an active magistrate. He also represented the town in General Court as early as 1765, and was with Shearjashub Bourne elected Nov. 19, 1787, a member of the convention 'to take into consideration and act upon the constitution or frame of government for the United States of America.' At the time of the suspension of the Courts, prior to the Revolution, he sat with the Court of Common Pleas and General Sessions; but his patriotism was, like that of Col. Otis, Daniel Davis, and others of high position, approved, as his prompt acquiescence in the measures of the Liberty party and the high appreciation of his public services in subsequent times, testifies. Indeed, his zeal in the cause of his country was manifest by many unostentatious acts. Not only a large landholder, but a man of ready means, large advances were made by him to pay the expenses of the war, as receipts among his papers show. On one occasion, the soldiers called out from below for the defence of Falmouth, on their return to their houses intending due honor to the generous friend whose doors were always open and his table bounteously spread for the enjoyment of patriotic guests, gave vent to their enthusiasm by firing a salute in his house. The plastering in the dining room was of course somewhat shattered by the explosion, and the marks of it have been suffered to remain to the present time—a relic of the past. The patriotic host concluded that the damage done was 'quite pardonable' if his guests would 'carry out their zeal in shattering and scattering the ranks of the common enemy.'" Mr. Marston married an Allyn, but had no children who survived to adult age.' For his lithograph likeness taken from a painting executed by Copley, see Hist Cape Cod, Vol. I, p. 374.

SHORT AND BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE SHIPWRECK OF

CAPT. JOSHUA^e WINSLOW,

WHO WAS OVERSET ON CAROLINA COAST

In Lat. 35° 30' N. on the 23d day of July, 1788.

'Twas on November the tenth day,
Being fitted out we sailed away
From Boston coast, as you shall hear.
For Africa we then did steer:
Here Captain Winslow of Barre
Takes the command upon the sea.
In the ship Nancy we set sail,
Blest with a fine and pleasant gale:
While we were blest with pleasant gales,
Our business was in killing whales,
This was the work we did pursue
Though fortune granted us but two.
Here, on the roaring seas we lie
From November until July,
When the captain thought to reach the shore
And view his native place once more;
But coming on Carolina coast,
The winds arose, the ship was tost,
The raging billows swept the deck,
At length the ship was overset.
She righted soon, but O sad fate!
Five men were lost besides the mate,
And sank beneath the raging waves;
This watery world did prove their graves.
The winds increase, again we're met,
Again our ship is overset—
The Captain of, and one man more,
While billowing seas on us do pour.
The captain cries for help amain,
But yet all means did prove in vain;
No help to him could we afford,
Nor any ways get him on board:
We see him drowned and see him die,
And launch into eternity!
Expecting every moment we Should follow him into the sea:
Nothing but death presents itself,
No friend appears on our behalf;
No captain now for to command,
Though each man strove with heart and hand.
Being overwhelmed with grief and care,
Our lives and all being in despair;
Our mainmast we cut off and then
Our ship was soon righted again.
Then to the pumps we quick did go,
But still the waters force below.
To swell our grief to think that we Must soon be drowned in the sea.
Now let the hardest heart of stone
Make but our case to be their own,
And view us in this sad surprise
You'd hear them speak with bitter cries,
You'd hear them sob and hear them sigh,
You'd hear them all lament and cry:
It would fill their soul with grief and fears,
Their hardened hearts would melt with tears.
Alas how must a mortal feel
When like a drunken man they reel,
Methinks their hearts would melt with grief,
No friend on earth could grant relief.

Nothing but God's almighty arm
Could save us in this dismal storm;
He stills the winds and raging seas,
And rules and guides them as he please.
In our distress we lift our cry,
To God who reigns above the sky:
He answers us and sends relief
When we are overwhelmed with grief.
Next day to our relief did come
A sloop which towed our vessel home,
And landed us in Swanzey, where We'll praise God's name for his kind care
Over each one that is alive,
Over each one that did survive
The raging billows of the deep.
While for our suffering friends we weep,
May I condole the dismal fate
Of all these poor unfortunate,
Who fell a prey unto the deep.
While for my captain I do weep.
Come all you soldiers with me mourn,
Our Captain's dead our mate is gone,
And six men more left in the main,
That never must return again.
Consider now God's mighty hand
In bringing each of us to land,
Whilst others sink down in the deep,
Our hearts rejoice while others weep.
God's judgements are sometimes severe
And yet his mercy's always near,
Judgement and mercy then we'll sing
And to our God the tribute bring.
Come sympathize awhile with me:
The Captain's widow now must be
The object of our grief and woe,
This news to her must quickly go.
No pen could write or tongue express,
Their parting pangs and sad distress;
Nor yet let forth this widow's grief,
Not any ways grant her relief.
Methinks I hear this widow sigh,
Methinks I hear these children cry;
Their tender hearts are left to mourn,
With grief methinks they're overborne:
Methinks I hear this widow speak,
Out in these words her heart doth break:
Alas! Oh Lord what shall I do?
Great God! how can this news be true?
My spirits sink beneath the grave,
My children, you no father have;
Oh seek to God most just and true
To be your friend and father too.
Now I commend you all to God,
Exhorting you to kiss the rod,
His righteous hand did cause your woe,
And he alone can mercy show.
These lines were describ'd and penned
By Jonas Clark, the Captain's friend,
Who was on board when Tempests blew,
And one of the surviving crew.

8449. OLIVE-JONES^s, [3437] (Elisha^s, Joshua^s, Thomas^s, Thomas^s, Kenelm^s, Kenelm^s, Kenelm^s), b. 12 Mar. 1818; was married at Columbus, Ohio, by Rev. Joseph-M. Trimble, 10 Mar. 1843, to Prof. James-Gilmore BLAIR, M.D., D.D., LL.D., b. 18 Sept. 1816, Marcellus, Onondaga Co., N.Y., son of William and Susannah (Holmes) of M., afterwards of Geneva, Ill., and gr. s. of Robert Blair, of Newburg, N.Y., whose father came from Scotland.

When nearly ten years of age, he went to live with his maternal grandparents, Rev. David and Rhoda (Conkling) Holmes, of Little Falls, Onondaga Co., N.Y., and was reared under the influence of their family. His early bias was for education, and in pursuit of this object he overcame embarrassments that few boys at this time could either appreciate, or withstand. His father was a farmer in humble circumstances, and it was very difficult to obtain books. How they were studied, when placed within his reach, the following incident will disclose. An associate, residing some miles from his father's house, had a copy of Dr. Good's "Book of Nature." He obtained the use of it, and in a few months had transcribed the entire work.

This was his manner of dealing with all books of value. At a distance of a mile from his father's house, in the country, lived a wood-chopper, a very dissipated man, and ignorant of all branches of education except Mathematics. In this branch he was thoroughly versed. Often, after teaching in his country school, several miles from his father's, young Blair would walk home, frequently through deep snow, and, after a very brief stop, go across the fields to Avery's cabin and work with him in Algebra till midnight. He would rise at four in the morning, eat a light breakfast and start away to his school. With no means to aid him except an indomitable will, he struggled on in this way till he was prepared to enter college. In the summer of 1838, he was admitted to the Sophomore class in the Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Conn., and graduated in 1841. Immediately after his graduation, in company with the Rev. Calvin Kingsley of the Presbyterian church, he went to Ohio and became the Principal of the Blendon Young Men's Seminary (now Otterbein University). In the fall of 1842, he became a member of the Ohio Conference, continuing in charge of the school till the fall of 1843. At that time he was placed on a circuit on the north side of the Ohio River. From this work he was removed to Greenfield, Highland Co., O., as a stationed pastor, where he continued seven years; two years as pastor of the church, and five years, subsequently, as the principal of the Greenfield Seminary. From this place, Prof. Blair was appointed Vice-President, and Prof. of Natural Sciences in the State University of Athens, O., which position he held for fourteen years, when he resigned in view of his waning health, and took the position of Editor, in the city of Parkersburg, West Virginia. After four years service in this capacity, his literary tastes led him to re-engage in the work of teaching, at St. Paris, O. He possesses a mental and physical vigor altogether unusual in one of his years, and bids fair to reach a very mature old age. Many of his public addresses have been published. 1870, St. Paris, Champaign Co., O.

In a letter dated in the entrenchments near Petersburg, Va., 15 July, 1864, he gives a sketch of what his regiment had suffered after leaving Beaufort, S.C. He mentions having fought at Drury's Bluff, Bermuda Hundred and Cold Harbor, of having charged on the rebel breastworks and been repulsed; and writes: "we fell flat on our faces and dug with bayonets and threw out the dirt with our hands, till we got out of the way of their guns." There they lay concealed during the day and strengthened their breastworks during the night, the rebels keeping up a steady fire, and the ground being covered with the dead and wounded, some of the latter remaining three days before they could be safely removed. The regiment was in front of Petersburg and the armies about two hundred yards apart; they were nine days in the entrenchments without being relieved, but after that time were relieved every two days. For drinking water they were obliged to dig a hole near the breastworks, frequently obtaining only a half cupful at a time, and that he describes as "very dirty." CHART XIV.—GEORGE—WASHINGTON—WEBB—PATIENCE CLARK.

3803. MIRIAM^o, [3419] (Thomas^s, Thomas^s, Kenelm^s, Kenelm^s, Kenelm^s), b. 6 May, 1758, Harwich, Mass.; d. 8 Mar. 1835, Moriah, N.Y.; m. at Hardwick, Mass., 19 Apr. 1779, Benjamin^s Parsons, b. 5 Jan. 1753, Palmer, Mass., s. of David^s,* (Benjamin^s, Ebenezer^s, Benjamin^s), and Bethiah (Bishop) More, of P. He died of lockjaw, caused by an injury from a carding-machine, 8 Oct. 1812, Moriah. He was at Quebec in Arnold's campaign, 1775, at the time Montgomery was killed. He suffered so much from hunger, smallpox and fever, during that expedition, that his health was permanently impaired. He never received a pension, as his papers were destroyed by fire, when his house was burned, 15 Nov. 1811.

The following epitaphs were copied from gravestones in the ancient burial-ground at Palmer:

"Here lies the body of Mr. Benjamin Parsons, Jr., who died 6 Jan. 1753 in the 22nd year of his age, and of his sister Martha who died 30 Mar. 1737 in the 4th year of her age. The memorial also of Mr. David & Israel Parsons, who died at Fort Edward, the former Nov. 8th 1755, in the 28th year of his age, the latter Oct. 28th 1755, in ye 19th year of his age, all children of Mr. Benjamin and Mrs. Martha.

"In memory of Mrs. Martha wife of Mr. Benj. Parsons, who died July 17, 1760, in ye 58th year of her age, and of Mr. Moses, son of Mr. Benj. and Mrs. Martha Parsons, who died Nov. 4, 1762, in his return from Havana, in his 25th year."

In July, 1752, Rev. Jonathan^s Parsons, making a journey to attend a meeting of Presbytery at Pelham (about 95 miles in direct line from Newburyport and 16 east by north from Northampton) passed one night at his brother Benjamin's at the "Elbows." We here copy from that precious relic, the diary of the Rev. Jonathan^s, his narrative of the journey, as found on the 124th page of the original. It offers several subjects for reflection, and is found on the 320th page.

* DAVID^s PARSONS was born 10 May, 1728, Springfield, Mass.; d. 8 Nov. 1755, at Fort Edward, in the French war. He married, 22 Mar. 1749-50, Newburyport Rec., Bethiah (Bishop) More, perhaps d. of Jeremiah Bishop, of Palmer, who d. 13 Feb. 1766, aged 67.

On the 86th page of the original diary of Rev. Jonathan^s Parsons, the eminent divine, of Newburyport, Mass., may be seen the following entry:

"1749-50, March 22. Thursday mostly at home, till about 5 ' clock afternoon, and in a very poor, worldly frame; entangled with worldly business. Towards evening I went to Edward [or Edmund] Cottles, to see him in his affliction—that being the sorrowful day he was to bury his daughter Hannah. I found him bowed down exceedingly; and the young people, particularly young women, appeared with more concern in their countenances than I ever saw them upon such an occasion, since I lived in town.

From thence I went (much more encouraged than I had been all day before) up to Jonathan Sampson's and married Morrill Witcher and Mary Sampson; had a very pleasant wedding. I believe Christ was graciously present with some.

From thence I returned home and married my brother Benjamin's eldest son, David Parsons of Kingston (alias the Elbows) and Bethiah More, my neighbor, a widow—had a very solemn and pleasant wedding. O! that God would bestow his blessing upon them in their new state. May they both be married to Christ."

David^s Parsons removed to Palmer, Mass., and soon after the birth of his third child, was called to the service of his country, in the "French war," and died at Fort Edward, 8 Nov. 1755, leaving a widow and three children: Phebe, Ebenezer, and Benjamin. [See Parsons Chart, p. 319].

According to the Northampton Probate Records, Bethiah administered on the estate of David Parsons, late of Palmer, and there was an auction 5 Nov. 1757. It appears in the account of administration, that she found it necessary to visit Salem, Mass., for what purpose is not stated.

She married 3d, in Palmer, 2 May, 1771, Jonathan Chapin. After his death she lived with her son Ebenezer^s Parsons. She died not long after 1793, and was buried at Willimansett, Mass.

"1752, July 7. Tuesday, I set out on a journey to the Presbytery at Pelham and a visit to my friends at Springfield and Connecticut, with my son Samuel Holden. Got to Cambridge that evening, put up at Stedman's—waited on the President about the examination of my son. The next morning he was examined and admitted into College—Afternoon I rode to Concord, lodged at Mr. Bliss's—next day Thursday July 9th rode to Leicester, lodged at Sergeant's—next morning rode to Mr. Eaton's to breakfast and spent some time agreeably with him; went forward to Palmer, lodged at my brother Benjamin's—next July 11th rode to Springfield, found my friends living and in health—my father much decayed, but waiting for his change. July 12th, Sabbath. Mr. Hopkins preached in the morning, I preached in the afternoon. 13. Monday, rode to Northampton, lodged at Benjamin Sheldon's—found religion very low in that town—next day rode out to Pelham, found the Presbytery was adjourned, lodged at Mr. Abercombie's. Next day preached a lecture. July 16. Thursday returned to Springfield, tarried there over the Sabbath, preached for Mr. Hopkins. July 19, Monday set out for Lyme, lodged at Mr. Lockwood's of Wethersfield that night. Next morning made a long visit to Col. William's, and went forward to Mr. Nott's of Saybrook and lodged there. July 21, Wednesday got to Lyme, found friends well; visited some that and the next day. Preached a lecture for Mr. Johnson on Friday. Took my leave on Saturday and rode to North Parish of New London. July 25, Sabbath, preached for Mr. Jewett. 26, Monday, set forward in my return home—lodged at Spalding's of Canterbury.—27, rode to Hale's of Sutton—had a pleasant visit at Mr. Hall's. 28. Rode as far as Concord, lodged at Mr. Bliss's—29. Came home, found my family and people well—but destitute of preaching in my absence."

Benjamin went to live with his uncle Jonathan⁴ Parsons of West Springfield, and subsequently settled in Palmer, whence he enlisted for the campaign of Arnold in 1775. In 1779, removed to Swanzey, N.H., where his first seven children were born. Removed to Chesterfield, N.H., where his daughter Abigail was born; thence to Westminster, Windham Co., Vermont, where were born Polly and Elisha-Winslow.

The children of Benjamin and Miriam⁶ (Winslow) Parsons were:

- 3813. 10. ELISHA-WINSLOW, b. 11 Feb. 1800; was a great sufferer from rheumatism, resulting in anchylosed joints of all his extremities. Notwithstanding this, he went to Canada as a teacher, and has not been heard from for many years.

In 1875, Dr. Holton visited the place where his grandfather Parsons lived before the breaking out of the Revolution, and after his return from service in that war. It is situated near the residence of his uncle, Aaron⁴ Parsons, i.e.: forty-two rods directly north from Dea. Aaron's homestead, where are now depressions in the soil, showing the outline of the cellar and locating the house on a gentle rise sloping in every direction. When David⁶ Parsons (1876 residing in Swanzey) was a boy, the remains of a tan-yard were to be seen a few rods distant, lying a little north of west of the homestead of Benjamin and Miriam⁶ (Winslow) Parsons. A small stream, called "Parsons Rill," flowed past the tannery into Martin's brook, which empties into the south branch of the Ashuelot.

[See Holton, Faricell and Parsons Memorials.]

The Editor of the New York Observer, on a recent tour up the Connecticut Valley, writes of Westminster:

The whole region of country now becomes more romantic, picturesque, cool and stimulating. The town of Westminster suggests the faith of the settlers, and as we drove over its hills and looked in upon the dells, we could readily believe that neither Switzerland nor the Valley of Vaud would nurse a hardier and braver race of men and women than these dwellers in Eastern Vermont and Western New Hampshire. For the narrow stream separates the kindred States. Vermont was settled under British grants from New Hampshire, and was afterwards ceded to New York; but the Green Mountain boys did not relish the transfer, and before the skirmish called the Revolutionary War, these free mountaineers resisted the powerful New Yorkers, and at the Revolution declared themselves an independent State. Twice did Congress refuse to admit its independence, though it was the power that took Ticonderoga and whipped the regulars in the battle of Bennington, which battle, however, was fought in the State of New York. It was not until 1791 that Vermont fought its way into the Union, and even then she had to pay New York the sum of $30,000 in full of all demands!

I was familiar with the story of the old time feud between the Vermonters and New Yorkers, but was not aware, till coming here now, that this region was the classic ground made memorable by the first blood shed in the resistance of British oppression! But the Centennial year has revived all the local claims to such distinction, and I very soon heard that I was near the graves of the first American martyrs. Driving up to the door of a house in the broad street of Westminster,—on the stoop two old farmers sitting,—I said:

“Can you tell me where the two men were buried who were killed by the tories, in the old times, before the Revolutionary war?”

“Yes: they were buried,—at least one of them was, French was his name,—in the graveyard*, the old cemetery, about a mile below here: there’s a monument, put up two or three years ago, and the lines on the old stone were copied onto it.”

“Do you remember what the lines are?” I asked.

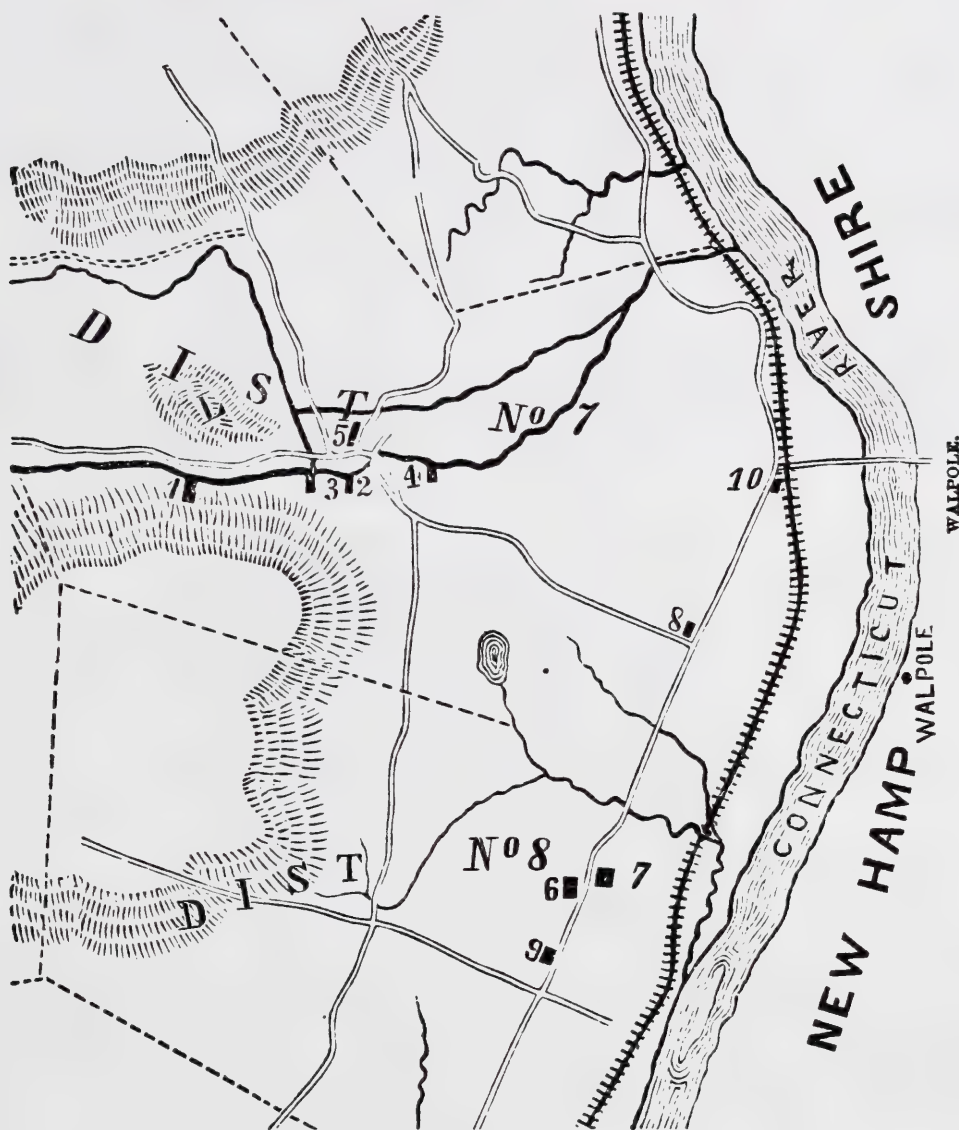

He spoke through the window to his wife, sitting inside:

“Lois, do you remember what the words are?”

She did not, but she said they were the real old-fashioned kind, about King George and his tory crew, shot his head through. I rode on.

It is in history that while New York claimed Vermont by virtue of the royal grant, it attempted to hold court in this old town of Westminster, and the time seemed to the Vermonters favorable for a forcible demonstration to assert their independence of New York, if not of Great Britain. At present they claim only the first. By the next Centennial we shall hear that the first blow in the war of American Independence was struck in Vermont, and the proof will not be wanting. But, I was saying, when the New York judges came to the Westminster Court House, [the site of which is designated on the map of Westminster, p. 323, by figure 7,] they found the Vermont boys in possession, resolved to keep the judges out. A fight ensued: the Vermonters were not dislodged until midnight: several of them were wounded: two of them were killed. An old decaying stone that recorded their names and valor, was replaced in 1873 by a handsome monument, erected by the State of Vermont, of Blue Mountain granite, sixteen feet high, with a face four feet square. On the front is this inscription:

“William French, shot in the Court House at Westminster, March 13, 1775. Erected by the State of Vermont in 1873.”

On the base, in large capital letters, the word “FRENCH.” On the north side is inscribed: “Daniel Houghton, shot in the Court House at Westminster, March 13, 1775.” On the base, in large capitals, “HOUGHTON.” On the south side of the die, in sunk letters, the following fac simile of the inscription from the original stone:

In memory of William French
 Son to Mr. Nathaniel French. Who Was shot at Westminster March ye 13th
 1775 by the hands of cruel Ministerial tools
 Of Georg ye 3d in the Corthouse at a 11 a Clock at Night in the 22d year of his Age.
 “Here William French his body lies
 For murder his blood for vengeance cries.
 King Georg the third his tory crew
 Tha with a bawl his head shot threw.
 For Liberty and his Country's Good
 He lost his life his Dearest blood.”

The issue of the contest between New York and Vermont is well known, as well as the record the Green Mountain State has made in the subsequent history of the United States. Her centennial will come five years hence, and perhaps this lovely valley and the banks of the placid river may be the scene of commemorative services, where “the shot was fired that was heard around the world.”

The old town-house of Westminster, formerly a church, [9 on the map,] still standing, was erected in 1770, but the court house which was the scene of the massacre in 1775, has passed away, a door with the bullet holes being sacredly preserved.

The broad street was laid out in 1737, being the oldest street in Vermont, but it was not until 1761 that a permanent settlement was secured, and the first church was organized in 1767. The first house of worship was erected in 1770, and was so arranged that sheep were housed under it, and their bleating often mingled with the worship above. A man with a rod in his hand kept the boys in order and drove all dogs out of the house. The present house, near which is the monument, is more than a hundred years old.

There are not so many Adventists in this region as in Maine and Eastern Massachusetts. But I was much pleased by hearing of a remark made by a young lady whose parents are of that persuasion. She was entreated by one of her friends to get her white robe ready and be prepared to ascend: “I can't,” she replied; “father and mother are going up, and somebody must stay to see to the cattle.”

I like that. When the Lord comes, I would rather be found taking care of the cattle,—that is doing the work he has given me to do,—than sitting astride the ridge-pole of the barn waiting for his coming.

Crossing the Connecticut River by a covered bridge, and driving up a long hill, we entered the beautiful village of Walpole, New Hampshire. It is laid out in broad streets which are densely shaded with great elms. On the green stands a venerable town hall, "Built 1789," and the handsome churches, and elegant dwellings with spacious court-yards and surrounding culture, show the wealth and taste of the inhabitants. It is to a dweller in New York city, almost painful to see and hear how handsomely and happily one may live with his family in such places as these in the Eastern States. A thousand dollars a year will carry a housekeeper through in good style in Walpole or Westminster: butter 18 cents a pound, eggs a cent apiece and less, rents very low: an elegant residence may be bought for $5,000, and modest mansions at quieter figures: one man is just as good as another, and all the ladies belong to the same set. If you cannot be content in such society, the fault must be your own.

The ride was charming in the cool of the day, from Walpole on the high grounds above the river, with fields beyond the flood, all "dressed in living green," the sun going down behind piled thunder clouds, their edges glistening in silver light, and their huge masses now and then shooting out forked lightning, a strange combination of the glorious, the lovely, and sublime.

Crossing a toll bridge, I handed the old gate-keeper a new 25 cent piece. He eyed it with great suspicion, hefted it, rubbed its edges with his thumb, and finally let me pass, saying, "I guess it's good." [Rev. Irenæus Prime, D.D.]

Joel⁶ Holton, being the eldest of twelve children of Joel⁵, [The homestead of Joel⁶ is marked 8 on the Westminster map, p. 323.] one of the first settlers of Westminster, was from early boyhood accustomed to hard labor. His father had erected the first saw-mill in the township, at a place marked 1 on the accompanying map, and subsequently a second mill at a lower point, marked 2. In these the son Joel⁶ was early and late at work. Past his majority, he erected a saw-mill at an intermediate point, marked 3, and at a still lower point, 4, mills for cloth-dressing. In 1811 and some six years later, destructive FRESHETS caused financial embarrassment to Joel⁶ by sweeping away his prepared lumber and damaging his mill structures.

Heavy strokes of the axe had subdued forest acres, and the growing wheat gave promise of sustenance to the industrious couple and their four little children.

The freshet came, the mill-dams were swept away, the wheat, nearly ripe for harvest, was prostrated and blasted.

New structures were laboriously, yet hopefully made to appear, and the lumber interest added to the fields for cultivation.

It was the second freshet, a few years later, that was followed by the greatest financial difficulties in the family.

The emergency was great—not, however, leading to despair. The elder son, bordering upon manhood, and then anxious to accompany his young associates from New England to the distant Ohio, yielded his preference to the needs of his parents. Vigorously, manfully and benevolently, did he come to the rescue.

Hardships and exposures had brought the mother to a state of great suffering, under rheumatism, entirely disabling her for walking and the ordinary duties of the household. Then it was the two daughters assumed the domestic duties; while the younger son, a lad of eleven years, volunteered to labor with a creditor, thus to cancel one of the small debts.

Prosperity crowned the united effort. The elder son, Erastus-A. Holton, became a highly respected citizen of his native town, and rejoiced in the ample and honorable provision he was enabled to secure for his parents during their declining years, near to whose grave now repose the mortal remains of that dutiful son, at Westminster, Vt. The elder sister, Minerva [3830], taught district schools a few terms, and afterwards with her younger brother went to South Berwick, Me., where she attended a select school for young ladies, and he, the South Berwick Academy, under the tuition of his uncle Isaac^o, who subsequently became a teacher at Hillsgrove, McDonough Co., Illinois. [See Holton Memorial].

Miriam Holton, the younger sister [3857], past twenty years of age, commenced attending the Academy at Limerick, Me., where she qualified herself to become a teacher.

Subsequently, having taught in Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut, she went to New York City,* where, for many years, with her younger brother who had preceded her, she successfully conducted a Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

By theory and example she strove to create in her pupils industrious habits and a just sense of the compound values of labor judiciously applied, with a profound respect for laborers in whatever field of God's Providence they may be employed beneficially towards the well-being of his creatures. She strove to create in her pupils that independence, that individuality of character and purpose, which would enable them to move onward for the good of humanity.

She did not count the passing trials of life as hindrances to true progress. She practically remembered the fearful freshets above-named as being the occasions of positive good.

She died at Le Claire, Scott County, Iowa, 8 Nov. 1865. . . . Her school having been the first in New York city in which physiology and hygiene were introduced as prominent branches of study, she did, by her last will and testament, bequeath over sixteen thousand dollars to be devoted to the diffusion of knowledge upon the said subjects or branches of study.

At the same time the testatrix desired specially to benefit orphan children through the friendly agency of the Institute of Reward for Orphans of Patriots, in the manner prescribed in said will.

The Directors of the Institute, on the 31st Dec. 1873, reported the completion of the course of three thousand three hundred and forty-eight (3348) lectures on Physiology and Hygiene, for the benefit of sundry institutions of learning; and particularly in the interest of the orphans of soldiers and sailors who died in the service of the Union. In their twelfth annual report they say:

“This Institute Course, which for eight years has been successfully sustained by the bequest of Miriam⁷ (Holton) Brown, having been completed, it is eminently due to the memory of the testatrix, late a Life Director of the I. R. O. P., that there should now be deposited among the archives of the Institute a copy of her last will and testament, with a statement of the manner in which its provisions in regard to these lectures have been executed." [See Holton Memorial].

Joel Holton died 10 Dec. 1847, W., where, upon one side of his family monument, the American line of his ancestry is seen. [See engraving, p. 328.]

We copy from the Westport Patriot, Essex Co., N.Y., the following:

Died, at Westminster, Vt., Dec. 10, after an illness of twenty-two hours, Mr. Joel Holton, in the 78th year of his age.

His children and grandchildren, though residents in distant parts of the Union, all assembled on a last family visit at his late residence last May. As the day of separation drew near, all, young and old, paid a visit to an old "Apple Oven," rudely constructed more than half a century ago, on a granite height (about three miles from the site of Westminster Court House) near the scene of the early labors of this respected parent. The ascent to the oven, which to buoyant youth seemed easy, was now insurmountable to the aged father, whose sons bore him on their shoulders to the loved resort of his youth. Here he recounted the scenes of the early settlers, the history of early associates, and the dealings of Providence through a long series of years. [See L, Map. of W., p. 323.]

One lone apple-tree, sprung from the scattered fragments, extended its ancient branches over the oven. The body and limbs were very much decayed; but on it and around it were numerous young shoots.

There was found one lone blossom with double whorls of petals, which dropped on the slightest touch. A daughter gently plucked it and handed it to her father, who said it was an emblem of himself.

“‘It is an emblem of myself.’ Yes, he Was right, for what could more emphatic speak
That father’s lone condition? But now, he,
Too, is gone, while sons and daughters keenly Mourn a father’s sudden exit. As fell
Those petals at the touch, so, when death’s hand
Was on him laid, he fell an easy prey.”

Their children were born in Westminster as follows:

In honor of our grandmother, Miriam (WINSLOW) Parsons, a descendant of Edward^A Winslow, of Droitwich, England, we adopt the crest and motto, to which she was entitled :

A helmet sustaining an oak stump, having sprouts within, and without a ring, symbolizing the triple nature of man, { Material or Physical, Intellectual, Spiritual. } The twigs without the ring represent the material or physical, and those within symbolize the intellectual and the spiritual. The former, though subject to modified forms, are not necessarily unlimited in duration; while the latter spring, develop and endure in and through eternity.

The motto: Decoptus Florio, found on some ancient Coats of Arms, has in modern times been written Decaptus floreo, and, with some, the old form gives way to Decarptus floreo—all having as a central idea—"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again."

The following obituary was written by his pastor, the Rev. W. H. Gilbert:

"Seldom does the Insatiate Archer direct his weapon with a more ruthless hand. Rarely does he find a victim on which so much of earthly good seems to depend. The deceased possessed remarkable energy, a frank and generous spirit, and unbounded integrity. His dwelling was the abode of hospitality. He was a host in support of every cause which he espoused. He ever manifested a devotion to the public weal, and often at great personal sacrifice.

Any delineation of his excellencies is not needed to render his memory precious to those who knew and loved him. It is for the honor of Divine grace that we would speak of what he was and what he did. In his decease, a bereaved family are made to mourn a most judicious and affectionate husband and father; the Church and Society in which he was a pillar weep, for 'a great man is fallen.' The friends of every noble enterprise in the town and county grieve for the loss of a most efficient helper. Though in the midst of many schemes of useful enterprise, he met death with composure, maintaining a humble reliance on the merits of Christ. In his latest moments, he was consoled by the sweet consciousness that he had rendered his Savior sincere though imperfect service.

A large circle of friends attended his funeral on Saturday, and the unbidden tear on many a cheek testified the depth of their sorrow.

Perhaps there was no scheme of benevolence in which the deceased enlisted with greater energy than the Temperance Reform. In efforts to promote this cause, he has long stood among the first in our commonwealth, and has cheerfully allowed it to tax both his time and purse to an extent unsurpassed and perhaps unequalled in the county. At the time of his death, he held the highest office in the Division of the Sons of Temperance, to which he belonged; and the long procession of the members of that order, both from his own and neighboring divisions, which followed his remains to the tomb, not only wearing the badge of mourning, but indicating in every countenance the sincerity of grief, seemed but a fitting testimonial of regard for the departed.

Just as the sun declined behind the neighboring hills, and the still and solemn hour of evening began to steal upon us, we reluctantly bore his body to its resting place, and lingered round the sacred spot while his brethren in the Temperance cause sung a part of the consoling and appropriate hymn, 'Thou art gone to the grave but we will not deplore thee.' He has fallen a soldier at his post. 'He rests from his labors, and his works do follow him.'

Westminster, Sept. 3, 1849.

CAPT. EDWARD-ALEXANDER^s HOLTON.

In response to President Lincoln's call, 17 April, 1861, for 75,000 volunteers, Vermont's quota was one regiment. The Governor of that State, Erastus Fairbanks, ordered ten companies of the State militia to report at Rutland for three months' U.S. service.

He writes home as follows:

In one of the battles of Fredericksburg, the 6th Corps, to which the Vermont Brigade belonged, was hard pushed; and Gen. Howe said to Col. Grant, Commander of the Vermont Brigade,

"On your Brigade depends the safety of the whole corps." And sure enough! the rest of the division could not stand the pressure; but either fell back or disgracefully ran and left our Brigade to work alone against a rebel corps. For the honor of the state let me say that they, like the Green Mountain Boys at Hubbardstown, stood their ground for a while, then charged, and a hand to hand conflict ensued, in which they, the Vermont boys, came off victors.

An officer of another Corps was heard to say that "the honor of being a private in the Vermont Brigade was greater than to be a Colonel in any other."

David is 3d sergeant in my Company, Joel is 2d Sergt. in the 12th Vt., Hascal Phelps, my step-father's son, is 1st sergt. in the 10th Vt., and Oscar Phelps is corporal in the 13th Vt.—making five soldiers out of the one family. * * *

He was wounded in the battle of the wilderness, 5 May, 1864, about one hour after the death of his brother, Sergeant-David-May^o Holton [3824].

Capt. Edward-A. Holton was honorably discharged on report of Board of Surgeons, for disability, 17 Aug. 1864; and to this date, 1 January, 1877, bears in the tissues of his leg, between the two long bones, the wounding bullet.

SERGEANT DAVID-MAY^o HOLTON.

Not a few of the rank and file and of the non-commissioned officers in the army of the Union, who lie buried in nameless graves, if buried at all, and have no mention made of them in the papers except as their names appear in the list of "killed," are men whose death is a much greater loss to the country than the death of some Captains, Colonels, or even Brigadiers. Such a man was David M. Holton of Williston, Sergeant in Co. I, 6th Vermont Volunteers, who fell in the battle of the Wilderness, 5 May, 1864.

He was born in Westminster, Vt., 1 Oct. 1836, the son of Erastus A. and Hannah (May) Holton. His paternal ancestry was traceable back for two hundred years, to William Holton, one of the founders of Hartford, Ct., and Northampton, Mass. On the mother's side, he was connected with the ancient and highly respectable May family of Haddam, Ct., branches of which emigrated to Putney and Westminster at an early day. His father was actively and extensively engaged in business, but David, by the passionate love for books which he manifested in childhood and youth, made it evident that literature rather than business was to be the employment of his life.

Having made thorough preparation for College, he entered the Sophomore class at Williamstown in 1856, and was graduated in 1859. By the death of his father and the subsequent marriage of his mother, his home had in the mean time been transferred to Williston. To that place he returned, and after a brief interval of rest, he became Principal of the Green Mountain Academy at Underhill, where he remained till the summer of 1861. He was designing to enter the Episcopal ministry, but the call to fight seemed at that time more imperative than the call to preach; and though nothing could be more foreign to his tastes and habits than military life, he enlisted as a private in a company which was forming at Essex. The change from a sedentary to an active life was not easily made, and three or four months of sickness, at various times, prevented him from taking part in the engagement at Lee's Mills, and the battles of Williamsburgh and the 1st Fredericksburg.

In all the other engagements of the 6th Regiment he bravely bore his part, and, at the second battle of Fredericksburg, received the special commendation of his Col. as having "behaved splendidly." After more than two years of hard service he wrote to a friend, "I can truly say that I have never regretted having enlisted as a private, nor have I ever, (even in the darkest hour, when the destruction of this army seemed probable,) doubted the final success of our cause." The evening before the army of Potomac commenced its march toward the Wilderness, he wrote to his mother, "I am blessed with such good health and strength that I can endure and suffer much if need be. I wish you to dismiss all anxiety on my account, especially as I have none. I hope to live, but I trust I am not afraid to die; in any event I am determined to do my whole duty, and leave the result to Him who doeth all things well." He fell on the very first day of the battle, shot through the head with a percussion ball, and dying instantly.

He was a man of fine abilities and excellent scholarship, but his talents were solid rather than showy. His amiable disposition, singularly modest demeanor, and agreeable manners, secured the affection of all who knew him; and though he sleeps in an unknown grave,* there will be a lasting monument to his memory in the hearts of many who "Knew him but to love him

And named him but to praise."

The following letter shows the same characteristic energy, earnestness and assiduity which he exhibited, while with his uncle, Dr. David-P⁷. Holton, in New York City, preparing himself for admission to the FREE ACADEMY (afterwards the College of the City of New York), and while prosecuting his studies as a member of that institution.

It is a circumstance, however, to be regretted, that he was called away to his Illinois home, before his graduation. This letter and the following came to the compilers through his aunt, Miriam^{8,7} (Holton) Brown, and are published without his knowledge of our purpose.¹

ST. LOUIS, MO., 9 March, 1862.

. It is now one week since I left home. I found all well at HIGH HILL. The whole regiment was there, and as you might expect, there was a good deal of excitement among the officers about the coming examination.

Tuesday night, 4th inst., I started for St. Louis, and till Saturday, the 8th, have been with a book in my hand 18 hours out of every 24. At 10 A.M. I was invited to take a seat and make myself at home. My examination continued till after 2 P.M. I answered about 250 questions, two of which I missed outright, and to four I gave unintelligible answers. By the movement of his pencil I think the Col. checked four as unanswered questions in the army regulations. In military law I answered all very promptly. Col. Easton said, "That will do, captain, you can go. You have passed a very satisfactory examination." Two other colonels asked me some questions about artillery and fortifications. I saw they were pleased with my answers.

I am very happy in the certainty of having passed an acceptable examination—happy not on my own account, but because I have a wife, father, mother, brothers and sisters and many friends who are looking on to see how I succeed.

I send a dozen pictures. Paste Josie's on a block, and let the children play with it, for I do not want them to forget how pa looks. I will send more after a while. I return to High Hill to-morrow. Yours affectionately,

CHARLES-A. GILCHRIST.

CAMP NEAR MEMPHIS, TENN.

11 Feb. 1863.

. . . We started 8th inst. from our camp near Germantown. It was very muddy and rainy. Leaving at 10 a.m. we arrived within two miles of Memphis at 2 p.m., 14 miles of marching in four hours. We are now in Quinby's Division. Smith's and Logan's Division are by the side of ours. Some think we shall go down the river to Vicksburg, or near there, and then back towards Jackson, which is fifty miles east—cutting off R. R. communication between the two places. There is nothing more uncertain than a soldier's movements. . . . There have lately been some promotions in the regiment: Lieut. Craft is to be 1st Lieut.; and Lieut. Walker, Capt. of Co. F.; Sergeant Davis is to be my 2d Lieut.; J. N. Van Hozen, formerly of Macomb [McDonough Co., Ill.,] is 2nd Lieut., Co. B. Craft is in St. Louis. I expect he will be ordered to join the company.

The Chicago Times is excluded from this military district. In the Jackson district any man found with a copy of the Times, new or old, is arrested. If a few of those rebels in Illinois could hear what the soldiers from that State say about them (pro-slavery democratic soldiers at that) they would stop and think before they say any more. We all firmly believe we can and shall conquer the rebels in the South, and that if it had not been for the rebels in the North giving them encouragement, they would have given up long ago. . . .

Yours truly,

C-A. GILCHRIST.

HD. QRS. 12TH LA. COL'D INFANTRY. CAMP NEAR VICKSBURG, MISS.

June 28, 1863.

MRS. MIRIAM (HOLTON) BROWN,
Milwaukee, Wisconsin;

DEAR AUNT: I expect you read in the papers all about our marches, so I cannot give you much news except what concerns myself.

By Special Orders, No. 23, from the War Department, I am appointed Col. of the 12th La. Col'd Infantry. All my officers are appointed by the same authority, and it is left for us to obtain recruits as best we can. . . .

I suppose you are somewhat acquainted around here, and I can describe our location so that you can understand what I mean: My camp is about a mile from the suburbs of the city on the Jackson road, about 1 1-2 miles north of the Jackson R.R. McPherson's Army Corps, the 17th, is camped in the ravines from the high trestle-work nearest Vicksburg on the R.R., north about two miles, and we do our fighting directly in front of our bivouacs. As for tents, we have most forgotten how they look—have had none for three months.

Gen. Ord has from the R.R. around to the Miss. river on the left, and Gen. Sherman from our right around to the Mississippi, above Vicksburg. Formerly we were in Gen. Quinby's Division (the 7th); but for the past two months, until lately, Gen. Crocker has been commanding us. Now Gen. J. E. Smith has charge; and to him I report.

I hope soon to be assigned to some Brigade so that some one will claim us, there being no other colored troops in this section. I am working under disadvantages. Soon you must examine the papers for accounts of the wondrous 12 La., and their mighty deeds. I am strong in the faith that they will make better soldiers than white men. [See the record of his brother, Capt. Edward-May^o Gilchrist].

 I was in Jackson one night, slept in a very nice door yard in the S. W. part of the city on a fine carpet, for the use of which the owner has my thanks. I was sorry I did not have the names of some of your old acquaintances, so I could have enquired as to their welfare.

When we had returned to Vicksburg we decided that we, the army of the Tennessee, were the soldiers of the world. We had marched two hundred miles and fought seven battles in 17 days. We have been besieging Vicksburg now forty days and to-morrow morning it will have been forty nights.

The 9th Army corps from Burnside's Army are near us. They are mostly from the Eastern States. I expect I have relatives in some of the regiments, and wish I knew who they are and in what Regt.

The health of the army is good. My health is excellent—my weight is 202 lbs., without coat or vest. Give my best respects to Dr. Brown. I should like to hear from him and yourself, when you have leisure to write.

Your affectionate Nephew,

CHARLES-A. GILCHRIST.

CAPT. EDWARD-MAY^o GILCHRIST

Enlisted in the 71st Illinois Volunteer Infantry, 16 July, 1862, for three months; was sworn in, 24 July, at Camp Douglas, Chicago—was high private in the front rank, being only second in height. His regiment was sent down to Moscow, Ky., to guard bridges. The latter part of October was ordered back to Chicago to be mustered out.

In March, 1864, he received an appointment from Adj. Gen. Thomas, as 2d Lieut. in the 12th La. Vol. Infantry, of African descent, afterwards named the 50th U.S. Colored Infantry. He was assigned to Co. H. In February, 1865, was promoted to 1st Lieut. in same regiment and assigned to same company. On the 23d of November, 1865, he received the appointment of captain in the same company, which position he held till the 20th of March, 1866. He was not injured by the enemy's ball until the 9th April, 1865, during the charge on Blakely, Ala., the last battle of the war, when he was struck on the hip by a piece of shell which sent him "whirling, but broke no bone—it being a glancing 'lick.'"

When camped at Vicksburgh, on the 5th May, 1864 he was taken sick with typhoid fever; and on the 7th was sent to the Marine Hospital. On the 9th he was laid out on a stretcher, his measure taken for a coffin and word sent to his brother Charles-Allen, who was then colonel of the regiment. The colonel went immediately and personally administered to the captain, whom the surgeons considered as then dying.

After unremitting watching and attendance, day and night for one hundred and twenty hours, the elder brother had the happiness of seeing the patient regain consciousness. After thirty days he was able to return to his regiment.

In a letter to his mother, 15 April, 1865, he writes:

"We commenced the siege of Blakely, 3 April, and on the 9th, the skirmish line was ordered to advance that we might dig our sap out further before digging the parallel. [A sap is a ditch dug at such angles that the approaching force can not get an enfilading fire on it, or in plainer words, "rake the ditch."]

"The skirmishers did not advance as is generally done; but commenced shouting and running, as if they were mad. . . . The rebel skirmishers ran, and so far, that we got permission to take our companies separately to the front to hold the ground our skirmishers had gained, and dig rifle pits.

"We advanced half way to the fort and stopped to rest behind some timber that had been felled with the tops towards us, sharpened so that we could not get over. I was ordered by the colonel to take the company to the left. We ran along, dodging shot and shell as much as possible. It was then I was struck with a piece of shell. I fell; but so quickly regained my position that not a man in the company knew I was struck.

"The rebels, upon seeing us charging on the upper fort, ran from the lower one to help stop us. The white soldiers who were opposing the lower fort, upon hearing us, commenced, also, to charge, and took it.

"When the colonel saw that the lower fort was to be taken, he gave the order forward. We got so near that I heard the captain of the rebel battery give the order to 'Aim low and sweep the grass.' But the black soldiers advanced and could not be stopped. . . . We captured about 4,000.

“The next day, upon looking around, we found that under the circumstances, we had made one of the most successful charges of the war. [See 3841].

“Nearly a quarter of a mile from the fort there was a line of torpedoes planted under ground in such a manner that ten pounds weight would explode them. Beside the line there were some planted along where men would be likely to walk, and there was one planted in one of the embrasures of their fort. Those in the line were placed fifteen feet apart.

“Of all the torpedoes planted, but one exploded during the charge. So the Lord must have guided our footsteps.

“Your affectionate son,

“EDWARD-M. GILCHRIST.

For an account of her educational labors in New England, and as principal of a boarding and day school for young ladies in the city of New York; and of her judicious aid to youth in the pursuit of knowledge, the reader is referred to p. 326, also, to “Reminiscences,” in the Appendix, in connection with which may be found a copy of her last will and testament, the fourteenth article of which is here reprinted:

Fourteenth. Desirous to cement the circle of my near and distant relatives in bonds of friendship, to strengthen a just spirit of emulation in humane and patriotic deeds, and to add to the historic renown of my beloved country. I desire and direct my executors to appropriate one portion or share in compensation to my brother, David-P. Holton, and his wife, for the re-adjustment and completion (according to their own discretion) of the genealogical diagrams and tables, and the biographical sketches of my parental ancestry, relations and descendants, as commenced by Mrs. Frances-K. Holton; and another portion or share to pay for the publication and distribution of printed copies of the same to all the known descendants of my grandparents, and to such other persons as my executors may judge expedient.

The work so far exceeds the original purpose, that the bequest, at the time esteemed very liberal, goes but a small way towards defraying the expense of the books, which will be given, as by the will, to the descendants of the grandparents of the testatrix. In the work of collecting records for these Memorial Volumes, the correspondence has been so extensive and so long continued, that the outlay for postage together with payments to Town and County Clerks for abstracts from public records, has exceeded the entire sum left by the testatrix for these books, the deficiencies having been supplied by her brother.

It accorded with the views and wishes of her intended husband, no less than with her own, to have executed a tripartite ante-nuptial indenture. They were fortunate in selecting for Trustee a gentleman of eminent respectability, integrity, and honor.

In examining the packages of her letters, several from him were found, all showing a delicate regard to the interests intrusted to him.

John-S. Richardson, Jr., Esq.,

DEAR SIR: Holding, as we do, your receipt in full for all charges against the estate of Miriam (Holton) Brown, we beg you to accept the accompanying MEMORIAL VOLUME, as a small token of the high appreciation of your character, and of your acts as Trustee, entertained by the Testatrix in her life time, and subsequently by her Executors.

Very Respectfully,

Dear Sir, do we remain, yours truly,

* GENEALOGICAL NOTATION.—Successive American generations are indicated by numeral indices, commencing with the immigrant children (¹) of the father (Δ); thence by Arabic figures, progressively increasing, to show the successive generations down to the present.

It may be observed that Miriam⁷ (Holton) Brown being of the seventh generation of American Holtons, through Deacon William¹ Holton, of Northampton, Mass., her name in any chart, diagram, book, or other memorial of said Deacon William¹ and his descendants would bear, as her Holton index seven (7). [See inscription on the monument page 329].

At the same time, it may be observed that in the American ancestral lines of Phebe (Parsons) Holton, mother of Miriam (Holton) Brown, and daughter of Miriam (Winslow) Parsons, the generations of Winslow are one more than the generations of Parsons, or Holton.

Hence Phebe⁶ (Parsons) Holton would have on the American system of genetic indexes six (6) in a book specially showing the descendants of Deacon Benjamin¹ Parsons; while she would have seven (7) in a book showing the line of descent from Kenelm¹ Winslow.

The name of Miriam (Holton) Brown, daughter of said Phebe⁶, may serve to illustrate the use of the double index, as the name may be connected with the aforesaid families; Parsons, Winslow, and Holton, respectively:

| PARSONS. | WINSLOW. | HOLTON. |
| Miriam ⁷ (Holton) Brown, Phebe ⁶ (Parsons) Holton, Benjamin ⁵ Parsons, who was gr. grandson of Benjamin ¹ , of Springfield, Mass. | Miriam ⁶ (Holton) Brown, Phebe ⁷ (Parsons) Holton, Miriam ⁶ (Winslow) Parsons, Thomas ⁵ Winslow, who was gr. gr. grandson of Kenelm ¹ , of Marshfield, Mass. | Miriam ⁷ (Holton) Brown, Joel ⁶ Holton, Joel ⁵ Holton, who was gr. gr. grandson of William ¹ , of Northampton, Mass. |

It may occur in a Parsons Memorial, that we desire to speak or write of the said Miriam⁷,⁶ (Holton) Brown as a descendant of Kenelm¹ Winslow. It then becomes permissible to affix to her name the compound index seven, eight (7 ' 8), when the writer has logically put the reader in a standpoint of perception, where, with ordinary intelligence, there need be no ambiguity. See Winslow Memorial, Appendix; article, METHOD IN GENEALOGY.

The chart of the FORWARD FAMILY, bound between the 346 and 347th pages of the Winslow Memorial, is being enlarged, in preparation for one of our forthcoming volumes. We solicit all interested in this family to forward full records.

We here give Rev. Justus Forward's letter of acceptance, dated, Cold Spring, Mass., 29 Jan. 1756. [This place was incorporated, 23d June, 1761, as Belchertown.]

“To the church of Christ, in the township of Cold-Spring, and to the inhabitants of said town, GREETING:

Beloved and Friends.—I have taken into consideration your invitation to me, to settle among you, in the work of the gospel ministry, as manifested to me by your committee, on the evenings succeeding the 9th and the 19th of January, as also the offers of the town to induce me so to do, and proposals respecting provision for my maintenance and outward support in case I should settle in that work among you as manifested to me by the same committee, on the evening last mentioned; and for your good will towards me hereby manifested, I can but render you my grateful acknowledgements. I have taken the advice of those of my friends whom I had opportunity to consult respecting this affair, and I hope seriously considered, and diligently weighed and pondered the case before me, in all the apparent circumstances of it, and begged direction of Almighty God in this important case, concern and affair, both for myself and for you, that each might be taught and guided in the way of our duty, and in the way that might be for our best interests. I must confess that the greatness of the work and the difficulties that attend it have lain with no small weight upon my spirits, and at times been matter of great discouragement to me, concerning undertaking it at present, especially considering my youth and the little time and opportunity I have had to pursue the study of Divinity, so that on that account I should not have chosen to have engaged in the work of the ministry so soon. But God, who knows what is best and fittest for us infinitely better than we do what is so for our own selves, has in the way of his Providence, as we have good reason to think, all circumstances duly considered, united your hearts together to make choice of me to be your minister, which I cannot but look upon as a speaking thing in Providence.

The people of this town have all along, since I first preached with you, shown a generous and good disposition towards me, and considering the fewness of their numbers and the circumstances of the times, made me an offer as good perhaps as was reasonable to expect, and as I desire only a comfortable support and maintenance from you, should I settle with you, so I doubt not should my necessities require more, and your circumstances admit of giving it, you would freely give it; a sufficient maintenance being the thing, and that only, which is desired or proposed by each party, I must therefore, as is my duty, notwithstanding all difficulties and discouragements, comply with and be obedient to what appears to me to be the Heavenly call, and I hope I do it cheerfully and for the sake of God and the interests of religion. At present therefore I know of nothing, upon supposition that the neighboring ministers advise to it, which may hinder my settling among you, and think to accept your invitation and offers, hoping that we may be blessings to, and blessed in and with each other, so wishing and praying that grace, mercy and peace may be multiplied unto you abundantly,

I remain your assured friend,

JUSTUS FORWARD.”

Dated at my Lodgings, in Cold Spring, Jan. 29, Anno Domini, 1756.

He continued in the faithful and prompt discharge of the duties of the pastoral office beyond the age of four-score years, and died March 8, 1814, in the 59th year of his ministry, and in the 84th of his age. In doctrine and in life he was a genuine representative of the Puritanic stock, in the stern and reliable elements of his character. He published several works—one “On the Prophecies”; one “A Key to the Revelations.”

3858. DAVID-PARSONS^{} [3818] (son of Phebe' (Parsons) Holton,) b. 18 June, 1812, Westminster, Vt.; m. by Rev. Albert Barnes, Phila., Pa., 12 May, 1839, to Frances-Keturah Forward, b. 5 May, 1815, Southwick, Mass., d. of Pliny and Fanny (Root) of S. [4274, Root Gen.] He has been an advocate for total abstinence from intoxicating beverages, by precept and example (without exception) since his tenth anniversary, 1822; he successfully labored to procure from Congress the Act for the establishment of Agricultural Colleges; has employed much time and expended a large amount of money in establishing Patriot-Orphan Homes; while a teacher in the Bellows-Falls High School, 1830-2, he read the publications of Rev. Phineas Bailey, of East Berkshire, Vt., on Phonography and Phonotopy, and became convinced of the importance of a phonetic alphabet, and subsequently labored for its general introduction. Some fifteen years later, this conviction manifested itself, as may be inferred from the fact that he then, 1847, assisted in engraving the new alphabet on two prominent mountains in northern New York. [For the views then entertained and for the sentiments offered, reference is made to the Appendix]. Since his first session of school-teaching, 1827, a large portion of his time and effort has been in school-visitations and in lecturing on topics of teaching. He served, two years, 1846, 1847, as County Superintendent of Common Schools in Essex Co., N.Y.

An extract from his "Reminiscences," recently published, is here given :

"Referring to my diary of that period, 1846, 1847, I find that in every school-house in the county, 159, I lectured at least one evening, in many from two to four, and in each of thirty-nine districts five evenings. All of this was extra labor, entirely gratuitous to the recipients and to the county.

Among the exercises which occupied me during a part of these evening sessions, was that of analyzing and classifying the sounds of spoken language, and practicing in concert the pronunciation of the vocal elements, thus enunciating the several steps of progression in the speaking of a word or of a sentence. This exercise of the voice, as a help to clear enunciation in reading, was, before this, unheard of in the schools of the county. We also paid some attention to the phonetic letters which might be used in ordinary script and print to symbolize unmistakably to the reader these elemental movements of the voice. From about that date, 1843-47, these exercises have gradually increased in the schools of the Union.

These vocal elements thus enunciated by the youth of this generation, and through their agency recognized, individualized, and practised upon by the masses of the people, will create a demand for the phonetic letters of some form, having uses analogous to the ends sought by Pitman, Comstock, Leigh, and others engaged in this department of progress.

In celebrating the seventy-first anniversary of American Independence, Saturday, 3d July, 1847, it was my privilege to accompany several school-teachers to the top of Whiteface, a mountain in the western section of Essex Co., N.Y., and there to engrave the symbols of these elementary sounds, giving on that occasion an address upon the "Aid which PHONOTYPES will be in translating the BIBLE into the languages of the heathen." A copy of this address may be seen, commencing on page 34 of the Phonetic Magazine, printed that year in Philadelphia.

One month later, August 3d, similar exercises were had at the school district of the Adirondack Iron Works, and on Tahawus (Mount Marcy), August 4th and 5th.

* For use of the compound index see p. 344.

On the thirty-first anniversary of that occasion, August 5th, 1878. I hope to meet some teachers and promoters of educational progress on the same Tahawian heights.”

Since his residence in Europe, 1853, 4, 5, 6, 7, he has in some measure striven to introduce uniformity among all people in coins, weights, and measures; also, uniformity in chronological reckoning. In this interest is here reproduced a copy of a letter which needs no special explanation:

To His Majesty, Emperor of all the Russias:

An humble citizen of the United States of America, the undersigned, most respectfully solicits your Majesty's attention, to a Calendar, found on the last page of the pamphlet—(the March No. of the Journal of the Institute of Reward for Orphans of Patriots, 1874) sent in the Mail taking this communication.

In face of the said Calendar, on the 3rd page of the cover, are some remarks on Chronology; and, also, an explanation of the Calendar tables, and the manner of using the same.

The object of this presentation and solicitation is the procuring of some uniform division of time common to all nations.

While uniform scientific processes and formulæ and uniform appliances are prevailing over the world—while efforts for uniformity in coins, weights, and measures are now being hopefully made, may it please your Majesty and your people to adopt the Calendar, or the arrangement for the length of years, which does so nearly harmonize with God's Arithmetic, as applicable to the revolutions of the earth in its relations to heavenly bodies, thus harmonizing art with nature.

It would be highly gratifying—would meet a laudable ambition of the United States, if you would honor our great Centennial, by making it the occasion of a promulgation by your Government for the adoption of the chronological rules now generally prevalent in christendom.

I am, Honored Sir,

Your Obt. Servant,

DAVID-PARSONS' HOLTON, M.D.

NEW YORK, May 10, 1875.

For several years Dr. Holton has been Secretary of the National Veteran Temperance Corps, of the American Philological Society, of the Institute of Reward for Orphans of Patriots, and recently of the Pilgrim Record Society.

On the 26th March, 1872, he was appointed Professor of Physiology in the New York Free Medical College for Women.

For some years he has, in cooperation with his wife, been chiefly engaged in arranging genealogical and biographical records of Plymouth Pilgrims, including the preparation of several MEMORIAL VOLUMES, of which this book is one.

It is his desire to publish, at 61 East 59th street, New York, a magnificent folio of large radial charts, some five hundred in number, which will alone be valuable; and which will be doubly valuable when used in connection with the octavo volumes—analogously with the use of atlases in connection with descriptive geographies. He already has, at an expense of over forty thousand dollars, material for over five hundred such charts, but is financially impeded in publishing them, except they be separately or collectively ordered by parties therein especially interested or by some person appreciating the importance of this department of research.

Their children born in New York:

3859. 1. D-PLINY-FORWARD, b. 29 Mar. 1840; d. 27 Sept. 1849, Southwick, Mass.

Unlike his sprightly, frolicsome, fun-loving brother, he was sedate, thoughtful, reflective; and, though of a cheerful and amiable disposition, seldom smiled. He was an intelligent reader at a very early age, and delighted in such standard works as are usually appreciated only by persons of mature culture. That he thoroughly understood their contents was evidenced by his conversation concerning them, which showed that he had incorporated not only the ideas but the language clothing them. His memory was so retentive that by simply reading a poem or other piece he could repeat it verbatim, or report, with great accuracy, a lecture or sermon.

His brief but interesting life was terminated at Southwick, Mass., by dysentery, the prevalent epidemic of that season, in that region, to which many loved friends and relatives fell victims.

3860. 2. CHARLES-ALEXANDER, b. 8 Aug. 1842; d. 23 June, 1856, Paris, France.

On the 22d February, 1854, he invited several American and English youth, residing in Paris, to unite with some thirty girls and boys of his French acquaintance, in the celebration of the anniversary of the birth-day of Washington.

He gave a historical address in French, and subsequently in English, which was very acceptable. One English and several French boys contributed to the literary entertainment.

The next year, in keeping with his patriotic impulses, some of those February guests and other Americans, were invited to meet at the Cemetery Picpus, on the extreme eastern limits of the city, the burial-place of Lafayette; where addresses were delivered by Mr. McMurray, of New York, and others.

His father then made a few remarks, which were reported by Dr. Turner, correspondent of a Philadelphia paper, as follows:—

The historic reminiscences of the struggle for American Independence, of which this day is the anniversary, enkindles the joyous glow of gratitude to our Patriot Fathers.

Though our great, powerful, and progressive nation may be slow to advance to the full realization of that liberty which Washington and Lafayette ardently sought, yet, the seeds of true patriotism, based upon humanity entire, have found in America a fertile soil. Her youth are exercised in pure and happy sentiments of gratitude, and march with firm resolve to develop, multiply, and perpetuate the blessings transmitted through heroic deeds.

Instead of assisting in the usual celebrations of this day, in our native land, we visit the tomb of him who, in his youth, contributed to support and defend the cradle of liberty in the United States.

The Dr. then related a little family incident, embracing examples in three generations, deemed as average exponents of a nation's gratitude. He said that, when his father was twelve years old, his young heart was filled with admiration for the generous stranger who brought relief to struggling humanity, in the dark days of adversity. Past forty years later, when the son had attained the age of twelve, he was permitted to extend a hand to our "Nation's Guest," and bear on his hat the symbolic expression of a grateful people:—"WELCOME LAFAYETTE,"—and now it was his privilege to bring his own son, aged twelve years, to gaze upon the humble monument of Lafayette, and contemplate, with others, the virtues and labors of our patriot fathers.

Among the noble qualities for which the speaker thought the name of Lafayette should be especially venerated, was his generous philanthropy, which led him to sacrifice a considerable portion of his estate, for the freedom of a large number of slaves. Does not the present position of our beloved country require an application of the like self-denying principle?

The party proceeded to Passy, in the western part of the city, to visit the former residence of Franklin. The house was formerly very ample, and the grounds very extensive. Within a few years, a street has been opened through a corner of it, and the building re-constructed, so that its general aspect is somewhat changed. It is at present occupied by an educational institution, and the proprietors, through their deference and profound respect for the character and talents of America's diplomatist and philosopher, have retained, in its former position, the lightning rod which Franklin had placed there, the first one ever erected in France.

We copy the following obituary from the New York Evangelist :

“DIED.—In Paris, France, June 23, 1856, Charles-Alexander Holton, aged 13 years and 10 1-2 months, son of Dr. D-P. Holton, of New York city, then residing in Paris:

He had suffered from an affection of the hip joint, seven and a half years. During small portions of that long period, his pains were excruciating, with long intervals of little or no suffering. In his suffering, he maintained a patience, resignation, and hope, which contributed much to his physical force and moral character, and rendered him peculiarly beloved by those around him.

Shortly before he died, he requested of his father, that when dead, and until the return of his parents to America, his remains might be allowed to occupy the family vault of Mr. Lenormant, (Professor of Archæology in the College of France, whose pupil he had for some time been, and to whom he was much attached) and eventually lie beside those of his brother, in Southwick. A few moments before he expired, he sent his message to his friends in America: ‘Say to my friends at home how much I loved them; that I loved them on my death-bed. Let them be consoled in my death.’

MESSRS EDITORS.—In sending to your paper the above brief obituary, from the New York Evangelist, permit me to add that it may not be improper to append to it the following letter to his little cousin, written only a few months before his death. This letter, though adapted to the capacity of the child to whom it is written, is still indicative not only of the natural ease with which he wrote, but also of the kindly feeling, and the piety of his life.

P. M. F.

PARIS, 1st Jan. 1856.

DEAR ELLA:—There were once two brothers who loved each other very much indeed. The eldest was about 9, and the youngest about 6 years old. The eldest was a very good boy, very much advanced for his age, a very good brother and son. The younger, was not so far advanced: indeed, he had hardly commenced going to school. He was not as studious as his brother, who would often study for hours without any intermission. They had great pleasure in visiting their friends and relations in the country. They had several uncles and aunts. One of their uncles was the teacher of a school about a mile from their aunt's home. He was a very good uncle, and sought every opportunity to make them happy. He loved them more than do the generality of uncles.

One New Year's day, the brothers were sent, for the first time, to their uncle's school. They enjoyed it very much, for the scenes were very new to them, and besides, they liked the ride in the sleigh with their uncle. When it was about four o'clock, p.m., their father came in a sleigh, and told the two brothers to come with him to see a present which their aunt had received. He told them the present had a delicate machinery in it, and it made a noise—tic-tac, tic-tac, continually, without being wound up. The brothers thought it was a clock, a watch, or something like one. Their father said it was not so: and when they arrived home, he directed them to go into a certain room where they would see it, saying: 'Touch it but gently, and make no noise, lest you disturb its harmonious actions.' So in they went, wondering what they should find, and what it could be. They looked around and saw on a sofa—what? They indeed saw this beautiful machinery which went tic-tac, tic-tac, and it was not a clock. It was a little new-born child, feeble, helpless, wrapped in swaddling clothes, on which the mother sweetly smiled. Then the enigma was solved. All were happily enjoying this New Year's gift.

Now Ella, you may think that this story is only an invention of mine. But it is not so. All the persons connected in it were your intimate friends. The two brothers were D. Pliny and myself; the good uncle, uncle M.*; and the delicate machinery was Miss Ella, for whom I wish many happy New Years' and successions of birthday anniversaries. Although a wide ocean now separates us, I hope to be able yet to spend New Year's with you as I did the first of January, 1849. Around you were grandmother, your father and mother, our good friend M., uncle M., uncle S., aunt Lavinia, my father and mother, D. Pliny and myself, enjoying a happy and pleasant New Year. But there were two there who then spent their last New Year's on earth—aunt Lavinia and D. Pliny. We can only hope to see them again in heaven. The remembrance of these changes suffices to assure us of the uncertainty of life, and of the certainty of death. But we must always be prepared to meet death without fear, and let it not come upon us unprepared. Believe me as ever,

Your very affectionate cousin,

CHARLES-ALEX. HOLTON.

ANECDOTE OF AN AMERICAN.

The Abeille Imperiale tells a story about an American who lately died in Paris, which possesses a singular interest as a demonstration of American character; and it is related as such by the journal in question. Your correspondent knew the parties and the circumstance related by the Abeille, and can thus confirm their truth. A boy, or rather a young man, for he was one of those premature children whose brains outrun their body, had sat for two years under the instruction of one of the lecturers of the Sorbonne, cold in manner, but decorous and unusually attentive to the words of the Professor. In Paris, in modern times, a Professor is no longer what he was in the centuries that are past; he no longer is the companion, the counsellor, and the friend of his pupils; he is but a hired instrument, who, for so much a year, appears once a day from behind a screen in the bottom of his lecture room, lectures an hour to whomsoever he sees before him, and then retires behind the screen again, no more to be seen till the lecture hour of the following day. He thus knows absolutely nothing of the condition, the sympathies, the tastes or the sentiments of his class; and on the other hand the class know almost as little of him. They know his name, and if he has celebrity, his history; they know the doctrines which he teaches and that is all. But even under circumstances so little sympathetic, strange affiliations are sometimes formed, and this is exactly what occurred with the boy who has just died. For a few weeks the Professor had observed the absence of his pale, intellectual, and attentive student—for he was the most remarkable personage of his class. At the end of that time he was waited upon at his residence by a gentleman who sent in his card and desired an interview. The Professor repaired to the parlor, where he found a middle-aged man, cold, dignified, and reserved, who commenced by telling him that he was the father of one of his pupils, who had just died, and who had left a request in dying which concerned the Professor, and which he had come to name. The Professor divined at once that it was the attentive American pupil that was dead, and desired to know the request of the dying boy. The father replied that it was the wish of himself as well as that of his dead son, that his body should be taken to America for burial; but since it must necessarily remain some time in France, before their family could make arrangements to leave for home, the boy had said to his father that he desired to be placed in the vault of the Professor, in the midst of the Professor's family. He said that his teacher had inspired him with a profound love and esteem; a feeling of sympathy had sprung up in his breast for him, and he thought his request would be granted. The teacher was a kind-hearted man, and these words from a dead pupil, and one who had always been undemonstrative, produced a powerful effect on him, and bursting into tears, he embraced the father and granted the request, with a heart full of gratitude for the affection which his strange pupil had shown him.—Translated from the French journal before-named.

3861. 3. FANNIE-MIRIAM, b. 23 Oct. 1852; died at New York, of diphtheria, 20 May, 1859.

With her mother she sailed from New York, 26 Aug. 1854, for Havre, France, to meet her father and her brother Charles-Alexander, who had been some time in Paris, attending lectures at the Garden of Plants, the Sorbonne, and the College of France.

In Paris she was accustomed to associate chiefly with the French, and their language soon became to her as vernacular.

The last year of her residence there, her nurse speaking only German, the child easily acquired some facility in the use of that language, which, during the next year, (passed mostly in Berlin) became as her mother tongue. Subsequently she accompanied her parents to London to meet her aunt Miriam [3817], Mrs. Dr. Henry-Smith Brown.

Entering the steamer at Hamburg, she was surprised to hear the common sailors and most of the passengers speak English, which, while she understood, when heard, she had not, after her first three months' residence in Paris, spoken; but which she rapidly acquired during her stay in Great Britain; so that on her arrival in America she was about equally familiar with the three languages, French, German, and English.

From London she accompanied her parents with her uncle and aunt to Scotland, Ireland, France and Switzerland.

At Altorf the mother and daughter took public conveyance over the Alps to Italy, there to be met by the others of the party, after having completed a tour eastward including Vienna, Pesth-Buda and Venice. The party was reunited at Locarno, on Lake Maggiore. For an account of their visit to Florence, Genoa, Rome, Naples, Pompeii, Vesuvius, and other places in Italy the reader is referred to the PARSONS MEMORIAL.

She died 22 Feb. 1867, and her pastor prepared the following:

MRS. SOPHIA-E. APTED, daughter of Hiram and L. V. Cummings, died at the residence of her parents in Three Rivers.

She was born October 7th, 1843, in Onondaga Co., near Syracuse, in the State of N.Y. The first anniversary of her birth-day occurred upon Lake Erie, while the parents were en route for Michigan. They spent their first winter in the State at Hillsdale, but located the ensuing spring in St. Joseph county, where they have since resided. July 4th, 1861, she was married to William APTED, of Three Rivers. Soon after, yielding to her husband's conviction of duty, she gave him, a willing but costly offering to her country. He fell by the bullet of the enemy, April 10th, 1863, and now sleeps in a patriot soldier's grave in a cemetery connected with a Presbyterian Church, in Nashville, Tenn. During a series of religious meetings held by the Baptist Church during the winter of 1864-5, she became an humble and earnest follower of her Savior, and on Sabbath, Jan. 21st, 1865, she, with eight other converts, received the ordinance of baptism in the St. Joseph river, at the hands of him who, upon a recent winter Sabbath, laid her away in Christian burial to await the glorious resurrection of the saints. The sufferings of a long illness were borne with becoming Christian submission, not a murmur having been known to escape her lips, even during her greatest suffering. The desires of her heart seemed ever to have been "Lord! as thou wilt; when thou wilt." Her death was calm and peaceful, the last strand in the thread of life breaking so gently that neither eye nor ear of love could detect the moment of dissolution. As a lark is sometimes seen to drop singing into her nest, so the frail spirit, soaring up into heaven, went doubtless singing with Paul, "I have fought the good fight. I have finished my course, I have kept the faith and henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, will give me at that day."

Her exemplary Christian walk suggested the text, "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth," Second Epistle of John, 4, which was improved in a funeral discourse by her pastor in the Baptist Church, Sabbath morning, 24th inst., before a very large concourse of friends and acquaintances, present to sympathize and participate in the solemnities of the occasion.

On Wednesday morning, Mar. 15, she arose and performed some light domestic duties, but was taken with a chill which continued till noon, when a physician was summoned, who arrived about 3 P.M. She asked the doctor to tell her candidly what he thought of her case. He replied that "death was even now at the door; he did not think she could survive many hours, though she might possibly live a day or two." She received the intelligence with calmness, but said she would like to see her children once more. A messenger was sent immediately to Camanche for her sons Homer and Seymour. She breathed her last about 11 o'clock on Thursday morning. After the doctor informed her that she could not live, she wrote with her own weak hands: "Let no eulogy be pronounced over this weak, sinful body; give God all the glory." She requested for a funeral text, Nahum I, 7, and designated the hymns she desired to have sung at her burial.

She married 1 Jan. 1812, Elijah CARPENTER, b. 8 Nov. 1787, Clarendon, Rutland Co., Vt., son of Jabez and Mary (——) of Seconk, Ct., aft. of Moriah, N.Y. He died 5 Apr. 1864, Le Claire, Scott Co., Iowa, having removed from Essex Co., N.Y., to Le Claire, in 1850. He was a farmer. 1876, Camanche, Iowa.

Children, five of whom were born in Essex Co., N.Y., and one in Scott Co., Iowa:

4016. 1. MINDY-ABIGAIL^o, b. 12 May, 1836; m. Le Claire, 22 Feb. 1852, Josiah-Bradley Chamberlin, b. 4 Mar. 1828, Tioga Co., N.Y., son of Josiah-Bradley and Malinda (Smith) of Tioga county.

He enlisted, 15 Aug. 1862, in 20th Iowa Regiment, and was in Missouri and Arkansas (participating in the battle of Prairie Grove, Dec. 7, 1862), till May, 1863, when he joined Grant's forces and aided in the capture of Vicksburg. After the surrender of that stronghold, he went to New Orleans, and from thence accompanied Gen. Brook's expedition to Texas. August 22, 1864, he was with Gen. Granger at the reduction of Fort Morgan, near Mobile. In Sept. 1864, went with Gen. Steele to Arkansas. Returned to New Orleans in January, 1865, and, in February, accompanied Gen. Steele in the expedition and siege of Blakely, which was taken 9 Apr. 1865. He was discharged 27 July, 1865.

Some incidents connected with the military history of Mr. Chamberlin, showing his praiseworthy, self-denying efforts for those he loved, we consider worthy to be held in remembrance by his posterity, and worthy to find a place in history, as an example of what ingenuity and industry, prompted by conjugal and paternal affection, can accomplish under adverse circumstances. To this end we take pleasure in presenting to him one of these volumes, bound in a suitable manner, to form a lasting memorial to his heroic devotion.

While at New Orleans, in October, 1863, he received the sad intelligence that his wife had lost her eyesight. His regiment soon after embarked for Texas, and, after stopping a few weeks at Brazos, proceeded to Mustang Island, where a small rebel garrison was surprised and captured, and the 20th Iowa Regiment left to guard Arkansas Pass. There, his great anxiety for his wife's restoration to sight prompted him to discover, if possible, some means of accomplishing the desired object. His way seemed hedged up—his monthly pay, $13.00, was but a mere pittance. He could not get discharged; he could not mortgage his bounty; yet his faith was strong that his wife's sight might be restored, if proper medical skill could be secured. While thus tossed with anxiety and looking in vain for help, he discovered that a small black nut found on the beach could be made into rings for mementos of Texan army life (pleasanter memorials we think than those made of the enemy's bones), and he went to whittling them out and selling them for twenty-five cents apiece. In a few days he improved on his first invention by inlaying them with small shells, being thus enabled to increase the price to fifty cents each. After a time he was fortunate enough to get a little silver coin, which, being inserted, added still more to their value. The machinery employed consisted of an old three-cornered file which he borrowed, a pair of old shears, a chisel made of his darning-needle with the eye ground off, and a pair of pincers made of a piece of wire flattened at both ends. With this outfit his business prospects brightened, the market for his wares increased, and on the next pay-day he was able to send home $100, and the next following, $200. After leaving Texas his nut timber failed him and he employed his leisure moments in sewing for his comrades, earning with one needle, which he took from home, and which he presented to his daughter on his return, some $40.

He subsequently raised over $200, by making rings from rubber buttons, when he could procure them. These sums, in addition to his army pay, enabled him to procure a course of treatment for his wife which was entirely successful.

The compilers of this volume regret having mislaid the copy of a most appropriate address made by Miss Phebe-Helen^o Carpenter at the family gathering of her uncle Joel^o Holton, May, 1847, seven months before his death at Westminster, 10 Dec. 1847. This family gathering was concluded by a visit to Apple Oven Ledge, on Temperance Mount [See L on Map of Westminster, p. 323], where had formerly been organized the first known temperance society in America on the pledge of total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks. [See serial number 3814]. The fiftieth anniversary of this temperance organization was held 18 June, 1872. Miss Carpenter's former co-operation in many temperance and school celebrations constitutes her title for having here copied from the Bellows Falls Times a report of this Temperance Jubilee:

WISCONSIN APPLES AND THE PICNIC ON OVEN LEDGE.

On the 18th of June, 1872, was a reunion of descendants of the first settlers of Westminster, on the "Old Apple Oven Ledge," some two miles west of the village, near where the pioneers erected their first saw-mill, which they kept running night and day. The first settlers were a hardy race, and after the labors of the day, youth of the street would occasionally go to the Old Oven and enjoy a bake of apples and game; and possibly in harmony with the music of the mill or waterfall would sing of the good old times, when, five generations before, their Puritan and Pilgrim fathers landed on Plymouth or Salem rocks.

At this reunion, met friends from the West and South in grateful memory of the sacrifices made by their forefathers on the Atlantic coast, and subsequently, in the valley of the Connecticut.

The special promptings to the meeting this day, may be found in the fact that some youth of Westminster, just fifty years before, here took a pledge to abstain from all intoxicating drinks.

About 11 A.M., the joyful party assembled—old and young—witnessed the drilling and aided in hammering the rocks around the pinnacle, preparatory to filling boxes for transporting portions of Temperance Mount, to aid in the formation of symbolic cabinets.

The exercises were continued by all taking seats on natural rocks forming nearly a circle around the oven, a natural amphitheatre. Here were recounted the events of the settlements of Hartford 1636, Northampton 1655, Northfield 1673, and Westminster about 1750. Some incidents were stated relating to the apple oven, when the party retired for refreshments to a grove a few rods distant, where the youth volunteered pieces on temperance, true independence, union, etc. Rev. S-O. Morris, a "veteran temperance man," suitably addressed the assembly. After which some verses were sung by old and young. In the chorus none joined with more delight than did Mrs. Bethia (Holton) White, over ninety years of age, of the fifth generation from Dea. William¹ Holton, of Hartford and Northampton; and daughter of Joel⁵ Holton, one of the first settlers of Westminster. At this stage of the exercises were brought forward some Wisconsin apples, hot from the old apple oven. Soon, the drilling, some twelve rods from the oven, having been completed, the picnickers retired at a suitable distance to witness the blast. Thus terminated a happy jubilee of the temperance pledge.

SUNG BY THE YOUTH OF WESTMINSTER, VERMONT, AT THE TEMPERANCE JUBILEE
ON OVEN LEDGE, JUNE 18, 1872.

In eighteen hundred twenty-two,
At Westminster, Vermont,
Some youth proposed a work to do—
All pledged on Temp'rance Mont.

CHORUS.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge
They took the temp'rance pledge.
The temp'rance pledge, the temp'rance pledge,
Upon the Oven Ledge.

Prospective good to self and kind
(From eighteenth day of June)
With pledge and deeds they hoped to find Wealth, peace and joy in tune.

CHO.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge, etc.

From all intoxicating drink
They pledged their life entire;
And strove that all with them should think,
And to good deeds aspire.

CHO.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge, etc.

These fifty years have proved the truth
That water is the best
For old, for young, for hopeful youth, —Experience is test.

CHO.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge, etc.

War with the traffic vile we wage
By emblem cabinet,
And tokens from the Oven Ledge
With grace and beauty set.

CHO.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge, etc.

By symbols of their principles
In just position placed,
Hewn from the mountain's pinnacles
On hearts let truth be traced.

. CHO.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge, etc.

In faith and hope they sought God's aid
A temp'rance life to lead.
Let us th' example thus displayed
Improve. 'Twas early seed.

CHORUS.—Yes, early seed ! you're safe in hedge
Of that old temp'rance pledge.
The temp'rance pledge, the temp'rance pledge
Upon the Oven Ledge.

In us now grow the temp'rance seed
Erst sown on Oven Ledge;
Come forth in lofty will and deed,
Sustain the temp'rance pledge.

CHO.—'Twas then upon the Oven Ledge
They took the temp'rance pledge.
The temp'rance pledge, the temp'rance pledge
Upon the Oven Ledge.

SYMBOLIC CABINET SOCIETY OF WESTMINSTER, VERMONT.

Whereas, the evils of intemperance are still prevalent in community, and agencies are yet at work, tending to the harm of our otherwise prosperous Union, tending to lead the old and young into habits destructive of their prosperity and happiness, and, whereas: the love of unrighteous gain in the traffic of intoxicating drinks, is the continuing cause of this great evil,

Therefore, we, youth of Westminster, in the State of Vermont, not yet by age qualified to vote, and thus legislate against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks, do, by hereunto subscribing our names, pledge ourselves to abstain from the use of intoxicating drinks and declare our purpose to work according to our several powers to secure the abandonment of the said traffic by means of the votes of those who have the power to legislate thereon,

And as initiative of our work in this cause of humanity, we do hereby form ourselves and our associates, who may hereafter subscribe, into an organization known and designated as the Symbolic Cabinet Society of Westminister, Vermont, whose object is to suppress the traffic in, and the manufacture of intoxicating drinks.

To secure the systematic and continued good working of our benevolent association, we adopted the following:

CONSTITUTION.

1. The society shall be designated the Symbolic Cabinet Society of Westminister, Vermont.

2. Any girl or boy of Westminister may become a member by pledging himself* to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks, subscribing this constitution and paying ten cents into the treasury thereof; and may continue a member by keeping the pledge and paying annually thereafter ten cents.

3. The object of this society is, and shall be, to suppress the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks; and to this end will meet on the first Saturday of each month, to extemporize or hear read or spoken in prose or verse, prepared discussions, dialogues, or essays, on the blessings of temperance and the evils of intemperance, also to set forth by painting or any forms of hand-work, reasons, arguments, or other persuasives for the total abandonment and suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks, particularly by the preparation of symbolic cabinets for mutual exchange between ourselves and the youth of other towns on either side of the Atlantic, who may have united for purposes similar to our own; signifying by said cabinet that the sale of sand would be a less evil in the vender and a greater good to the buyer than that of intoxicating drink—in short, would be true economy in the premises individually and socially.†

The officers of the society elected annually, shall be a president, three vice presidents, a recording secretary, a corresponding secretary, a librarian and custodian, a treasurer, and an executive committee, on which committee the forenamed officers may serve as members ex-officio.

* The word himself above is employed as equivalent to himself or herself, one word as a substitute for three.

† The National Veteran Temperance Corps, composed of gentlemen and ladies who have without exception abstained from intoxicating beverages for one third of a century and upwards—office at 18 Cooper Institute, New York city—solicits that Symbolic Cabinet Societies may severally contribute a box six or twelve inches, more or less, in length or breadth, and from two to four inches in depth, containing labelled specimens of natural or artificial objects, and sand-bags duly numbered, and of a size about that of a man's thumb. Enveloped in the sand within the bag there should be rolls of paper having written thereon temperance mottoes and arguments in prose or verse.

Raising the cover of each box, hinged or detached, let the recipient find a pamphlet written or printed in phonographic or heterotypic letters, showing copies of the various temperance essays that may be compactly rolled and enclosed in the sand-bags; so that without rending any symbolic sack its literary contents may be known on reading from the pamphlet the articles corresponding to the number as found in the sack.

We recognize the law of futh in and obedience to the principles of temperance, and recommend that each society use for its exchange cabinets, rocks, sand, or soil, on which it was organized.

Let the honored sand of Plymouth be exchanged for the patriotic soil of Bunker Hill; the golden sands of California for the pioneer soil of Maine; the symbolic specimens from Tahawia of the Adirondacs for the temperance tokens from Mount Shasta of the Sierra Nevadas; the wave-beaten sands of the Northern lakes for those of the Southern gulf—each society pledging to the others perpetual devotion to the principles of temperance, and to the best interests of humanity.

EXCHANGE OR GIFT OF CABINETS.—It is proposed that each society should make for itself a symbolic cabinet, as above, and then, similar ones for exchange with other societies already formed; and for gifts to persons, schools, and missionary stations—that new Symbolic Cabinet Societies may spring and flourish, severally acting well their part, that temperance may prevail in all lands.

Symbolic Cabinets designed for exhibition at the proposed celebration on Tahawia, 5 Aug. 1878, and ultimately for exchange, gift, or return, should have on the box, as also on its cover and pamphlet, clearly written instructions as to the wish of the sender.

The National Veteran Temperance Corps volunteers to become the medium of receiving from all quarters these contributions, and to forward the several cabinets according to their respective labelled instructions, and thereof make due report.

The several officers shall perform the duties usually pertaining to corresponding officers in parliamentary usage; they shall hold office till the annual meeting or till others are elected to fill their places. Meetings of the society may be called by the recording secretary, at the written request of four members of the society.

WESTMINSTER, Vt., June 18, 1872.

Le Claire, 11 Mar. 1852, Elizabeth-Mary Hart, b. 19 Feb. 1832, Lebanon, Warren Co., Ohio, d. of Daniel and Elizabeth (Gaskill) of Le Claire. He enlisted as quarter-master sergeant, 6 Aug. 1862, in Co. K, Capt. Byram, 20th Reg. Iowa Inf., and accompanied the regiment from "Camp Kirkwood," near Clinton, Clinton, Co., Iowa, Sept. 1st, encamping at "Camp Heron," Davenport, Iowa, until Sept. 5th, when they moved on to "Benton Barracks," St. Louis, thence, by cars, to Rolla, marching soon after to Springfield, where he became quite indisposed, but continued with the regiment to Cassville, Mo., then on to Osage Springs, where he was taken to the hospital; was soon after removed to Cassville Hospital, and, several days later, to General Hospital, where he died. He was a farmer. Removed, in 1849, from Moriah, N.Y., to Le Claire, Iowa.

4050. POLLY^o, [3812] (Miriam^o (Winslow) Parsons, Thomas^o, Thomas^o, Kenelm^o, Kenelm^o, Kenelm^o,) b. 11 Apr. 1797, Westminster, Vt.; d. 24 Nov. 1876, Guilford, Vt.; m. Moriah, N.Y., 17 June, 1819, Augustus COOK, b. 12 Mar. 1792, Weathersfield, Vt., son of Reuben and Sarah (Blakesley) of Weathersfield. He died 23 Aug. 1874, Guilford, Vt. [Reuben Cook was in the Revolutionary War, and helped to build the fort at Crown Point. Served in Western New York, near Oswego river, probably under Bradstreet. He endured many hardships, suffering so much at one time from hunger, that he gladly devoured a snake. He however lived to the advanced age of 92 years, dying in 1826, at Weathersfield, Vt.]

She passed most of her childhood with her sister Phebe [3814] in Westminster, Vt., and attended a school on Sawtelle Hill, near Holton's Mills, a few rods eastward from the deep cuttings made to conduct the Averill into the Holton Brook. [See map of Westminster, page 323, figure 5.]

This school was kept by her sister Abigail' [4005], [See also Parsons Memorial.] and subsequently by Miss Jemima Holton, and numbered some twenty children. In process of years, the volume of water diminishing lessened the value of the mill-privileges; and the lumber interest having been measurably exhausted in the vicinity, the settlement decreased in numbers, and the school children joined with the others of their district at the "Red School House," near the bridge-road leading to Walpole, N.H. It was in this latter house [See map of W., page 323, figure 10.] that Horace Wells, the discoverer of ether as an anæsthetic agent in surgical operations, received his first school lessons. [Chloroform and other articles now in use to create insensibility or to felicitously modify impressions otherwise painful, are only later substitutes for the discovery of the said red school house a-b-c-darian.] It was here that Horace Wells and the compiler of this memorial had together their first school experiences.

She (Polly' Parsons) witnessed the "Freshet," the first of the two mentioned under serial number 3814. She went with her parents, 1810, to Moriah, Essex Co., N.Y., where her father's house was burned in 1811. Her wisdom, self-possession, and force were remarkably manifest in her efforts—alone—to extinguish the flames, and in her removing the most of the furniture, when, from the failure of water, the saving of the house became impossible. Among the articles rescued by her was a pocket-book, made by her aunt, Phebe^e (Parsons) Lane, which was borne by her father in the expedition through Maine, and at the attack on Quebec, and which is now in the keeping of a great grand-daughter, Mrs. Emily^a (Fisher) Plumley, wife of Rev. Gardiner-Spring Plumley, of Metuchen, N.J. [See 3976].

From her letter dated 22 Apr. 1864, we make the following extracts:

"Our son Mark-Henry has not been heard from since March 1. He was with Kilpatrick; was one of the picked men to go for the release of the prisoners in Richmond. Our son Benjamin has re-enlisted for another term, and perhaps will never return. It sometimes seems as if God was punishing the North for their ingratitude, and for their not doing justice to the colored soldiers who are fighting so bravely in defence of freedom.

I am no politician; but can feel for my bleeding country, and do think it is the duty of all to use their influence, as far as in them lies, to put an end to this unholy war, and to attend to party afterwards. Last fall I wrote a recipe for making copper-heads. It was printed in the Bellows Falls Times. I afterwards gave a remedy which was printed in the same paper:

Take ten grains of good common sense, half the quantity of forbearance, six scruples of candor, half an ounce of honest integrity, one ounce of patriotism, two ounces of love of country, liberty and free institutions, four ounces of gratitude to our noble ancestors who periled their lives to obtain the blessings of freedom, the same to our brave officers and men now in the field to defend our rights (if need be, with their lives). Mix and boil over the hot coals of indignation for our country's wrongs, till one-third is consumed; cool with the soft breath of sympathy for the down-trodden and oppressed. Apply the plaster to the heart.

N.B. Be sure not to remove it, till of itself it comes off. If this fails, the case must be desperate, and the patient had better breathe for a few months the invigorating air of Fort Warren or Fort Lafayette—or use hemp.

The following obituary notice appeared at the time of her death:

"Departed this life the 12th inst., Mrs. Achsah Cook, wife of Dr.
 Charles-E. Kells, and a member of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of this city.

This simple announcement speaks of no ordinary bereavement. She was a Christian in the true sense of the term, one that loved the Savior and walked daily with God. She was ever ready to assist the suffering and the destitute. She went about doing good, as she had time and opportunity; but her family was peculiarly the province of her richest influence. Her children she regarded as loans from God—the lambs the Savior had entrusted to her care; hence she sought to lead them heavenward. As she was passing away she bade her husband and children farewell, and charged them to meet her in heaven.

Often during her last hours on earth did she say, 'Come blessed Jesus and take me to thyself.' Amid great suffering, there was no murmuring, no repining, but a longing to depart and be with Christ which is far better. And so she passed away from earth, and went home to the Savior she loved. Her memory will ever be cherished by those who loved her here, for those who knew her best loved her most. 'Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.'"

At the solicitation of the compiler of this memorial, the parents of Sergeant Cook loaned the large package of letters in their possession, written by him during his three years service, presenting a record of his personal experience.

From a portion of these we have made extracts, which, showing the every day life of the volunteer soldier, will be of interest to his friends, and to the descendants of Deacon Benjamin¹ Parsons, whose name he bore; and to those of KENELM¹ WINSLOW, of whose lineage was his grandmother, MIRIAM (WINSLOW) PARSONS.

CAMP LYON, GEORGETOWN, D. C., Aug. 11, 1861.

My Dear Parents;

Knowing that you will feel very anxious to learn something of our proceedings, I take the first opportunity I have had for writing since I left Camp Baxter, to let you know, that I am safe and sound among my friends, and at no great distance from those who hold for us no good will. I suppose a brief description of our journey will not be unacceptable to you. . . . We left Camp Baxter, Wednesday morning; at nine in the evening reached New Haven, where we took the boat for New York. From New York we crossed to Jersey City, where we had good quarters furnished us. Here we received our canteens and five rounds of ammunition. After we were settled, a few of us took a turn around the city. We were greeted at almost every corner; the little boys and girls would run out, ask us to what regiment we belonged, shake hands with us, and bid us good bye.

At six o'clock we took the cars for Philadelphia. A crowd had collected at the Jersey City depot to see us off, and all through the city, the streets were lined with waving hats and handkerchiefs, and as long as daylight lasted we found a crowd at every station where we stopped. At Philadelphia free entertainment was furnished. About four o'clock in the morning, Friday 9 Aug. we arrived in Baltimore. It was dark and very warm, a light rain falling. We took up our two and a half miles march through the city in pretty good spirits. Arriving at the Washington depot, we immediately took the cars for that city.

We staid in Washington until about noon; then took up our march for Camp Lyon.

We are in Georgetown, but not on the heights; they lie between us and Washington—we are on an eminence which rises from the Potomac river about a hundred rods distant.

We can see a great distance into Virginia, the same as you from Westminster, Vermont, can see across the Connecticut river into New Hampshire.

There is a N. Y. Reg't immediately back of us, and a company of cavalry near them; there is also an artillery company.

In front of the Maine Reg't they have a battery erected, which would sweep the bridge if an attack were made in that direction; and to the right of our camp, on a hill which rises above us, they have another one, which mounts three large guns. These guns would range into the hills on the opposite side of the river, and prevent the enemy from planting their batteries there—they can also be brought to bear on the bridge, or to sweep the large plains in front of them.

Our pickets are sent across the river, and to a distance three miles into Virginia. We have, also, on the hills where the battery is, entrenchments and breast-works for two or three regiments. In case of an attack we should, of course, retreat to these.

This is considered a very important point, as the reservoir which furnishes Washington city its only supply of water is within a few rods, and the aqueduct has to be guarded.

The report is that the Vermont 2nd is soon to join us. Our camp is headquarters for some three or four regiments, and Col. Smith is acting Brigadier General, and will probably be promoted to that post. He is a smart man and an excellent officer.

Yours affectionately,

BENJAMIN-PARSONS COOK,
Co. A, 3d Reg., Vermont Vol's,

CAMP LYON, GEORGETOWN, D. C., September 5, 1861.

Dear Parents: We are now over in Virginia. Our camp is deserted. I am sent back to Washington on business by the colonel, and think I will write a line while close to the post-office. We were ordered over last Tuesday, 3 September, and since then troops have been pouring in, until we have about 35,000 men in the vicinity of Chain Bridge. We expect an attack. If it does not come, we shall advance. We are eight miles from Fairfax Court House * * *

Yours affectionately,

B-P. C.

ADVANCE CAMP OF THE CHAIN BRIDGE FORCE, 1861 Sept. 8th.

. . . . I must give you a description of my quarters, or house. It consists of four crotches driven into the ground, with poles across the top, and a covering of cedar boughs, forming a very pleasant shelter.

We are now occupying a very strong position. The first night we came here, a large party was set at work in the woods. They chopped all night, and in the morning a Wisconsin regiment armed with picks and shovels set about throwing up an earth work, and the work has been continued, till now we have a very large fortification.

It is on the highest point of land in this vicinity, and the work extends around the top, so as to leave the peak of the hill in the center of the fort. In this manner it commands the wide plains on every side, as well as the side hills opposite us.

It is built in this manner: first an embankment is thrown up just high enough to allow the saucy looking muzzles of the rifled cannon and large brass pieces to send their ball and shell over the top, the artillery men being in rear of this or in the centre. Then an outer and larger circle is made by ditches dug several feet wide, and deep enough, so that, the attacking troops could not easily cross them to climb the higher bank and take the battery.

We are in sight of Arlington and Georgetown Heights. A few weeks since a man belonging to Company K of this regiment was found asleep on his post, while on picket guard. He had his trial at a general court martial held in Washington, and the other night his sentence was read before the regiment and tomorrow he is to be shot. It seems hard that a young man who has volunteered in his country's cause must die an ignominious death for a crime so light; but the lives of thousands often depend upon the faithful performance of small duties.

Perhaps you may remember to have heard some time since, of a wealthy mill owner of the west, going to war as captain of a company of men, all of whom had been for years in his employ; and that he was accompanied by his daughter. I have had an opportunity of seeing her several times,—and very pretty she is—dressed in a style somewhere between the Bloomer and the Zouave, walking with her canteen strung across her shoulder, and her revolver and bowie-knife in her belt. She creates considerable admiration among the troops.

Sept. 12. At seven and a half, several thousand of our troops were ordered into the enemy's country, the Vermont 3d in advance. When we had gone two miles, our company, with one or two others were thrown out to the right and left of the main body, as skirmishers. We went in this manner about three miles, when we, (the skirmishers), came to a halt and secreted ourselves.

A little after noon, we were ordered to join the main body, and on our way heard, at our right, heavy firing. We took a double-quick and joined our friends when the whole column took the road—this time with several regiments ahead of us. As the column advanced the balls began to grow thicker, and the shells to burst in the air. For a while they all went far over our heads; but as we moved forward, the rebels began to get the range, and things grew serious—the shells and balls striking in our immediate vicinity; and as they came ploughing over our heads, cutting through the trees by the roadside, breaking and splintering the rails of the fences, our heads would come a little nearer the earth than nature intended to have them—thus, once, myself and others standing near me escaped the effects of a shell which came in our direction. Our company came off unhurt. The Well's River company, which was behind us, was not so fortunate. A shell bursting in their midst, about one foot from the ground, killed two and wounded eight. Other companies lost some in killed and wounded. Our artillery was soon on hand, and taking their position opened fire, and soon the rebel battery was silenced.

Sept. 30. Falls Church is now in possession of the federal troops. We went out the night before last. The rebels had evacuated it, all the fighting we had was between two of our own regiments, who fired into each other—eight killed and twenty wounded. There was heavy firing in the direction of General Banks' division this morning—probably a skirmish there

The Fourth and Fifth Vermont regiments are here. I saw Pierce, Ellis and Butterworth from Westminster, and others that I knew. They told me that my brother, Mark-Henry, had enlisted. I am almost sorry, not because he is not needed, but because I do not believe he is "tough enough to stand it." We have a powerful and stubborn foe to contend with, and government needs more men in the field: but they need to be of good constitution.

Dear Parents,

Oct. 11, 1861.

. . . We are now occupying a position still further advanced. I wrote you of the taking of Falls Church; our brigade was not left in possession of it, but was sent back to our old camp. Day before yesterday, we made another advance on Lewinsville and Prospect Hill, both of which we now hold.

Yesterday I went to a farm house and bought my canteen full of milk, and two pumpkin pies.

The rebels move back as fast as we move up.

The country around here is more level than it is on the river; the land generally is under cultivation; there are many nice dwellings, and there prevails a general appearance of industry and thrift.

I do not know the exact number of troops with us—probably from twelve to fifteen thousand. The Vermont regiments are all here. Mr. Blood, of Putney, just called on me. I believe all our Westminster boys are well except James Ellis.

I think I told you in my last to direct simply to Company A, 3rd Regiment, Vermont Volunteers. It is not necessary to add the camp—that is changed so often, you can not keep track of it. Your last was directed to Camp Lyon. There has been no such camp since we crossed the river.

Love to all, from your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 17 October, 1861.

My Dear Parents,

Although I wrote you only a few days ago, yet, having a little leisure, I drop a line to-day, thinking it may prove acceptable.

. . . The rebels continue to fall back as fast as we advance, and must be some six or seven miles from us, though their pickets and ours come pretty close to each other.

Our duty is somewhat arduous and the men show it plainly.

A number of our company are sick and the rest are pretty well worn out. Picket and guard duty must be done rain or shine. The pickets have to rise and form at two o'clock in the morning and start out so as to be all posted by daylight. They return to camp the next morning about 7 o'clock.

Every man in camp has to be under arms half-an-hour before daylight, and stand so one hour. This is to prevent surprise, though I think there is little danger of that.

From your son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, Oct. 23, 1861.

Dear Parents:

. . . . Things are growing more quiet here each day, and look less and less like a battle. It would be some satisfaction to know what are the plans of the war, but that is not our privilege. It looks at present as if "our folks" intended to do most of the fighting in the Gulf States.

We expect to make an advance movement within a few days. Our new recruits have arrived and have entered upon their military duties.

Your affectionate son,

B-P^r. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 5 Nov. 1861.

My Dear Parents:

I received your letter last evening.

. . . . I went over on the 3d inst. to see Edward-A. and David-M. Holton. They appear to be enjoying themselves. . . . I must tell you what I have been doing this forenoon: making what we call a California Stove, formed by digging a trench in one corner of the tent, extending out under its side; and covering the same with flat stones—having at the outer end a barrel for a chimney. We then build a fire inside, which heats the stone and ground making us quite comfortable. We have a brigade drill every afternoon.

Your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 10 Nov. 1861.

My Dear Parents:

. . . . If you could look in upon us some evening and see us sitting on our blankets, a bright fire burning in one corner of the tent, some of us writing and others reading, you would find that there is at least one pleasant side to camp life; but the most pleasant of all is, when, like the experience of to-night, we have letters from our friends at home.

News from other sources creates in us anxiety for our troops—but not a doubt of our ultimate success.

Your son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 15 Nov., 1861.

Dear Parents:

I have to announce the sad news of the death of Milton Pierce and Ambrose Fairbrother. Milton died last night and Ambrose this morning. . . . I wrote to Mr. Pierce last Sunday, that Milton was much better, and assured them of his recovery, which will I fear, make his death more unexpected to them.

Captain Edward-A. and Sergeant David-May Holton went with me to-day to see their remains. It seems hard that Westminster boys are following each other so fast to the grave. I understand the 5th Vermont regiment have buried twenty-four during the short time they have been here.

Your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 24 Nov. 1861.

My Dear Parents:

. . . . You make inquiries in regard to the suffering of the soldiers here. I have no doubt there are a great many false reports circulated. There are those in every regiment who would like to make it appear that they are the greatest martyrs that ever lived, and, in their correspondence, every inconvenience, incident to a soldier's life, is so much enlarged upon as to make it appear like an actual hardship.

I have not known a case, where a sick man has been obliged to lie upon the ground after he was sick enough to go to the hospital. In every hospital I have visited, there has been some kind of frame raised up from the ground for each man to lie upon. The beds all have straw in them, and the amount of covering is, I think, sufficient. Some boxes, containing articles needed in this hospital, have been received from Vermont.

At present I do not know which regiment is most in need of the things you mention. They will be acceptable to either. I am glad to know that so much is being done. I see my cousins, Edward and David Holton, nearly every day.

We received our pay yesterday for two months. Judge Polland was on hand to take our money home for us; and, as I like this way of sending it, I gave him the sum of thirty dollars for you. You will find the receipt enclosed, which you will present at the Bank of Bellows' Falls, in about ten days from date. You will receive the money then.

This makes $83.00 I have saved since I enlisted; besides, the State owes me $28.00, making in all $111.00.

Your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, Nov. 29, 1861.

My Dear Parents:

Your token of remembrance was received the evening before Thanksgiving day. The barrel was opened, and the next day its contents of fowl and other provisions were gratefully spread for a social dinner with some of my soldier friends.

The boots, socks, mittens, and other articles of apparel, I found all right. I could not have more perfect fits, than are these gifts of my parents

To-day the talk is among the boys that we are going to Florida next month, under General Smith. Some are confident it is so; while the disbelieving ones laugh at them. . . .

Your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 5 Dec., 1861.

To Erastus-Holton Cook, Thetford, Vermont.

Dear Brother,

I was very glad to receive your kind letter of 30 Nov. I am glad Thanksgiving passed so pleasantly with you. Probably the joys of that day have not been so blended with real anxiety and concern for years. We, too, had a great many things for which to be thankful. Most of our company were enjoying pretty good health, and we tried to make the day appear as much like old times as possible. . . .

Your affectionate brother,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, 19 Dec., 1861.

Dear Parents,

I have waited for some time in expectation of a reply to my letters; but fear you have not received them.

Brother Erastus writes that my old employer, Mr. Pardee, of Mount Carmel Brass Factory, is captain in a Connecticut regiment. My health is good as usual; but it is sad to see how fast they are dying out of the 6th Regiment. Thirty men have already died, and many more are now sick.

Things look a little warlike in the papers of the morning. I think that if England was not distrustful of her neighbors, she would not hesitate to help the rebels; but if she does, a long and bloody war may be expected, which will extend to many of the nations of Europe.

Yours affectionately,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, VA., Jan. 28, 1862.

Dear Parents:

. . . . I went over to the Sixth Vermont Regiment the other day, but did not see Edward-A. and David-M. Holton. They were both sick in the hospital. I must go and see them as soon as I can. . . .

Your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP GRIFFIN, VA., 20 Feb. 1862.

Dear Parents:

. . . . Having taken a severe cold, with swelling in my face and ears, I have been in the hospital a while. Yesterday, I wanted to go to my company; but the Doctor would not allow it.

In another hospital David-M. Holton is sick with fever.

Your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

CAMP NEAR FLINT HILL, 13 MARCH, 1862.

You will see by my heading, that we have been on the move once more. Wednesday night, March 5th, we were ordered, at 2 o'clock, to march. It was dark and muddy. We came out about seven miles to Vienna for the purpose of guarding the workmen on the railroad which is being relaid, where the rebels tore it up last summer—this was farther out than we had before been.

After breakfast and an hour's rest, four companies, including our own, followed the track about two miles, to the place where the work was going on.

We were relieved on Friday morning by the 18th Mass. Regiment, when we returned to Vienna.

Sunday night at 12 o'clock, we were ordered to break camp at 4. As we started, it commenced raining; the mud was deep, still we jogged along, stopping occasionally to rest—for our loads were heavy, we having to carry our tents. We passed Vienna and came to this place, about two and a half miles from Vienna, or nine and a half from our old camp.

We all thought we were bound for Manassas, but presently orders came to pitch our tents, as Manassas was already occupied by our troops—that is what we think now; but of course we know nothing; a common soldier never knows. We are about two miles from Fairfax Court House, which is occupied by our troops.

The whole army of the Potomac is advanced. Yesterday General McClellan was at Fairfax. A rebel flag was brought in day before yesterday by a scouting party of Candy. . . .

Your Affectionate Son.

B-P. C.

17 March, 1862. CAMP NEAR ALEXANDRIA.

. . . . We left Flint Hill the morning of the 15th and marched to this place, a distance of 12 miles, under a heavy and continuous rain. At dark, our tents being erected, in the rain, I rolled my wet blanket around me and laid down in the mud to sleep. I slept soundly till daylight, when there was not a dry rag about me. However it had stopped raining, and we all went to work drying our clothes. To-day is pleasant, and we are all pretty comfortable.

After our regiment was formed for a start from Flint Hill, a speech from General McClellan was read to us. He told us that the time for action had come at last—that we were to be placed face to face with the enemy, etc.—all of which we then believed; but here we are, our large tents coming, and we shall probably stay here some time.

Yours Affectionately.

B-P. C.

CAMP IN THE FIELD, 10 APRIL, 1862.

. . . . We are in Warwick Co., Va., between the James and the York Rivers, about four miles from Yorktown. We left Newport News on the 4th, and marched to a place called Young's Mills, where the enemy had fortified themselves.

We reached there in the afternoon, having met with no resistance, except what their pickets made. They evacuated after having set fire to their barracks. We took one prisoner and some stores, and slept inside the fortification that night.

The next morning we started on again, and about noon arrived in front of what is called the Warwick Batteries, occupied by the enemy. Our skirmishers were immediately thrown out, and at one o'clock the first gun was fired by our artillery. Our skirmishers also met those of the enemy, and a sharp fire was kept up between them from that time until dark. The artillery also continued to play upon them as long as they could see.

We slept in the woods that night, and early next morning the firing was recommenced. This was Sunday. Our regiment was on fatigue all day, building roads for the teams and artillery to pass over—for the country is very low, and most of the land swampy.

Other regiments were also at work, and several miles of corduroy road laid. We carried rails over a mile to put in; some of the time would be up to our knees in mud, carrying logs. The shells from the forts would occasionally pass near us. Sunday night we understood that we were to storm the forts in the morning, but the next day General McClellan was here, and after all, it may be only a feint to draw the enemy from Yorktown. . . .

. . . . How long we shall remain here is more than I can tell. I hope not a great while. I feel anxious to get to Richmond. . . .

Yours Affectionately,

B-P. C.

CAMP NEAR WARWICK CREEK, VA., 21 April, 1862.

. . . . Saturday, April 19, a flag of truce was sent over from the fort, and it was arranged by our officers and the rebel Col., accompanying the flag, that we should go over and bring away our dead. Accordingly a party was detailed for that purpose who went unarmed and brought away thirty-one dead, who had lain there since the day of the battle. Everything valuable had been taken. They have six of our wounded prisoners at the fort.

In digging graves for our dead, they dug up what is supposed to be an old revolutionary soldier—for you must know that we are near Yorktown, and the army of Washington may have encamped here. Some of the earth works used at that time are still visible.

Preparations are going on for another attack at this place. We have fortifications, behind which our batteries are placed, and also rifle pits and breast works thrown up in front of the enemy. These of course are built in the night.

The large gun which the rebels used with such effect upon us in the commencement is now silent—just so sure as they attempt to work it, it is certain death to their gunners; for our sharp-shooters watch it all the time.

I send you a copy of general orders published by General Brooks of this Brigade April 17th, the day after the battle. The name of Edward A. Holton, you will find mentioned in it. He is now acting Lieutenant by order of his Colonel who has sent a copy of the orders to Governor Holbrook.

Please show the order to Mrs. Bethia (Holton) White and Miss Jemima Holton, and other of his relatives at Westminster, Vermont.

} HEAD QUARTERS, 2ND BRIGADE, GEN. SMITH'S DIV.
} General Orders No. 36. 17th April, 1862.

The Brigadier General Commanding congratulates the troops of the Brigade for the conduct exhibited by them yesterday, while under fire.

The invincibility of spirit shown by those companies, exposed to a terrific fire from the enemy sheltered in rifle pits, is worthy of the highest admiration.

The conduct of FIRST SERGEANT, E. A. HOLTON, Company I, Sixth Regiment, Vermont Volunteers, in securing and bringing back the colors of the regiment, after the bearer was shot down, is deserving of especial notice, as a praiseworthy and daring act.

Soldiers of Vermont, let your future conduct rival that of yesterday, and your friends and state may well be proud of you.

By order of Brigadier General,

W. T. H. Brooks.

Theodore Reed, A.A.G.

CAMP NEAR WARWICK CREEK, 26 Apr. 1862.

. . . . Our forces are gathering strong and fast on all sides, throwing up fortifications and strengthening our positions in front of the enemy's line, extending across from York to James rivers; while Gens. McDowell and Banks are only sixty miles from Richmond on the opposite side from us. The enemy in front of us is quiet, but probably not idle. Our sharp-shooters command their heavy guns, so that they cannot use them. Our fortifications are only about fifty rods from the rebels.

CAMP NEAR WHITE HOUSE, VA., 18 May, 1862.

. . . . The boys begin to talk about home. Many think we shall not stay much longer. Some set the time at the first of July, others, August, while a few doubting ones think we shall not be discharged until the expiration of our term of enlistment. As for me, the sooner the better, provided the war be ended; I would not like to leave till then.

That it is a hard and wearisome life, there is no use in denying, but we expected it, and I have never seen the time that I regretted coming.—We shall know how to appreciate the comforts of home, if we are ever permitted to enjoy them again. Edward-A. Holton has his commission as second lieutenant; David-M., having regained his health, is again with his regiment. . . . Last night we had orders to be ready to march this morning. . . .

CAMP IN THE FIELD, 25 June, 1862.

. . . . We have the Chickahominy well bridged, and the swamps corduroyed, and are resting. Gen. McClellan is erecting forts along the whole line, thus laying siege to Richmond; and it looks, as though, if we have a fight, the rebels will have to make the attack.

One regiment in the brigade stands under arms every morning to guard against a surprise—the regiments in alternation rising at about 2 1-2 o'clock and standing until after daylight.

CAMP NEAR HARRISON'S LANDING, 8 July, 1862.

Dear Parents: I have few moments this morning which I can devote to letter-writing, and it is the first opportunity I have had since I wrote you before.

Since Friday, the 27th June, we have had no more rest than was requisite for sleep. We are now on the James river, and McClellan's army is acting on the defensive.

Night before last we were on picket and last night on fatigue, and thus it goes night and day. I shall not be able to write you any particulars at present—and of the hardships of the eight days, (from the 27th to the time we arrived here) I will not speak; yet I will say, I do not believe that our forefathers of the Revolution would have cause to blush for their sons of 1862, could they witness the valor with which they bore their part.

The weather is excessively warm, and we are encamped in an open field. . . .

CAMP NEAR HARRISON'S LANDING, VA., 18 July, 1862.

. . . . The rebels say they have us in the hottest spot in Virginia, and I believe them. . . . We are living on hard bread and coffee.

We do not fear an attack here. Nothing would suit McClellan better than to have the whole rebel force brought against him at this place. Our right and left flanks are protected by the gun boats, while our centre lines are of immense strength.

. . . . I presume we shall not move from here for some time. I think we must be waiting for re-enforcements. Large numbers have passed up the river since we have been here. I do not know their destination. I suppose Gen. Pope is around somewhere with a large army. A portion of what was Fremont's army is here with us.

CAMP NEAR HARRISON'S LANDING; 24 July, 1862.

. . . . We have a fair prospect of staying here some time, and there will be no trouble in getting a box through to me. We have to pay very high for every thing we get here. . . . July 28. In regard to the box I really need it. We never lived so poorly, since we have been in the army. We would not cavil about it; only we are where we might have things furnished us. Aug. 11, we are now under marching orders. . . . This letter will be borne to you by my friend Sergt. Chas. E. Osgood of Saxton's river, who starts this morning for home on a recruiting service.

CAMP NEAR ALEXANDRIA, VA., Aug. 26, 1862.

. . . . You will see by my heading—if you have not before heard of it, that the Grand Army of the Potomac has made another move.

On the 23 May we embarked at this place for Fortress Monroe—on the 23 Aug. we left Fortress Monroe for this place—after a weary journey of five months duration up, down, and across the Peninsula, we once more find ourselves on the banks of the Potomac.

I can but notice the sad difference between our portion of the army, as it now is, and what it was, when we first marched through the streets of Alexandria.

We return leaving Richmond in the hands of the enemy. We left Harrison's Landing on the 16th, and were six days on the road to the Fortress. We came by way of Yorktown and Williamsburg, passing across the battle ground at the latter place. Our knapsacks were shipped at Harrison's Landing, and as yet we have them not. Where we are to go from here is a mystery to us. Some think we shall go to re-enforce Gen. Pope, and others that we are to go to some part of Maryland to do garrison duty. I think myself we are going to Warrenton, to which place Pope has fallen back. I do not believe that we shall be allowed to retire from the field, to have our place filled by new troops.

When I shall see the box, started from Westminster, in compliance with the solicitations from Harrison's Landing 24 and 28 July letters, I know not. Doubtless it will sometime find its way to me—But whether it ever does or not, I wish to return my thanks to those persons who so kindly assisted you in preparing it.

CAMP NEAR ALEXANDRIA; 4 Sept. 1862.

. . . . Since my last a bloody battle has been fought some five miles from Centreville. Friday we left for Manassas, passing the night at Fairfax. Saturday at dark we reached Centreville, and went out about three miles towards the battle field, when we met many of the troops from the field on their way to Centreville, and we were ordered to join the returning party, and we remained at Centreville till Monday night.

The divisions of Genls. Banks, McDowell, Hooker and Seigel, and others were engaged. Our loss was undoubtedly heavy.

Monday the Vermont Cavalry, returning from the battle field, were at Centreville. Among them I saw brother Mark-Henry; he was looking first rate. He could not remain long with me, as he had to return to his regiment.

CAMP NEAR HAGERSTOWN, Md. Sunday 28, Sept. 1862.

Dear Parents,

. . . . This is the first quiet Sabbath we have had for a great while. To day we had services.

There is only only one Brigade here—the rest of the division is at Harper's Ferry and Frederick, one Brigade at each place.

Gen. Brooks is Military Governor of Hagerstown. We shall do guard duty in the city.

CAMP NEAR HAGERSTOWN, MD., 19 Oct., 1862.

. . . . The Second and Fifth Regiments went up to Chambersburg, Pa., and staid a few days. They are back now and we have another new regiment in the brigade, the Twenty-sixth New Jersey, a fine large regiment. . . . The expected box, at last, came all right, and contained what I wanted, and all I want at present.

CAMP NEAR WHITE PLAINS, VA.; 8 Nov., 1862.

. . . . We left Hagerstown 1 Nov. We crossed the Potomac into Virginia at Berlin on a pontoon bridge, and passed over our old battle-field at South Mountain. The report is that there are 500,000 troops now on this side, and a battle is expected.

Our march has been in a southerly direction down the valley on the east of the Blue Ridge, leaving Manassas Gap on our left, and are now on the Manassas Gap Railroad, about twelve miles from Warrenton. Shall probably cross the Blue Ridge into the Shenandoah Valley.

CAMP GRIFFIN, VA., 12 Feb., 1863.

. . . . We have news of some successes in other parts of the army. The papers of 10th inst. reported that our forces had attacked Roanoke Island, and had been twice repulsed, but were still fighting. To-night the colonel called our company into line and told us that success in that quarter was at last ours.

CAMP IN THE FIELD, VA., 1 May, 1863.

We left camp near White Oak church on the 28th April.

. . . . We are once more on the banks of the Rappahannoc, part of our forces are across and occupy the same position they did at the first battle. There are only two corps here, the main army under Hooker has crossed above—and the report is that the enemy are completely flanked and must now fight us on our own ground. Our object is to hold this position.

I have not heard from brother Mark-Henry for some time, but understand that all the cavalry is with Hooker on the right.

If we are called upon to take a part in the present struggle, I shall try to do my duty, and leave the result with a higher power.

CAMP IN THE FIELD, VA., 7 May, 1863.

. . . . I now write to inform you the battle has been fought, and that through a kind Providence, I am still alive and well, though we have been in some pretty tight places.

On Saturday night, 2 May, we crossed the Rappahannock and commenced an attack on the Heights of Fredericksburg, with only one corps, the rest of the army being some 20 miles to the right under General Hooker.

We attacked at the same place where our army had been previously repulsed.

Perhaps a slight description of the position may be interesting:

The enemy occupied the heights of Fredericksburg between which and the river there is a level plain, nearly a mile in breath, which must be crossed, and which is exposed to the fire of the enemy at all points.

About three o'clock in the afternoon we charged and took the heights, then moved on to the right. There General Brooks' division had another hard fight, but night came on leaving us in possession of the field.

The next morning we moved still farther to the right. The enemy had heavy re-enforcements, while we had none.

About six o'clock they advanced on our position with all their force—one line of battle following another. The rebel prisoners say thirteen brigades charged on our division. And here we had the hardest fighting we ever saw. The enemy on three sides of us, came on furiously, but not one inch of ground did they take from the Vermont Brigade. On the contrary, we advanced on them, keeping up a steady fire. Soon their lines broke and they began to fly. Our brigade took about four hundred prisoners, including a great number of officers. The enemy then rallied and attempted another flank movement, but we moved quickly to the left and our artillery opened on them, when they once more retreated leaving their dead in heaps on the field.

We were completely victorious, but it would not have been safe to have tried to hold the position another day without re-enforcements, and we recrossed the river before daylight the next morning.

We were exceedingly fortunate as regards loss of life—the total loss of the Third Regiment was three killed, twenty-three wounded, and thirteen missing.

General Hooker's army has recrossed the river without being more successful than was Burnside's. We may have more fighting within a few days.

CAMP IN THE FIELD, GETTYSBURG; 4 July, 1863.

. . . For the past month we have been under arms almost constantly, and the greater part of the time have been on the march—for the past week we have averaged twenty-five miles per day.

We are now on the battle-field of Gettysburg. Yesterday this place was the scene of a great battle—I do not know whether it is decided yet or not. The enemy is still here, though they had the worst of it—our troops driving them at all points and taking a great number of prisoners; in one instance a whole Brigade threw down their arms and surrendered—a Brigadier General leading the column into our lines. Their loss in killed and wounded is immense. We, also, have lost a great many lives: General Reynolds was killed in the first day's engagement, General Sickles is wounded, having lost a leg.

We arrived on the field, the night of the 2d, having marched all that day, and all the night before—our knapsacks off only two hours out of twenty-seven. The Second Vermont Brigade have been in the fight and are spoken very highly of by the troops engaged with them.

The Vermont Cavalry are also here, and have suffered severely, having lost about one hundred and forty men in killed, wounded, and missing. I saw brother Mark-Henry to-day, he was well, having come out of another severe engagement unharmed. We are celebrating the 4th in rather a novel manner, most of the powder having been burned yesterday.

CAMP IN THE FIELD NEAR BOONSBORO, MD., July 9th, 1863.

. . . Since the 4th we have done some pretty tall marching, and now find ourselves here, not far from the old South Mountain battle-field. We are here for the purpose of preventing the enemy's escaping in this direction, which it will be very hard for him to do, as we hold all the mountain passes.

We understand his retreat across the river is very uncertain, as he has lost his pontoons, and the late rains have rendered the river impassable, except with bridges still he may escape with the greater part of his army.

It becomes more and more evident that Lee was severely beaten at Gettysburg.

CAMP NEAR BERLIN, MD., 17 July, 1863.

. . . The army is concentrating here for the purpose of crossing the river. The bridges are laid and we shall soon be in Virginia again. We followed the enemy from Boonsboro to Hagerstown, fighting all the way. Our Westminster boys are well except David-May Holton. General Lee has managed to give us the slip with little loss.

There are many incidents which would be interesting to you, but I will leave the details until I reach home.

We are now on our last year of enlistment, and the time does not seem very long to me; yet we know not what events may be crowded into a year. The past one has been full of incidents long to be remembered. I sincerely hope this war may be ended before my time is out. At present, news is favorable from all quarters.

P. S. Please send in your next letter a skein of coarse silk and a paper of needles.

CAMP OF THE THIRD VERMONT VOLUNTEERS, Aug. 3, 1863.

. . . We are now near Warrenton and the North Fork of the Rappahannock, at Waterloo Bridge.

One week ago yesterday, I attended Church in an old and deserted meeting-house, a few miles from here, where we were then stopping. Our chaplain and that of the Sixth Regiment are the only ones now in the Brigade. For two weeks past we have had all the blackberries we could eat.

Since I commenced writing, the report is that we have to move to-morrow. The weather is so hot it is very tedious marching.

We started from near White Plains one day at two o'clock P.M. and marched to Chester Gap, a distance of seventeen miles, arriving there at dark.

CAMP OF THE THIRD VERMONT VOLUNTEERS, August 10th, 1863.

. . . . We are now near White Sulphur Springs. I think there is no doubt we shall stay here till after the conscripts are organized, and our ranks filled. If ever an army needed recruiting ours does now. What men and animals are left in it are worn out with fatigue and want of food. . . .

CAMP OF THE THIRD VERMONT VOLUNTEERS,

NEW YORK CITY, 22 Aug., 1863.

. . . . We were routed out of our camp at Sulphur Springs on the morning of the 14th inst, with the order to move immediately. Of course we did not know whither we were going, but when we found that only our brigade were stirring, and that we were going to Warrenton to take the cars for Alexandria, we made up our minds that we were bound for Charleston.

I do not anticipate much trouble from the mob in New York City, every thing is quiet now and the draft is progressing. If there is any disturbance, it will be when the conscripts are taken away. The people are courteous and kind—brought water and refreshments into the streets as we marched up, and they had innumerable questions to ask when they learned we were from the Rappahannock.

NEW YORK CITY, 29 Aug. 1863.

. . . . We are having a quiet time. I have seen my cousin, Dr. D-P. Holton, residing at 59 Bond Street. He has much to say about the war, and is enthusiastically engaged in obtaining, through national and state legislation, the establishment of Agricultural Colleges in every loyal state, not only with a view ultimately to promote the interests of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts; but primarily to secure in connection therewith, a Home for Patriot orphans, a home and school for the orphans of fathers dying in the service of their country. Some portion of these orphans may become qualified for the Agricultural Colleges, while the greater part will leave the "Homes" for the various positions in life, for which they have a choice. Dr. Holton, by invitation of our Colonel, addressed our Regiment in the Park (Tompkins Square) speaking of the organization and purposes of the INSTITUTE OF REWARD, its successful labors at Congress in securing for each loyal state a grant for said colleges. He spoke of what was being done by the Institute to secure, through legislation in the several states, the combination, at least for the present, of the Agricultural Colleges and The Patriot Orphan Home—including free scholarships in the Colleges, in all appointments to which, the preference (other qualifications being adequate) should be given to our PATRIOT ORPHANS. [See Act of Incorporation of the Cornell University, N. Y., also, the Acts of the Legislatures of Illinois, Connecticut, Wisconsin, and several other states, in their use of the congressional grant for Agricultural Colleges, analogous to the statute of the state of New York in regard to patriot orphan scholarships in the Cornell University, which is the Agricultural College of this state.]

CAMP OF THE THIRD VT. VOLS ; AT CULPEPPER, Sept. 24th, 1863.

. . . . Once more at the front, under marching orders, with eight days rations. There are four companies of the Vermont cavalry here at General Sedgewick's headquarters, but brother Henry's is not here.

Our conscripts have arrived, and fill our ranks finely. The weather is quite warm by day, but the nights are cold.

We had quite a time in Newark with the 33d Jersey regiment ; but finally succeeded in getting them off for Alexandria.

I think General Mead is preparing for another grand movement before the winter sets in.

13 March, 1864. CAMP OF THE 3D. VT. VOLS., VA.

. . . . You have probably had an account of the late move across the Rapidan. I did not go out. I was left in charge of the guard in camp.

The Vermont cavalry have not returned. When they do I shall go down to see brother Henry. There are no signs of a move being made at present. Lieutenant General Grant is on a visit at army headquarters. There are many conjectures as to the purpose and results of his visit.

CAMP OF THE 3D VT. VOLS. 27 March, 1864.

Dear Parents. . I hear nothing certain from brother Mark Henry—the probability is that he is a prisoner. One of his company was up yesterday, and called to tell me about it. To-day Eli came up and gave me the particulars, as far as they are known, and from all accounts I think there is no doubt that he is in Richmond.

Now, that was bad enough, but not so bad as it might be. He may not have to stay long before an exchange will be made. At any rate let us hope for the best.

We probably shall not hear anything more from him until his release—which I hope may not be long.

CAMP OF THE 3D VT. VOLS. 29 April, 1864.

. . . Everything is quiet now except that our army here is being rapidly re-enforced, and we shall not probably remain idle much longer. I suppose you hear nothing from Henry. I think of him very often.

I have put in my application for a furlough to attend the Military School at Philadelphia—afterwards to receive a commission in a colored regiment. It has been approved by the colonel and sent to headquarters. When it gets around I shall go before the board of officers for examination, and if I pass that, shall go to Philadelphia for thirty days.

May 16, 1864. CAMP OF THE 3D VT. VOLS., VA.

My Dear Parents. I wrote you a few lines the other day, but had not time to enter into those particulars which I know you must feel anxious to hear, and which I cannot give better than in the form of a journal, commencing with the 4th of the present month.

On that day we left camp and crossed the Rapidan, meeting with no opposition.

May 5th. We took up our line of march, extending through an extensive WILDERNESS, or wooded part of the country.

A little before noon the First Brigade of our Division encountered the enemy in small force, and drove them. As we came up, they fell back to what afterwards proved to be a fortified position. Our lines were immediately formed, and we threw up a breast work. As other troops came up and formed on our right and left, they did the same. Not an opening was to be seen. For miles and miles it was a nearly level country, covered with a small growth of timber. About one o'clock we advanced in line of battle, the Vermont Brigade being on the front line. We had gone about fifty rods, when we were brought to a stand still by a volley from the enemy, which, as yet, was invisible to us on account of the dense undergrowth. We returned the compliment and pushed forward. The fire soon became so hot that we were obliged to fall back. Three times we charged, and as many times were we compelled to retreat. We however, for three hours, held our line, which was about twenty rods from their breastworks. We were finally relieved and fell back to our own works, where we lay that night.

Thus ended the first day's fighting, and a hard one it was. My Company lost two killed and twenty wounded.

May 6th. Our lines were formed early in the morning, and at sunrise we advanced again—this time with three lines in front of us. The enemy was driven about two miles, and lost many prisoners. We passed over three lines of their breastworks. It was not long before the troops ahead of us became broken and disorganized, and at 8 o'clock we were once more the front line, and halted behind the enemy's breastworks. They attempted to dislodge us, but could not succeed. We held that line for five hours, during which time Gen. Burnside with the Ninth Corps had come up and joined us on our left. The enemy finding he could not stir us attempted a flank movement by attacking Burnside, in which they could never have succeeded had his men stood their ground; but they gave way at the first volley. This left the rebs. on our left and nearly in rear of us. The consequence was we received a severe flank fire and had to retreat.

We rallied twice and checked their progress, but the Ninth Corps gave way each time, and we made up our minds, that the quicker we got back the better. I never was much on running, but I calculate the way I went through those woods was a pretty tall specimen of pedestrianism.

We re-formed in the rear of our own works, which the enemy tried to take, but were repulsed with heavy loss. In that day's fighting we lost only two, missing.

May 7th. We were moved about all day, and occupied several different positions on the line; were under breastworks in three or four different places, but had no fighting.

The principal attack was made on our right which resulted in our favor. About sunset we moved three or four miles to the right, but, after dark, started again for the left; marched all that night and till noon the next day.

May 8th. Continued the march of the night previous without halting for breakfast. Passing by Chancellorville and the old battlefield of Hooker, at noon we halted near Spottsylvania Court House, where we rested till about five o'clock, when we moved on again four or five miles and came up with the Fifth Corps fighting in the woods. We did not get there in time to form until after dark.

The Fifth Corps had gained quite an advantage, driving the enemy two or three miles.

May 9th. We built strong breastworks the whole length of our lines, and awaited an attack. We understood that the Fifth and Ninth Corps were moving to the left, and that all we were required to do was to hold the enemy, in case they attempted to come through that way. Nothing occurred, however, except sharp skirmishing.

May 10th. We laid all day behind our works. In the afternoon the Second, Fifth, and Sixth Vermont regiments were sent out to support a charge to be made on the left flank of the enemy. The charge was made by our First Division and resulted favorably. They took several hundred prisoners, and after dark were withdrawn.

May 11th. The fighting was on our right. We lay quiet until nearly night, when we were drawn out, and the Third Division took our place.

May 12th. This day, by far the hardest fighting took place, and by far the most decisive victory was won.

We started early in the morning for the left of our line, where the First Division was to charge a very strong position of the enemy. As soon as we arrived, the First Division moved forward and gained the works, followed by us. In the charge they became so broken and disorganized that they fell back, and we moved up to the works, which the rebels seemed determined not to leave, and which we were as determined not to give up—so we fought almost hand to hand, we on one side of the works and they on the other. Whenever it could be done, our boys would get on the top log and fire down into the pit. Once they tried to raise up a log to have a crack to fire through, but our soldiers were on hand and pushed bayonets through, and the enemy gladly relinquished that attempt.

In order to give you a better idea of what I mean, I have tried to draw a plan of the position, but do not know as you will be able to understand it.

* * * * *

You will see that we had to cross the hollow and go up the hill. The dotted line indicates our line after the works were gained. Where it runs close to the heavy line, it shows that our men were on the works. To the right, where we were, it bears off, there being a rise of ground, which was exposed to a cross fire from the enemy posted further to the right than I have represented.

The position indicated we took about eight o'clock in the morning and held until five, being nine hours under fire. We were then relieved and went to the rear.

A sweet looking set of boys we were. It rained all the morning, and the mud, from being constantly trodden, was nearly knee deep. A part of the time, when the fire from the enemy was hottest we would stand only to fire, and kneel down to load; and part of the time we were obliged to lie down. We were covered with mud, our faces blackened with powder, and the perspiration streaming from every pore—for it was very hot. Ammunition having been constantly served, our soldiers in action averaged one hundred and fifty rounds; I fired over two hundred rounds.

Our side lost very heavily at the commencement, but after a while we kept such a sheet of lead going over their works, that they would only stick their guns over to fire, and it was not nearly as effective. The two large dots at the right show where we had two pieces of artillery run up. Every one of the cannoneers was shot and all the horses were killed, and the infantry dragged off the guns to save them.

Company A lost in that days fighting three killed and four wounded, making a total for that company, of five killed, twenty-four wounded, and two missing. There are, also, several slightly wounded, who are still with us. We have had some sent to the hospital from sickness, so that out of sixty-five men that left camp, there are only twenty-six remaining. Sergeants Lealand and Boynton were killed on the twelfth. I have so far escaped unharmed.

We are now between Fredericksburg and Richmond, about ten miles from the first named place. General Grant has been on the field, but the army is still commanded by General Meade, in whom we are fast gaining confidence.

You will see that my description of the different battles includes only those portions in which this Brigade, or Division, was engaged.

A great amount of fighting has been done of which I can say nothing, except that the enemy were routed at every point. I have tried in nothing to exaggerate—the facts are enough.

The loss of the Vermont Brigade, in killed, wounded and missing, is reported at 1,700. The Eleventh Regiment is at last in the field, and now lying near us. I saw the Westminster boys the other day.

May 19th.—I was obliged to leave my writing on the 16th, as we were to move; so I will add a little more this afternoon. Since the 16th we have been constantly on the move—first to the right and then to the left of the lines. To-day, we have been building breastworks behind which we are now lying. Yesterday, we had a sharp little fight lasting an hour or two.

I do not believe General Grant will leave the enemy, until one army or the other is used up. The loss on both sides must be immense; but we have received heavy re-enforcements, which I do not think General Lee can expect.

Surely, next to a great defeat, a great victory is to be dreaded. Many a brave man's life has been sacrificed to gain the victories over which the people of the North are at present exulting.

General Getty, our Division Commander, was wounded in the first day's fight; General Sedgwick, our brave and beloved Corps Commander, was killed by the enemy's sharp-shooters. We have never lost a man immediately connected with us, who was missed so much as he will be. The loss of field officers in our Brigade has been quite heavy, Colonel Foster of the Fourth, also the Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel of the Second are wounded; the Colonel of the Sixth and our Adjutant are killed. Sergeant David-M. Holton was killed the 5th of May, and Lieutenant Edward-A. Holton was wounded the same day, 5 May, 1864.

I have been so long writing this and at so many times and places, that my paper has become much soiled. I presume you will find plenty of mistakes, as I have not had time to make any corrections. A part of it was written on the skirmish line, and part while lying in line of battle.

I shall not have time to write the details again, so, if you please, you may show this to whomsoever you think proper. If you have an opportunity, let Nathan Peirce read it.

I will write again soon, and hope to hear from you before long.

Accept this with much love,

From your affectionate son,

B-P. C.

SERGEANT COOK, under the fatigues, privations, and exposures of this continuous battle, sickened, and on a transport to Washington, died 4 June, 1864, one month from the commencement of the battle of the WILDERNESS.

His body was interred in the National Cemetery on Arlington Heights.

JOSIAH-WINSLOW^a, [4229] (Susanna^a (Winslow) Wentworth, Josiah^a, Josiah^s, Kenelm^s, Kenelm¹.) b. 22 Mar. 1752-3; d. 24 Jan. 1841, New York city; married Mary Hanford, of Norwalk, Conn., born about 1762, dau. of Thomas, of "Old Well." She died 22 June, 1835, aged 73, Owego, N.Y. He purchased two and a half acres of land, opposite his brother Edward's homestead, in Norwalk, and built thereon a dwelling-house and carriage maker's shop. The site is now occupied by a Methodist church. He was a warm supporter of the Revolution and enlisted in the army, for which he afterwards drew a monthly pension of twenty dollars. His wife's family were royalists, and her brother Thomas an officer in the British service. When her only child was about a year old, Mrs. Wentworth, being warmly opposed to her husband's course in fighting against the British government, went with her brother Thomas to St. John, N.B. It is doubtful whether she and her husband ever met again. She is said to have returned and taught school at Norwalk, but afterwards went back to St. John, where she married Samuel Miles.

He sold his property at Norwalk to his brother Edward, and, after the war, settled at Sag Harbor, N.Y., and, prior to 1800, married Frances (Fordham) Atwood, widow of Isaac Atwood, and dau. of Daniel and Phebe (—) of S.H. There he lived until about 1824, when he removed to New York city. He was a remarkably strong and active man to the last of his days; was fond of skating when over seventy years old. His niece, Harriot-Kezia^a Hunt, M.D. [4354] thus writes concerning him, in 1835:—"At this time, my mother's eldest brother came to visit us. He was eighty-two years of age; hale, hearty, and bright. Revolutionary anecdotes kept us wide awake in his company. His romantic life and unheard-of adventures made him the lion of the family party. At his advanced age he could distance the younger branches of the family as a walker. The Wentworth element was felt in his presence. I remember our regret that the old Bible containing the family record of his father had been destroyed. How many valuable records of the past are thus carelessly lost." And again, in 1838:—"My mother's eldest brother, that old man of eighty-five years—that man of the past—so keen—so bright—so full of revolutionary anecdotes—came to visit us again. At our house he met his eldest grandson, whom, by a singular train of circumstances, he had never before seen. I seem to see now, the proud grandfather leaning on his grandson's arm for a walk!" "Our old uncle, Josiah Winslow Wentworth, the one I have spoken of as the hale, hearty old man of the Revolution, died this year [1841] aged eighty-eight years. He died at New York, at the residence of his son of the same name, who also had a son to hand it down. Many happy hours have I enjoyed with that branch of the family in New York, and my visits there have been made homelike through their kindnesses. My mother's eldest sister soon followed her brother; thus that branch of the Wentworth tree was nearly gone—my mother being the only survivor."

Her niece, Harriot-Kezia^o Hunt, M.D., [4354] thus writes concerning her: "In 1839, that dear aunt, my mother's eldest sister, who chafed and warmed me into life, found age resting upon her heavily. She had been feeble for many years, and bore her infirmities with wonderful heroism. The great delight I took in ministering to her comfort may be judged from her peculiar relation to me. She had lost two husbands and nine children, and was living with her only surviving daughter. I should be untrue to myself did I not feelingly record these varied breakages in the family circle; they are the mile-stones set up by Providence—affection marks them, and to those who are aunts, they speak a significant language. This aged aunt was buried from our home in Green street. She had been a member of Dr. Sharp's church for years. Her husband had been the first occupant of our tomb; this last resting-place was a free-will offering of love to our relatives—to this fact is owing the sacredness of that spot and the tender feelings of so many in depositing their loved ones there. Reverently did we commit her to her last home."

She married 3 May, 1795, Capt. Joseph INGRAHAM, born about 1769, son of Joseph and Mary (Sumner). He died 27 June, 1813, aged 44, Bristol, R.I., and was buried there. Sea-captain. Her niece, Harriot-Kezia⁷ Hunt, M.D., [4354] writes: "She was one of those cheerful, trusting spirits who accept adversity with a smile, and always keep a genial, loving tone in the family. She adhered to the Episcopal form of worship, as do also her descendants. I seem to listen now to the beautiful burial service of that church, which solemnized her funeral. This sorrow was accepted by my mother even with joy—her sister had been so severe a sufferer. Christ Church will ever be associated with my aunt's memory; and Christmas celebrations have a charm, derived from remembrance of her enjoyment of them, even in age."

Her remains, with those of her husband, were removed, 23 May, 1857, to Mt. Auburn Cemetery. She was married at Boston, by Bishop Parker of the Protestant Episcopal Church, 6 Nov. 1791, to Joab HUNT, b. 7 Nov. 1769, B., son of Joab, of B., and Sarah (Adams), dau. of Thomas and Sarah (——) of B. He died instantly, on the evening of the 15 Nov. 1827, at the rooms of the St. Andrew's Lodge, Freemasons, Boston. His health had been failing during the spring and summer, and the first of November he had narrowly escaped death from a severe accident which happened to him. A bundle of shingles fell on his head and face, and cut him very badly. He had however recovered from the effects of this accident, at the time of his death. His daughter Harriot-Kezia^r Hunt, M.D., in her Glances and Glimpses thus writes:—"That evening we attended him, as we were wont, to the door of the old court-house. Taking leave of us there, he tenderly said to mother, 'I shall come home immediately after the choice of officers—we must look after the young folks.' Never had his eye seemed to rest on us more affectionately; never had his tone sounded more sweetly. It was the last tone that ever lingered on the outward ear; but in quiet moments of after-life that cheering voice has been heard within! That voice, so ringing, clear and musical, has never been lost; it has cheered us in great emergencies, it has given us strength to struggle for victory in the battle of life He had desired to be removed suddenly—his prayer had been answered. His friend, Major Purkitt, says he had frequently expressed the wish to him that he might be 'taken away in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.' His kindred had suffered much physically—he was freed without pain. He dreaded leave-takings—he was spared that sorrow

I pass over all but my mother's unselfish and noble bearing. Deeply sustained by the love which had blessed their union for so many years--wonderfully self-possessed in that sad hour—she only thought of her children and their first sorrow, and folding her motherly arms around them, the three became one She shielded and guarded us—she taught us to quietly accept the chastening, and she taught us gratitude that we had in our father so much that was valuable to surrender My father disliked afternoon burials; he wished the laying of the body in the tomb to be hallowed by connection with a new day and a new morn. On the third day after his death, at eight o'clock on Sabbath morning, the body having shown the fearful mystery of change which follows its divorce from the spirit, it was committed to the tomb on Copp's Hill, which he had carefully built in 1811, and to which he had often taken his children that they might habituate themselves to the spot. . . .

My father was entirely a 'North-Ender!' His family always lived, as did his maternal grandparents, in Charter Street. A bright, glad, witty man—without a shade of vulgarity—perfectly the master of all those nice little arts and manners which give zest to conversation, enlivening it—with a true, constant, and genial benevolence in thought, word, and deed;—his face was always radiant with a pleasure that had its source in his heart—‘a contented mind is a continual feast.’ . . . He desired to follow the mariner’s varied and trying life. It was the warm wish of his heart—it was his cherished plan; but it was repugnant to his parents, and he laid it down. His only brother, Capt. Joseph Hunt, of Charleston, S.C., took it up, and carried it out . . . Fated not to be one of those ‘who go down to the sea in ships,’ my father’s next plan was to link himself as closely as possible to those who did; and he learned the trade of a ship joiner (it was so called then), which he followed many years. Subsequently he went into the business of Eastern navigation. . . . A daughter’s love cannot forego the gratification of sustaining her views of his character, by the following extracts from an address by Thomas-W. Phillips, at the first meeting held after his decease: ‘Thus died Joab Hunt, one of the oldest members of St. Andrew’s Lodge, a man honored and respected in society, a just and upright mason, and one of the noblest works of God’s creation, an honest man; one who was beloved by all the members of the lodge, who will long lament his loss. He was at all times vigilant, prompt, and judicious in guarding the honor, and promoting the true interests of the lodge; he was a true friend, a good citizen; blest with a cheerful disposition, he diffused happiness wherever he went; he was generous in his feelings, and always ready to bear his full share in alleviating the troubles of the unfortunate; he was most truly an ornament to our fraternity.’

Concerning her mother she says: “My mother was a pet child—the youngest of her family. Before she was ten years old, her mother died. But the love that had been breathed on her childhood for those ten years remained forever. Its memory was the glad light that cheered and guided her in the performance of her duties in after life. . . . I remember often hearing in childhood of my mother’s usefulness, of her great capacity for doing good to others. It was all reflected back upon her in respect and blessing. . . . The spring of 1847 came. My sister and her family removed to Mount Bowdoin, and again mother and I were the family at Green Street. I experienced a terrible heart-sickness as my sister departed, for, at the time, my mother was not well.” Her illness was apparently very slight, but it soon assumed an alarming character, and it was certain that she could not recover. ‘Do not deceive me,’ she said, and her tone was one of delight, and her voice full of trust and confidence, ‘do not deceive me; am I going home?’ My heart was well-nigh bursting. I could not sympathize in her gladness. My orphanage dawned upon me, a feeling of desolation seized me. Night after night I lay beside her, and she would frequently say, ‘All alone; how quiet!’ She was enjoying the peace and silence of the night, which had their reflex in her heart. . . . The time came, and Copp’s Hill was trodden again, and Christ Church bells played again, and the revered form of a mother was laid beside that of a father, that their dust might mingle. After the funeral I came to my home; my sister went to hers. I was not alone—the years between the removal of my parents no longer seemed to have intervened. Time was annihilated—both parents in the spiritual world. What an epoch!”

4354. HARRIOT-KEZIA', [4352] (Kezia^o (Wentworth) Hunt, Susanna^o (Winslow) Wentworth, *Josiah*⁴, *Josiah*³, *Kenelm*², *Kenelm*¹.) b. 9 Nov. 1805, Boston, Mass. In 1856 she published a work entitled "Glances and Glimpses; or Fifty Years Social, Including Twenty Years Professional Life," from which we have made the following extracts concerning her life: "I come now to speak of my birth. The older portion of the inhabitants of the North End can remember when Lynn Street (now Commercial) was open on one side to the broad waters of the harbor, and when the houses on the right hand from Hanover Street side were not built. Those older people can remember, too, a neat, pleasant little dwelling facing the water, with a garden of flowers all about it. From the windows you could look on the free tossing of the sea-tides, with the ships far and near, and the little ferry-boats plying to and fro. Beyond was Chelsea, where the cows were feeding in the green pastures. You could see the beautiful sunsets reflected in the water, kindling its unstable mass into gorgeous color and shifting flame. And in this house, whose surrounding scenery gave it a soft charm—a house with flowers without and birds within, and itself the nest of every comfort—in this house I was born." In 1808, her family removed to Fleet Street, where her sister was born, and where they resided till 1834. In April, 1827, previous to her father's death, she there started a school with eight pupils, which number, by October of the same year, had increased to twenty-three. After the death of her father, she says: "Our mother administered on the estate; the writing devolved upon me, with counsel from my sister. We very soon ascertained that the navigation business, in which my father had been engaged, was at the very worst period for profitable settlement, on account of the general mercantile depression. Meanwhile we proceeded with our house repairs, as it now became necessary to let a part of our dwelling." In 1830, her sister was taken sick, which sickness continued for over three years, and was the direct means of turning her attention to the medical profession. In June, 1833, as her sister had received but little help from several physicians, she decided to consult Dr. and Mrs. Mott, English people who had recently established themselves in practice in Boston. Her sister improved under their treatment, and an attachment sprang up between the families. In September they made an offer for her to act as their private secretary, which she accepted. The next spring the two sisters rented their house in Fleet Street, and boarded at Dr. Mott's.

"In October, 1835, we removed to the corner of Spring and Leverett Streets, where we lived some time, advertised, and began, as it were, our profession. Our mother was then nearly sixty-five years of age, clear and bright, and, as ever, watchful over her children. Our previous removal being but temporary, this new dwelling-place seemed more like home. There we commenced a life fraught with absorbing interest—grasping the past to apply it to the present, and prospectively looking to the future. . . . The Motts, being foreigners, were prosperous. On the contrary, here were Harriot-K. and Sarah-A Hunt, native Bostonians, well known through their parentage, their character, their life; and, as 'a prophet hath no honor in his own country,' so it was with us at first. I am glad that I remained in my own city—lived a professional life where I was born; and accepted—nay, enjoyed—slights and cool recognitions from old friends and schoolmates, in full faith that all would be well in the end. Lowell would have given more money, but Boston met a want beyond money, and feeling that I was not doing wrong, I would not exile myself from my birthplace; Boston was my birthright—a term no Quaker ever loved more than I did. My future had expanded, and still further expansions beckoned me on. If true to-day, to-morrow would be fair, and all after morrows besides. . . .

Our business gradually increased. One cure opened the way for other cases; and an enforcement of dietetic rules, bathing, and so forth, soon placed on a permanently healthy platform those who consulted us. Our diagnosis was not copied from that of any eminent M.D. Indeed it required a strong and determined effort never to speak disparagingly of the profession, or of physicians, but to be quiet and candid. Very carefully did we venture out into the broad ocean, preferring, at the outset, to keep along shore, till experience could trim the sails, and confidence pilot a larger craft. Soon, opportunities were offered us to visit country towns; I accepted them cheerfully; my sister remained at home. From these journeys I gathered rich knowledge; so many 'given up cases' were presented to my notice; also chronic diseases of an aggravated character. These last were opportunities for friendly relations and examinations; but not cases to be accepted professionally. My field of observation broadened wonderfully; if hospitals closed their doors to woman, except as patient and nurse, the public were beginning to perceive the inconsistency—nay, injustice—of the act! We had, before long, patients from the highly cultivated, the delicate, and the sensible portions of the community. . . . We paid our mortgage on our house in Fleet Street at this period [1836]. Who could, or would, forget that thrill of joy, as, with means in hand, we entered the residence of William Parker? We had lived carefully, economically, but not meanly; and thus we were enabled to gratify this strong desire: . . .

I have stated that I visited many country towns. Lynn was one of these. There was no railroad to that place then;—once a month I went thither, professionally, in the stage-coach. In 1838, the friend with whom I had always stopped, moved to New Hampshire; and it was in making arrangements for a new location, that I became acquainted with Mary S. Gove, now Mrs. Nichols. She was then keeping school, and, for a short time, I took rooms at her house for a day or two every month. Her deep interest in anatomy and physiology drew me to her. Since then, she has appeared before the public both as a lecturer and physician; and many persons have enjoyed her in the former, and tested her skill in the latter capacity. . . . In September, 1839, we purchased the residence, No. 32 Green Street, where I now live. . . . At this period [1840] my mother was in her seventieth year,—her front teeth perfect, and her hair coal-black; and we had the privilege of possessing her portrait, and also one of our father, copied from a picture painted by our cousin, T. H. Wentworth [4243]. They were both excellent likenesses, and highly satisfactory. Mr. Henry C. Pratt was the artist. Those two beaming faces hanging upon our parlor wall gave new life to the dwelling. Every one who came to see us increased our satisfaction by praising their accuracy. Do not be afraid that your pictures will lumber attics when you are no longer on earth! They will have performed their offices, and that is all you can ask. These pictured forms bring up facts, and throng vacant hours with beautiful visions. I remember, on coming back once from a journey, finding a salutatory address my sister had written for me, in which the portraits of my father and mother were the speakers welcoming home their child to duty and to life. Tears came to my eyes for very joy. Artistic life is one of the angel ministrations in this world, and opens to us the highest privileges. When death removes our loved ones, we feel it : why not be rational, and feel it in health and joy? Have your family reproduced on canvas while you are in cheerfulness, not in sadness. How many wonderful people I have heard lamenting the lack of portraits after bereavements.

In October, 1840, my sister was married to Mr. Edmund Wright, the son of the revered man of that name who came forward after my father's death, and became my mother's bondsman; he knew nothing of our business at that time; he only knew we were honest and desired nothing but justice. He trusted us! These words are full of import. Trust arouses hope to action, stimulates the mind, and induces trust in God. She did not leave her home; her mother and sister were still as dear to her as ever; we were not displaced in her heart; it had widened to receive another guest. We had gained a son and a brother. Her love nature enlarged and beautified all her relations. Her companion was one fitted to appreciate these relations. His own unselfish devotion to his mother and family rendered my sister's position clear to him. Her marriage did not entirely undo the tie that united us professionally, but it was loosened and loosening; she was still near at hand; I could still consult with her; her interest was kept alive in looking after, and prescribing for the poor and afflicted. But he—a son to my mother, a brother to me—his relation has been so beautifully sustained that my loss has been gain. I deeply felt her marriage in a professional way. Her ready perception, her firm faith in the integrity of the constitution, and its power to sustain severe illness; her cheerful and inspiring voice which acted upon the sick like a charm; her discipline from her own protracted sickness; her faith, which gave faith to the invalid; all this gave her great power as a physician. Many persons in this community will attest this view of her medical life. . . .

Fears and anxieties as well as pleasures attend all new relations, even when they are entered on reverently and with courage. My mother seemed invested with renewed sacredness, and childhood became stronger in my heart. I had not lost a sister, but gained a brother; but yet there was a discipline to pass through. Who that has had an only sister married but can understand my feelings? My life had now assumed more distinctness, more identity. I knew I must now, in a great measure, act alone. There was a widowed feeling about me, which passed away somewhat in time, but it has never wholly left me. The word 'we' spoken professionally, sometimes escapes me now. My sister took the head of the family. If she had left our home at her marriage, my medical life would have been very sad; but she was still under the same roof with me, and was near in all emergencies. I relinquished traveling, as a general thing, and quietly sat myself down to my home practice.

Mr. Henry C. Pratt, at this period, painted my sister and myself on one canvas, arm in arm, as we were wont to be in days of youth. Our family-pictured walls have often gladdened me on returning from a journey.

The seventy-second year of mother's life found her in the kitchen, superintending and taking part in Thanksgiving preparations. She performed this labor with peculiar zest, because she not only provided for the social enjoyment of her own family and friends, but gladdened many other homes.

After my sister's marriage, mother was thrown more into society, but her parlor hours were always of her own choice, as she had a private sitting-room, a comfort so necessary to the aged, to which she often loved to retire."

Miss Hunt was instrumental in forming the Charlestown Ladies' Physiological Society, of which she thus writes:

"The Circle first met, April 25th, 1843, at the house of Mrs. Curtis, in Charlestown. At the anniversary of the formation of the society in the following year, I find, by referring to the record book of the society, that our numbers had increased from less than a dozen, to fifty. In 1846, a regular constitution and code of by-laws were adopted by the society. The lectures continued semi-monthly as before. The following notice appeared in one of the daily papers. 'The first meeting of the Ladies' Physiological Circle, in this town, for the present season, was held yesterday afternoon, at Mrs. Charles Forster's, in Somerville. The ladies listened to an address, suitable to the occasion and the season, from Miss Hunt, of Boston, and spent the rest of the afternoon and evening in plying the busy needle, in conversation and various recreations—all designed to promote the physical and mental objects of the Circle. The fine location of Mr. Forster's residence and the rich and varied scenery which surrounds it, together with one of the most extended prospects in the vicinity of the metropolis, rendered it a most delightful place for the meeting and afforded an endless variety to engage and interest the mind. In the evening, several gentlemen joined the party, and united in the "festivities of the occasion," which they voted should be, not annual, but perennial. We have long entertained the opinion that sociability, cheerfulness, and innocent recreations, were important and the most attractive adjuncts to physiology, and we shall never doubt the correctness of that opinion hereafter.' "

BOSTON, Dec. 12, 1847.

Dr. O. W. Holmes :

The object I have in view in thus addressing you is to ask leave to attend medical lectures at the Massachusetts Medical College, knowing, as Dean of that faculty, that you will place this request where it belongs, to be sanctioned. To strengthen this desire on my part, and to place you where my motives may be understood, I will state the following facts: In July, 1835, I commenced the practice of medicine in a very quiet, unpretending manner, having been preparing myself, for some previous time, for a path in life to which my inclinations strongly led me. Gradually and steadily, with many anxieties and obstacles, did my practice assume a respectability, which has ever been maintained on my part by discountenancing every immorality, and thus, as year after year has passed away, proving to my mind the use which I was performing in my path, by its success. And now, at the age of forty-two, with an extensive practice among children and my own sex, ranking among my friends as patients the intelligent and thoughtful, being called upon, as you well know, on the most momentous occasions, and fully impressed with the responsibilities thus induced, I seek for that scientific light, which shall not only place my mind in more harmony with my professional duties, but enable me to become more worthy of the trusts committed to me. By a recent letter from a friend in New York, one lady is at present attending medical lectures at Geneva Medical College.*

With such motives as these before me, strengthened by twelve years' practice and observation, and at that mature age when the duties of life are more clearly seen than at any other period, I leave this subject to be met by minds who will see in its examination that no love of novelty, nor bravery in an untried position, nor want of patronage prompt this request, but a simple and single desire for such medical knowledge as may be transmitted through those professors, who, from year to year, stand as beacon lights to those who would be aided in a more full knowledge of the healing art.

Yours respectfully,

HARRIOT-K. HUNT.

The reply to her application was as follows:

BOSTON, January 5, 1848.

"I received the following communication from the President of the University a few days since, and must apologize for a little delay in transmitting it:

'At a stated meeting of the President and Fellows of Harvard College, in Boston, Dec. 27, 1847, the President submitted to the board a letter from Dr. Holmes, transmitting an application from Miss Harriot-Kezia Hunt, to be permitted to attend the lectures at the Medical College. Whereupon it was voted, that it is inexpedient to reconsider the vote of the corporation, of the 14th of August, relative to a similar request.'"

A true copy of record.—Attest,

JAMES WALKER, Sec.

In Feb. 1849, Miss Hunt gave a course of lectures on Physiology in Pitt Street Chapel, and in May commenced a second course in Rev. Mr. Cruft's church, but after the third lecture was obliged to give them up on account of illness. After her recovery she spent the summer and fall in visiting various places, to regain her accustomed strength. In 1850, she gave a course of lectures in the town-hall at Gloucester, and also attended the Woman's Rights' Convention at the same place.

In November, 1850, she wrote another letter to the Medical Faculty of Harvard University on the same subject, and received permission to attend the lectures, with directions how to obtain the tickets. Some little delay in applying for the same gave rise to some unfounded rumors which the following communications, cut from the Evening Transcript, July 5, 1851, will explain:

* The Boston Medical and Surgical Journal thus speaks of this case: "Miss Blackwell made her appearance in the lecture room about two weeks ago. She is a pretty little specimen of the feminine gender—registering her age at twenty-six, and her tutor as Professor Dickson, of South Carolina, now Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine, in the New York University. She comes into the class with great composure, takes off her bonnet and puts it under the seat (exposing a fine phrenology), takes notes constantly, and maintains throughout an unchanged countenance. The effect on the class has been good, and great decorum is preserved while she is present. She wrote a capital letter when she applied for admission, and brings recommendations from eminent physicians in Philadelphia."

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—OPPOSITION TO A FEMALE PUPIL.

As a misunderstanding exists in the community in regard to the circumstances of Miss Harriot-K. Hunt's application for admission to the medical lectures of this institution, and the causes of her delay in availing herself of the permission granted her by the professors, many of her friends are anxious that a true statement should be made to the public, by some one well acquainted with the circumstances.

Miss Hunt applied for admission some years since and was refused on the ground that it "is inexpedient." She applied again this autumn, by a very able letter, in which she considered the broad subject of the necessity of a good medical education for woman. The subject was considered by the directors of the institution, who voted that she should be admitted to attend the lectures on the same terms as other students, provided it did not conflict with the statutes of the college. It being found that the statutes afforded no obstacle, the dean of the faculty sent to her a copy of the vote passed, together with directions for obtaining a ticket, etc. This note found her confined to her room with a severe illness, from which she is not yet entirely recovered, and which of course prevented her immediate attendance at the college. In the mean time the gentlemen students were very much excited by the act of their teachers, and sent in a protest, signed by a large number, against it.

After an interview with some of the leading members of the faculty, who have treated her with great candor and politeness, Miss Hunt, entirely out of courtesy to them, in consideration of the state of disaffection and insubordination in the present class, decided to postpone her attendance on the lectures until the commencement of another term. Satisfied by this just recognition of her rights, she is anxious to exercise them in a spirit of reconciliation, and with a sincere regard for the interests of that profession to which she has devoted her life.

This article brought out the resolutions of the students, which she had in vain endeavored to obtain.

THE FEMALE MEDICAL PUPIL.

Mr. Editor: As an article, in some respects imaginative, appeared in the Transcript on Wednesday evening, over the signature of "E.D.L.," who professes to be "well informed" respecting the application of a female to the Medical Lectures, and the "insubordination" with which the intelligence was received by the students, allow me to correct any erroneous impression by claiming space for an insertion of the following series of resolutions passed at a meeting of the medical class, with but one dissenting vote, and afterwards respectfully presented to the Faculty of the Medical College.

Whereas, it has been ascertained that permission has been granted to a female to attend the Medical Lectures of the present winter, therefore

Resolved, That we deem it proper both to testify our disapprobation of said measure, and to take such action thereon as may be necessary to preserve the dignity of the school, and our own self-respect.

Resolved, That no woman of true delicacy would be willing, in the presence of men, to listen to the discussion of the subjects that necessarily come under the consideration of the student of medicine.

Resolved, That we object to having the company of any female forced upon us, who is disposed to unsex herself, and to sacrifice her modesty, by appearing with men in the medical lecture room.

Resolved, That we are not opposed to allowing woman her rights, but do protest against her appearing in places where her presence is calculated to destroy our respect for the modesty and delicacy of her sex.

Resolved, That the medical professors be, and hereby are, respectfully entreated to do away forthwith an innovation expressly at variance with the spirit of the introductory lecture, with our own feelings, and detrimental to the prosperity, if not to the very existence of the school.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the Medical Faculty.

SCALPEL.

In Jan. 1853, she received the honorary degree of M.D., from the Female Medical College of Philadelphia.

In May, 1853, as the convention for the alteration of the Constitution of Massachusetts was sitting in Boston, she sent in a petition to "secure to females equal educational rights with males, and especially make provision for a People's College, at which females may be as completely educated as males," and "to insert into the Constitution of Massachusetts a clause securing to women paying Town, County, and State taxes upon property held in their own right, and who have no husband, or other guardians to represent or act for them, the same right of voting possessed by male tax-paying citizens; or should your honorable body not deem such women capable of exercising the right of suffrage with due discretion, at least to excuse them from the payment of taxes, in the appropriation of which they are not allowed any voice, thus carrying out the great principle upon which the American Revolution was based, that taxation and representation ought to go together."

In 1852, she paid her taxes under protest, also for the three succeeding years; copies of these protests are to be found on pages 294, 339, and 369, of her "Glances and Glimpses," published in 1856.

"Miss Harriot-K. Hunt, M.D., died in Boston recently, having practiced medicine for forty years. For twenty-one years she gave to the tax collector, with her tax, a written protest against taxation without representation, but last year paid her tax without the customary document," considering, as she stated to the compiler of this work, that by twenty-one years of protest she had gained her freedom.

4355. SARAH-AUGUSTA', [4353] (Kezia^o (Wentworth) Hunt, Susanna^b (Winslow) Wentworth, *Josiah*⁴, *Josiah*³, *Kenelm*², *Kenelm*¹,) b. 25 Dec. 1808, Boston, Mass.; d. 8 July, 1867. in B.; married there, 1 Oct. 1840, Edmund WRIGHT, s. of Edmund, of B. He died 24 Apr. 1874, aged 79. "The end of that man is peace." Her life before marriage was so closely connected with that of her sister that it is not necessary to repeat what has been already given in the biography of Harriot-Kezia' Hunt, M.D. [4354]; we will therefore content ourselves with the following extracts from Glances and Glimpses, concerning her children:

"A reverent silence overshadowed us as we looked on this angelic little girl; she opened her eyes, and our vision of love was satisfied. I have never seen such baby beauty. This child was spiritualized to me from her birth. The names of my sister and myself were united, and bestowed on her, a symbol of our united love for her: she was named Harriot-Augusta. When this child was near, this Sunbeam, as I termed her, I felt a tenderness not to be expressed. She pleaded with me for all babyhood; her looks gave me the conviction that too much care cannot be taken of such germs. The grandmother and grandchild, so constantly together, were regarded then as a sweet picture, and remembered even by strangers. My mother's untiring solicitude gave me a faint idea of what a tender care had been lavished on my own babyhood. Soon a little boy was added to the group; a grandson, a nephew; new words for us: and, as the name of Wentworth was his middle name, and he was to bear the name of his father, who was an only son, both grandmothers were gratified. It was delightful for them to have this additional bond of union. . . . The parents of these children of ours thought it best they should be in the country during the summers, particularly little Sunbeam: Mr. Wright purchased a house out of town, and there my sister formed for herself a country home, which, after the removal of our mother to the spirit land, became permanent Another child named Theodore was born in the country home, and the family began to seem large. . . . Those children, I mean the boys, promised well, but we always had a foreshadowing fear for little Sunbeam. She looked so much like my father; so sweetly reflected his peculiar smile; her perceptions were so clear and quick, and her precocity was so remarkable, that my misgivings deepened. How much I enjoyed with that dear child is for thought, not expression; but, for it all, I thank the glorious Giver, 'who doeth all things well.' Her witching manner and touching pathos in her attempts at utterance startled me. My love was running into idolatry.

"Years fled, that little one was dear as life to me,
And woke in my unconscious heart, a wild idolatry.
I worshipped at an earthly shrine,
Lured by some magic spell,
Forgetful of the praise of Him
Who doeth all things well."

. . . . I ever felt her spiritual power, and her baby presence sanctified thought. She had no physical resistance, and, when sickness laid its hand upon her, she yielded,—the aspiring spirit would be free. She had lived many years in less than three: she had fulfilled her earthly mission by teaching hearts a deeper love, and leading them upward to love divine. . . . My little Sunbeam had lived for us all—she still lives, her spirit hovers o'er her home, and sweetly ministers to the loved ones there—boy after boy had widened the home circle of my sister—the quartette was here. Then came a daughter, a bright healthy babe—a sort of inspiration rested upon her; she never was, nor ever can be an only daughter—she became my sunlight—reflecting not only her own but her sister's brightness—the two now one were mystically blended. Who has not felt in a similar case that a double child, two in one was given? What I have said about the sunbeam that was eclipsed to our earthly vision, conveys my feelings about the sunlight that now gladdens her home, shedding her feminine influence around her brothers. Sweet child, God's last, best gift, the first and last of the family daughters, they encircle the band of brothers, and heaven and earth are united."

Arriving near the Mississippi, they took many small prizes. With nineteen of his shipmates, he was sent, under Lieut. Tilton, a Virginian, to take four of them to Key West. Through the treachery or drunkenness of the commander, they were taken up near Cedar Keys, where, being becalmed, a small steamer with a company of rebel volunteers captured them on the 3d July, 1861. The regiment to which the company belonged soon went to Richmond, taking their prisoners with them. The lieutenant was pardoned, and, it was reported, entered the rebel service. The rest were kept on very short rations until March, 1862, when they were paroled and sent to Washington. He returned after an imprisonment of seven months and twenty days, not having suffered much in health from his privations, and saying that he had never given up to despondency, and never for a moment been sorry that he enlisted. 4922. HANNAH-GILBERT⁷, married Samuel-Russell Payson, of Belmont. We take the following extract from an article entitled "Mrs. Hannah Gilbert Payson, the liberal friend and benefactress of the Congregational Society in Freetown":

Josiah Winslow [60], at date last named, was also chosen by the town on a committee to confer with the Rev. Samuel Danforth, Rev. John Sparhawk, Rev. Richard Billings, pertaining to ecclesiastical affairs, and William Winslow [37] and Josiah Winslow, were the town's agents for building the first church edifice ever erected in Freetown. Coming down to a later period, Ephraim Winslow, Esq., [4848] a grandson of Capt. Josiah, was appointed by the Massachusetts Legislature, June 23d, 1797, to call together and organize the first Calvinistic Baptist Society in Freetown, then by act of the General Court incorporated; and the honor is all the more marked and conspicuous, from the fact that he was not a member of that incorporation, but was by the Legislature selected for that position, because, in their opinion, he was better qualified for that trust than any one of the thirty-three white male citizens that were. Ephraim Winslow, Esq., was also one of those persons upon whom the present Trinitarian Congregational Society in Assonet chiefly depended for aid and advice for many successive years, whose mantle has now fallen upon his grandson, Dr. Thomas G. Nichols [4913], and whose generous interest is so largely shared by his grand-daughter, Mrs. Hannah G. Payson.

That the public spirit, religious tendency, and generosity of Mrs. Payson are a legitimate inheritance, the old records of Freetown furnish evidence most abundantly to prove, but not a tithe of these circumstances and facts will our space permit us to narrate here, and a few brief notices must therefore suffice.

The very first effort made by the town of Freetown to set up the public worship of God (and of which a record remains) was when Josiah Winslow was chosen on a committee to determine upon building a meeting-house, and Mr. William Way, the first or earliest town minister, in his letter of acceptance of that trust, under date of February 14, 1704, seems to have felt that it was a recommendation to him that Capt. Nathaniel Winslow [76] had consented to treat with him (Mr. Way) in Freetown's behalf; and on the 5th January, 1706, the town being assembled to consider the indictment that had been laid upon them in a corporate capacity for not being provided with a minister according to law, who but Job Winslow [36] was elected by our town to answer this presentment of the Grand Jury. And at the town meeting, held Feb. 2, 1709, when it was finally determined to erect a meeting-house, we find Josiah Winslow to have been the moderator."

Mr. Payson is senior member of the firm of J. C. Howe & Co., of Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Newton, Mass., 18 Feb. 1838, Sarah-Ann Fuller, b. 8 Aug. 1814, Needham, Mass., dau. of Ezra and Mary (Woodcock) of Needham. At a re-union of the pupils of Holliston Academy in 1875, Mr. Winslow made the following remarks:

“When I read the announcement in the papers that there would be a re-union of the past and present pupils of Master Rice, and probably the last one, I felt imperatively called upon to attend. I looked forward to this occasion as a sort of family gathering. Though a mixed company—some of us strangers to each other, and composed of all ages, from childhood to mature manhood—yet, as pupils, we stand upon common ground, and in a great measure are what Master Rice has made us. For it is wonderful how much education has to do in moulding the character of a human being; it does more in some respects to distinguish individuals, communities and nations, than the mere difference there is in mental endowments. As a simple illustration, take the great diversity of language spoken by the human family. Whence is it? They have learned it; it is the result of education and early training, and not because of a difference in the organs of speech. And there are many other distinguishing traits of character we might notice from the same cause. I repeat, then, as pupils, we are in great measure what Master Rice has made us. As one purpose of this gathering is to talk over the past as well as the present, I will say, briefly, I entered the High School in Holliston, in the old Town-hall, about thirty-eight years ago, and was a pupil three terms. I have always looked back upon the time spent there as the happiest period of my life. My fondness for study increased as I advanced. Everything went on pleasantly; Master Rice was one of the best of teachers; he had the faculty to make himself understood, and never was happier, doubtless, or more at home, than in the school-room, demonstrating upon the black-board some problem in mathematics, geometry, or philosophy. That genial, sweet smile he always exhibited I remember distinctly to this day. I have not had the pleasure of meeting him and some of the pupils since I left the school. After so long an absence you may be assured it has been with intense interest I have mingled among you, renewing old acquaintances, and hearing from the absent, both living and dead.”

5051. DAVID-CORBETT', [5030] (Eleazer-Robbins^o, Shadrach^o, James^o, Josiah^o, *Kenelm*², *Kenelm*¹,) was born 9 June, 1819, in the township of Hunter, on the Catskill Mountains. His father, with a view to his health, took up his abode here in this mountain fastness for the purpose of hunting bears and wolves, for the capture of which the State of New York then paid a bounty. His mother was eloquent in her description of this portion of her married life. She was often compelled to pass her nights alone with her young and helpless children—her husband being absent on his trapping expeditions. The howling of wolves around this lonely log house was by no means pleasant music to a woman who was born and educated in the city of Boston.

David spent his boyhood and youth at various occupations, attending the village school for the most part in winter, after the removal of the family to Newton, Mass., when he was seven years of age. At the age of twenty and a half he attended the academy at Hancock, N.H., for six months, where he qualified himself for a teacher, and taught his first school at Peterboro, N.H., during the winter of 1840-41.

As this vocation afforded him leisure for study, he determined to follow it until he could prepare himself for a profession. He accordingly, in the spring of 1841, came to Long Island, where male teachers were employed through the year, which was not then the practice in New Hampshire. He taught school, and, at the same time, studied law in the office of Judge N-B. Morse, then District-Attorney of Kings County, N.Y., and afterwards Judge of the Supreme Court. In due time he passed the examination required by the laws of New York, and was admitted to the bar in Brooklyn, where he still continues to practice. He has held various offices; among others, was assistant assessor under the Internal Revenue Act, when it first went into operation, which position he resigned in a short time. He was appointed register in bankruptcy, for the eastern district of New York, by Chief Justice Chase, when that Act went into operation, which office, and that of United States Commissioner, he now holds, to the general satisfaction of the bar and persons who have business in this court.

He was married in New York City, 25 July, 1841, to Harriet-Adaline Stearns, b. 14 Jan. 1817, Franklin, Mass., dau. of Deacon Edwin and Harriet (Paddock) of Millbury, Worcester Co., Mass. 1877, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In 1843 he attended the Holliston Mass. Academy, having been before this date for six months a pupil with M. S. Rice, son of Master Rice, at Newton. He afterwards fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and then entered Brown University, where he remained 4 years. He was attracted there, in a great measure, by the desire to be with Wayland, President of the University, and whom Mr. Winslow held in high esteem both as a teacher and man. In 1850, Mr. Winslow entered Harvard School, and graduated in due course. He there received a prize of $1000 on Law of Agency. In 1852, he commenced law business with his brother, Winslow, in Brooklyn, N.Y., and has practiced there ever since. He is now of the law firm of Van Hook & Winslow, 24 Wall St., New York City. Mr. Winslow was appointed by the court, assistant attorney for Brooklyn about six months after his admission to the bar, in 1854. He was elected to the office of district attorney in 1859, in Brooklyn, for a term of 3 years, and was also appointed by Gov. Dix to fill a vacancy in the same office, in May, 1861. Mr. Winslow was a member of the committee appointed by Plymouth Church to investigate charges made against the pastor. In 1870, he was nominated by the Democrats as their candidate for the Supreme Court, for the 2d judicial district of New York. He was one of the promoters and directors of the Brooklyn Island Historical Society, in Brooklyn, and was for many years its corresponding secretary. To his efforts is due the organization of the Bay Ridge Athenaeum. He married at Bay Ridge, New York, Elizabeth County, L.L., 27 December, 1854, Susan Maria Bennett, b. 27

5096. MARY-PRATT', [5037] (Eleazer-Robbins^o, Shadrach^s, James^a, Josiah^s, Kenelm^s, *Kenelm*¹.) b. 14 Apr. 1830, Newton Upper Falls, Mass.; was married by Z-A. Mudge, at Newton, 20 Apr. 1848, to David-Jackson STAPLES,* b. 3 May, 1824, Medway, Mass., s. of John and Dorcas (Reed). From The Insurance Monitor we take the following sketch:

In our preparation of a chart of the Staples family we have been troubled by discrepancies in both names and dates. The records given by Mr. Savage in his Genealogical Dictionary are not altogether correct, and it appears that there must have been some confounding of names, as he mentions besides the first Abraham, found on Chart XXIII, Abraham of Dorchester in 1658, who removed to Weymouth, Massachusetts, in 1660, thence to Mendon; was freeman in 1673; by wife Hannah had Ephraim, b. 2 Sept. 1678, and Mary, b. 8 Feb. 1681; by wife Mary had Benjamin, b. 27 Dec. 1682, and Hannah, b. 13 May, 1686; but by third wife Mehetable, perhaps, he had Mehetable, b. 19 Dec. 1689, died soon, Mehetable, b. 20 May, 1692, Isaac, b. 10 June, 1699, Abraham, b. 12 Apr. 1702,

"In his youth and early manhood he enjoyed the benefits of life in the old Bay State, where, in an expressive sense, the principles of truth and high toned integrity are inculcated, as indispensable to good citizenship and honorable success.

Mr. Staples, who is so much respected by all who know him, owes, in a large measure, his success to that early training which a youth may get from the Common Schools of Massachusetts, and from a residence among the good people of that noble State.

Until his early manhood, Mr. Staples' time was occupied in studies at school, and in manufacturing and mechanical pursuits in Massachusetts. When the gold discoveries were made in California, the subject of this sketch was connected with the National Armory at Springfield, whence he joined a party of relatives and friends, in the summer of 1849, who proposed to go to California overland, from Newton, Mass. There are many who will bear witness that to go to California overland at that early day, was no holiday affair. To undertake such a journey without any of the appliances of modern travel required such pluck and vigorous determination as are not likely to be called into requisition in our day of luxurious sleeping cars, and all the comforts of railroad travel.

Having arrived in California, Mr. Staples cast his lot with the fortunes of that imperial State, and determined to abide with her to the end. For several years he was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits upon a large scale, at a place near Stockton named in his honor and known as 'Staple's' Ranche.' At this place he was postmaster twelve years. He also held for several years the office of Port Warden in San Francisco, and was Vice President of the society of California Pioneers, and Acting President for two years, and Vice President of the State Agricultural Society; was a delegate from California to the first National Convention, which nominated A. Lincoln for President.

When the Firemen's Fund Insurance Co., of San Francisco, was organized, in July, 1863, Mr. Staples was elected Vice President, and displayed such thorough knowledge of the business that he soon became the President of that prosperous company.

This company, which has a capital of $500,000 in gold and a surplus of over $200,000, takes rank, under Mr. Staples' management, with the best and most reliable insurance companies in the United States. It is represented in the city of New York by Messrs. Skeels, Bowers & Boughton, who are its General Agents. Mr. Skeels held, for several years, a leading position in the Insurance Department of the State of New York, with Mr. Barnes, and is familiar with insurance business as administered in the Empire State. Mr. Bowers was formerly Secretary of the Norwich Fire Insurance Company, where he made an excellent record, and Mr. Boughton, and Abraham, b. 3 Apr. 1706. He suggests that the husband of the third wife may have been a son of Abraham who married Mary Randall, although he does not mention that he had a son of that name. Rev. C-A. Staples informs us that he had a son Abraham, b. 14 June, 1663, who married Mehetable —, and had Mehetable, Mary, and Abraham. There is some agreement as to names and dates, which renders it possible that the surmise of Mr. Savage may have been correct. It is also worthy of notice that the date of the removal of Abraham of Dorchester and Weymouth to Mendon must have been after 1660, and might have been 1663; also that the year of birth of his son Ephraim is the same as that of Ephraim, son of Abraham who removed to Mendon at the date just mentioned.

who is a brother-in-law of Mr. Skeels, has good business capacity and experience. These gentlemen, who are well and favorably known in the insurance circles, are giving their best efforts to promote the interests of the company they represent, and, we are pleased to know, with creditable success.

The company has agents in nearly all the principal cities of the country, who transact business under the direction of the general agents. But those who know Mr. Staples' thorough methods of business, need not be told that every department of his company's large business is constantly under his watchful eye, and that every one of its officers and servants are held to an honest and proper discharge of duty.

This company is also largely engaged in marine insurance in San Francisco and other cities. It is represented in the city of New York, by Messrs. Lawson & Walker, who are well and extensively known as accomplished adjusters, and who are well versed, by long experience in the business of marine insurance.

It will readily be inferred that the business of the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company of San Francisco is not only large, but is rapidly increasing. It is safe to say that no insurance company has laid more solid foundations for genuine success, and none has more gratifying prospects of achieving that success. It is distinguished for prompt and honorable dealings with its patrons.

While no one would be more just, and even generous, in adjusting losses than the honored president of this company, we cannot say, from our knowledge of his character that we could advise any one, disposed to push a fraudulent claim, to try their fortune with Mr. Staples. Possessed of a mind well stored with general information, and especially with what relates to the great business of his life, Mr. Staples is distinguished for his love of fair business dealing and unwavering integrity. While he accords to all the right to such dealing from himself, he sturdily requires the same conduct from others. He is a man of large heart, great intelligence, and of iron will.

Mr. Staples is now about forty-eight years of age, with good physical vigor, fine presence, sound mind, and in the enjoyment of the confidence of a large and influential circle of business and personal friends. Had he sought the honors and allurements of political life, the way was open to him in his beloved California of which he is so justly proud, but he has wisely chosen a pursuit which thus far he has greatly honored. The company over which he presides is a satisfactory monument of his skill, wisdom, and fitness for the great work to which he is giving the best efforts of his life." 1877, San Francisco, Cal.

He married 2d, 23 May, 1844, Houndsfield, N.Y., Sarah Bates, of H., of which she was a native, d. of Merrick-M. and Abigail (Stowell). He was assessor for the town of Watertown for several years; supervisor of the town three years; a member of the State Legislature in 1849; president of the Jefferson county Agricultural Society in 1853; held the office of excise commissioner for ten years; was again elected supervisor of the town of Watertown in 1869. In 1871, was Vice-President of the Agricultural Insurance Co., a member of the executive committee of said company, and a member of the board of directors of the Watertown Fire Insurance Co.

We make the following extracts from public notices which appeared at the time of Mr. Winslow's death:

With startling suddenness we are called upon to record the melancholy event of the demise of the Hon. John Winslow of this city, who departed this life at his residence on Clinton Street, yesterday noon, July 7th, after a brief illness of four days, of congestion, at the age of 71 years and six months.

Mr. Winslow was a citizen of inestimable moral worth, who ranked foremost among those always counted on the right side of every good word and work—a gentleman he was of true nobility of nature, and an honest man.

He was born at Woodstock, Vt., December 19, 1802, and came with his father to this county at the age of five years, when the family settled on a wilderness farm about three miles from the present city, where the deceased also continued to reside till about four years ago, when he removed into the city. He was many times honored with, and discharged with great credit, the responsible duties of assessor and supervisor of the town and village of Watertown, and in 1850 represented this Assembly district in the Legislature, in which capacity he served his constituents with singular assiduity, fidelity, and ability.

A farmer by occupation, a member of the laboring class, he illustrated as few men have, the important fact that in that vocation men may become as well-informed on public questions, as conversant with abstruse subjects, as men following the learned professions. His high position in the farming interest was honored by election to the presidency of the Jefferson County Agricultural Society, and, as a discerning business man, by his continuous directorship and vice-presidency of the Agricultural Insurance Company, and a directorship in the Watertown Fire Insurance Company, both of which companies owe much of their success and prosperity to his prudential skill and minute attention to details.

The deceased has been twice married, and leaves a widow and six children, three sons and three daughters, to mourn his sudden death.

The young man starting in life, depending upon his own industry and resources, will find much to emulate and much to encourage him in the life of John Winslow. It enforces the precept that honesty is not only the best but the only policy that ensures success.

He was a warm personal friend; and there are many who will mourn his death and look in vain for one to fill the void. In the family circle he was a model. Ever careful, ever ready with advice and assistance, with affectionate admonition, and loving words of encouragement. He will be remembered as the just man, the prudent counsellor, the kind friend, and the tender husband and father.

unteered as a private soldier and was elected 1st Lieut. in a company raised in Watertown; went to Elmira, N. Y., where the company was incorporated into the 35th regiment N. Y. Vols. On the organization of the regiment he was promoted to be captain of the same company. About the first of July, the same year, with the 35th Regt., he was mustered into the military service of the United States; in August following was elected and commissioned Lieut. Colonel of said regiment. He served for the period of one year and eight months in the army of the Potomac, and participated in the following battles, viz.: Rappahannock Station, Sulphur Springs and second Bull Run. In December, 1862, on account of impaired health he was mustered out and honorably discharged from the military service. In September, 1864, his health having been partially restored, he was commissioned Colonel of the 186th Regt. of N. Y. Vols., and assigned to duty in command of his regiment in the Second Brigade, Fifth Division of the Ninth Army Corps. He continued on duty with his regiment until the second of April following, on which day he was badly wounded in an assault upon the enemy's works before Petersburg. His wound disabled him for further duty with the army. For "gallant conduct in the assault before Petersburg," he was promoted to be Brigadier-General by brevet, and commissioned as such. The war terminating in July, 1865, he was honorably discharged from the military service. Returning to the practice of his profession, he was again elected district attorney for Jefferson county, and served in that capacity three years, until the expiration of his term of office.

He married at Hubbardton, 1 May, 1809, Beulah Dana, b. 11 Feb. 1785, Newton, Mass., d. of Rev. Nathan and Beulah (Winchester) of Leicester, Mass., and Pittsford, Vt. She died 8 Apr. 1858, aged 73, Pittsford. He studied medicine with Dr. Joseph Winslow [5451] and Dr. Trask, of Windsor, Vt.; moved to Hubbardton, remaining there about two years, and, soon after his marriage, settled in Pittsford, Vt., where he soon secured quite an extensive practice, and where he resided till his death. He was the fourth physician who located in the town. In 1814, he volunteered as surgeon of Capt. Hendees' Co., consisting of 110 men, at the battle of Plattsburg. His first purchase of real estate in Pittsford, included the Elijah Avery place, the same now owned by S-D. Winslow, Esq. [5487]. Mr. Avery bought the land of Alexander Ewings, and built the house in 1798. After his death his heirs sold the place to Dr. Winslow, the deed being dated 23 Aug. 1822. The doctor enlarged and repaired the house, bought additional land, and did quite an extensive business at farming. In May, 1832, Dr. Kenelm Winslow and Mr. Hitchcock opened a store in a building a few feet south of Dr. Winslow's house. The following year Mr. Hitchcock withdrew from the firm, and Dr. W. continued the mercantile business till 1839, when his son Samuel-Dana, succeeded him. He was a man of correct habits, sound judgment, and exerted a healthful moral influence in the town.—History of Pittsford.

 5784. 4. DR. JOSIAH GILBERT^o, born in Belchertown, Mass., July 24, 1819, graduated as M.D. at Berkshire Medical College, in 1844. Having practised medicine for three years, and afterwards edited a literary journal for a few months in Springfield, Mass., he passed a year in Vicksburg, Miss., as superintendent of public schools. In May, 1849, he became associate editor of the Springfield Republican, and two years afterward one of the proprietors of that journal, in which connection he remained till 1866. Since 1870 he has been the conductor of Scribner's Monthly in New York. He has for many years been a public lecturer on social and literary topics, and has written many books, those of a didactic character under the nom de plume of "Timothy Titcomb." This series includes "Letters to the Young" (New York, 1858), "Gold Foil" (1859), "Lessons in Life" (1861), and "Letters to the Joneses" (1863). His other publications are "History of Western Massachusetts" (2 vols., Springfield, 1855), "The Bay Path," a novel (New York, 1857), "Bitter-Sweet," a poem in dramatic form (1858), "Miss Gilbert's Career," an American story (1860), "Plain Talks on Familiar Subjects" (1865), "Life of Abraham Lincoln" (Springfield, 1865), "Kathrina," a poem (New York, 1868), "The Marble Prophecy and other Poems" (1872), and "Arthur Bonnicastle," a novel (1873). In 1873 a complete edition of his poems was published in New York under the title of “Garnered Sheaves.” Then followed “The Mistress of the Manse,” a poem (New York, 1874), “Sevenoaks” (New York, 1875), “Every-Day Topics” (1876). At this present writing (1877) a novel, “Nicholas Minturn,” is being published as a serial in Scribner's Monthly, of which he is still the editor.

The following poem, entitled “Daniel Gray,” published originally in the Atlantic Monthly, is understood to be a sketch of the author's father, Harrison Holland :

If I shall ever win the home in heaven
For whose sweet rest I humbly hope and pray,
In the great company of the forgiven
I shall be sure to find old Daniel Gray.

I knew him well ; in truth, few knew him better ;
For my young eyes oft read for him the Word,
And saw how meekly from the crystal letter
He drank the life of his beloved Lord.

Old Daniel Gray was not a man who lifted
On ready words his freight of gratitude,
Nor was he called among the gifted,
In the prayer-meetings of his neighborhood.

He had a few old-fashioned words and phrases,
Linked in with sacred texts and Sunday rhymes ;
And I suppose that in his prayers and graces,
I've heard them all at least a thousand times.

I see him now—his form, his face, his motions,
His homespun habit, and his silver hair,—
And hear the language of his trite devotions,
Rising behind the straight-backed kitchen chair.

I can remember how the sentence sounded—
“Help us, O Lord, to pray and not to faint !”
And how the “conquering-and-to-conquer” rounded
The loftier aspirations of the saint.

He had some notions that did not improve him,
He never kissed his children—so they say ;
And finest scenes and fairest flowers would move him
Less than a horse-shoe picked up in the way.

He had a hearty hatred of oppression,
And righteous words for sin of every kind ;
Alas, that the transgressor and transgression
Were linked so closely in his honest mind !

He could see nought but vanity in beauty,
And naught but weakness in a fond caress.
And pitied men whose views of Christian duty
Allowed indulgence in such foolishness.

Yet there were love and tenderness within him ;
And I am told that when his Charley died,
Nor nature's need nor gentle words could win him
From his fond vigils at the sleeper's side.

They found fresh dew-drops sprinkled in his hair,
And on his breast a rose-bud gathered early,
And guessed, but did not know who placed it there.

Honest and faithful, constant in his calling,
Strictly attendant on the means of grace,
Instant in prayer, and fearful most of falling,
Old Daniel Gray was always in his place.

A practical old man, and yet a dreamer,
He thought that in some strange, unlooked-for way
His mighty Friend in Heaven, the great Redeemer,
Would honor him with wealth some golden day.

This dream he carried in a hopeful spirit
Until in death his patient eye grew dim,
And his Redeemer called him to inherit
The heaven of wealth long garnered up for him.

So, if I ever win the home in heaven
For whose sweet rest I humbly hope and pray,
In the great company of the forgiven
I shall be sure to find old Daniel Gray.

DR. HOLTON'S GENEALOGICAL STUDIO,

Removed 1 May, 1877 to 61 East 59th st., near the Fifth av. entrance to Central Park, New York, midway between Park and Madison Avenues.

By this removal the studio becomes very accessible, as citizens and visitors in the Metropolis make the Central Park a place of frequent resort; and those interested in our genealogical researches, charts, and other publications, can doubtless give us a passing call at 61 East 59th street more conveniently than at any other point in New York City.

We are but a few doors from the line of the MADISON AVENUE cars running through the central portion of the city.

On 59th street, in front of our door, pass the cars of the "BELT RAILROAD," from all the ferry and other steamboat landings on the Hudson and East rivers, south of 59th street.

The cars of the Second, Third, Fourth, and Eighth Avenues, cross 59th street; those of University Place, of the Sixth, Seventh, and Ninth Avenues, and of the Elevated Railroad, terminate at 59th street.

The cars of East and West 59th street, pass our door.

Those interested in our works, on reaching their respective landings and depots in this city, may find it convenient directly to call at the studio, 61 East 59th street, thus honoring the memory of their ancestors, leaving trifles of the present for subsequent consideration.

[It is possible, the subscriber's experience of forty-three years in New York, may be advantageously consulted by the stranger for hizer (his or her) present seekings in various honorable ways.]

Regular sessions of the Pilgrim Record Society, will be held at 61 East 59th street, afternoon and evening of the second Tuesday of each month, which all interested are invited to attend, bringing more or less family records.

N. B. The Bulletin and other publications of the Pilgrim Record Society, including VOL. I. of the "KENELM WINSLOW MEMORIAL," may be obtained at 61 East 59th street, where the second volume of the series will soon be issued.
